'VILIFICATION CAMPAIGN' LAID TO BRITAIN BY BORAH; POINCARE MOVES TO PROTECT AMERICAN TOURISTS

SIGHTSEEING CARS BARRED BY POLICE TO PREVENT RIOTS

When Americans Go On Streets in Autos They Are To Be Followed By Special Officers.

POINCARE CABINET PROGRAM IS READY

Ratification of Allied Debt Agreements Probably Will Be Sidetracked Temporarily, At Least.

BY RALPH HEINZEN.

Paris, July 24.—Anti-American feeling has become so pronounced in Paris this week-end that the new government, harassed with economic and political difficulties, has been forced to turn its attention to measures to protect tourists from the animosity of the French people.

An extraordinary situation, considering the warm words of cordial friendship which always are exchanged when officials of the two nations get together, exists in the French capital.

Sightseeing automobiles, in which American visitors to Paris have been accustomed to tour the city, no longer are permitted on the streets. The danger to their occupants, if those occupants are Americans, has become too great.

Premier Poincare's hold upon his post as head of the government is precarious enough as it is. Yet today he had to turn aside from his other cares, call in M. Morin, prefect of police in the capital, and order measures to protect the lives of Americans.

Americans Guarded.

When the latter go about the streets in automobiles, they are to be followed by police on bicycles. The stations are to be guarded, so that arrivals from the United States may enter Paris without molestation. This is the situation nine years after the arrival of the first of the A. E. F.

If these measures prove ineffective, Premier Poincare told M. Morin it might be necessary to suppress all automobile riding by Americans.

Extra guards have been placed around the American embassy, although this was done as an additional precautionary measure in connection with the Sacco and Vanzetti case—that of the two communists who are under sentence of death in Massachusetts.

The French cabinet today heard Premier Poincare's expose of the financial situation and registered accord with the principles of his program for restoration of financial stability. The projects of the new government will be submitted to the chamber of deputies next Tuesday, simultaneously with the customary ministerial declaration.

POINCARE'S CABINET AGREES ON PROGRAM.

Paris, July 24.—(AP)—M. Poincare's new cabinet has agreed on the principles of a financial rehabilitation program which will be submitted for parliament's approbation.

An official communique issued after the first meeting of the 13 members of the ex-president's "ministry of national union" this afternoon, made this announcement. These principles are understood to include augmentation of indirect taxation and a slight increase in the direct levy on acquired wealth, in order to follow the plan of "restoration from within" rather than resort to the aid of credits obtained abroad.

Seven members of the 13 cabinet ministers are known either to have taken a stand publicly against ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt

George Declines To Enter Debate On 'Vague Issues'

Senator Says Russell Seeks Discussion of Farm Relief Without Making Own Position Clear.

REPLIES TO JUDGE ON WORLD COURT

Russell Issues Statement Repeating Stand on Two Matters on Which Candidacy Is Based.

United States Senator Walter F. George, candidate for renomination in the Georgia democratic primary, Saturday made public a letter he has written to his opponent, Judge Richard B. Russell, in which he outlines in detail his position on the proposed farm relief bills and on the world court question.

Concerning farm relief measures, Senator George replies to a question asked him by Judge Russell in a recent letter. Senator George said he voted against the Haugen bill and supported the Robinson bill, as did virtually all the democratic senators from the south. He said Judge Russell had never stated definitely that he favored either bill, but had spoken only in vague, meaningless terms of "farm relief."

With reference to the world court, Senator George said he voted for the principles outlined in the democratic platform regarding this question and repeated that he voted virtually as did all senators from the southern states. He pointed out that the democratic party had taken a stand in line with his position, and whimsically implied that Judge Russell's reference to the court were merely a political "bugaboo" of the latter's making for political purposes solely.

Senator George will visit Savannah Monday and counties in that vicinity during the week. He will speak at two meetings in Savannah and also will make short addresses in other towns in that section.

To Visit Many Sections.

Senator George declared that he had not been able to visit many parts of Georgia for a long time and said he would use the time at his disposal for this purpose. He said a joint debate between him and his opponent over the language of the world court would be of little profit to constituents of the candidates.

From headquarters of Judge Russell a statement was issued in which it was stated that Judge Russell's campaign is gaining momentum every day.

Senator George's letter and Judge Russell's statement follow:

"Atlanta, Georgia.
"July 24, 1926.

"Honorable Richard B. Russell,

"Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Judge Russell:

"At my earliest convenience permit me to acknowledge your letter of the fifteenth instant.

THREE ARRESTED FOR KIDNAPING CHARLTON JUDGE

Four Other Men Said To Be Members of Party Surrounded in Swamp Near Folkston.

PERSONAL GRUDGE CAUSE OF ACTION

Judge Henry Johnson Is Rescued After Chase in Which More Than 200 Citizens Take Part.

Folkston, Ga., July 25.—Three men were held in the Charlton county jail early today, and four others, all members of an alleged kidnaping party, which abducted Judge Henry Johnson, of the county court, last night, were surrounded in a swamp near here with their capture reported imminent.

Judge Johnson was drawn to the door of a store last night at 9:30 o'clock on the pretext that a man waiting outside wished to discuss a deal in lumber. He told authorities when they rescued him that he was forced to enter an automobile and that threats against his life were made on a wild ride during which two men sat on him.

Folkston is situated near the eastern portion of the Georgia state line on the fringe of the Okefenokee swamp.

POLICE IDENTIFY 'MYSTERY MAN'

Accused Texas Pastor Abandons Plan To Preach on 'Self-Defense' At Sunday Services.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 24.—(AP)—Identity of the "mystery man" in the case of Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, charged with slaying D. E. Chipps last Saturday, has been learned, District Attorney Hanger announced today. The man, however, had not accompanied Chipps to the church, it was stated and will likely be used as a state's witness.

Declining to reveal the man's name, Hanger explained that the man had kept silent to avoid publicity in the case. The man had gone to the church by himself, had not known Chipps and had no connection with the killing, Hanger said.

After the slaying members of the church said they saw another man at the church with Chipps. He is supposed to have walked up the stairway with him.

No hint of what had become of his announced intention to speak on the "inalienable right of self-defense" was contained in a statement of his program for tomorrow by Rev. Dr. J. Frank Norris, issued at noon today. He declined to explain further.

"The resurrection and the great commission," was announced as the subject of his 10 a. m. talk at Sunday school: "Four steps in salvation," is the subject for church service at 11 a. m. and "The Menace of Roman Catholicism," is his 8 p. m. sermon.

WOMAN GOVERNOR IN SECOND PLACE IN RACE IN TEXAS

With 206 Counties Heard From Attorney General Has Lead of More Than 46,000 Votes.

VOTE OF FERGUSON IS HURT BY RAIN

Harry Wurzbach, Only Republican Congressman in State, Apparently Has Defeated G. O. P.

Dallas, Texas, July 25.—(AP)—A run-off primary in Texas between Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and Dan Moody, attorney general, for the democratic nomination for governor, appears a strong probability early today on the face of returns from yesterday's primary tabulated by the Texas election bureau. When 206 of the 252 counties, with nine complete had been heard from Moody had lost the majority he had held in the returns up to midnight. A majority is necessary for nomination.

Moody maintained a lead of about 46,000 over Mrs. Ferguson, however.

The vote from the 206 counties was: Moody 157,433; Ferguson 110,684; Davidson 49,188; Zimmerman 1,035; Wilmans 639 and Johnston 830.

Returns from 45 counties none complete in the republican primary gave H. H. Haines 2,194 and E. P. Scott 1,826. Haines had the support of National Committeeman R. B. Creager and Scott the support of Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach.

Precincts unheard from included rural districts where Mrs. Ferguson and her husband always have been strong and some of the large city precincts which Moody has claimed would be for him.

Attorney General Dan Moody and Lunch Davidson, Houston lumberman, the leading opponents of the woman governor, both rested their plea to the voters on anti-Ferguson platforms, centering their attacks more on former Governor James E. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson's husband, who they charged has been the real governor of the state.

If none of the candidates poll a majority, the two receiving the highest number of votes will go into a run-off primary next month.

Rains Hurt "Ma."

Governor Ferguson went to Temple with her husband, who did most of her campaigning, and her younger

MAYOR OF CANTON SUSPENDS CHIEF

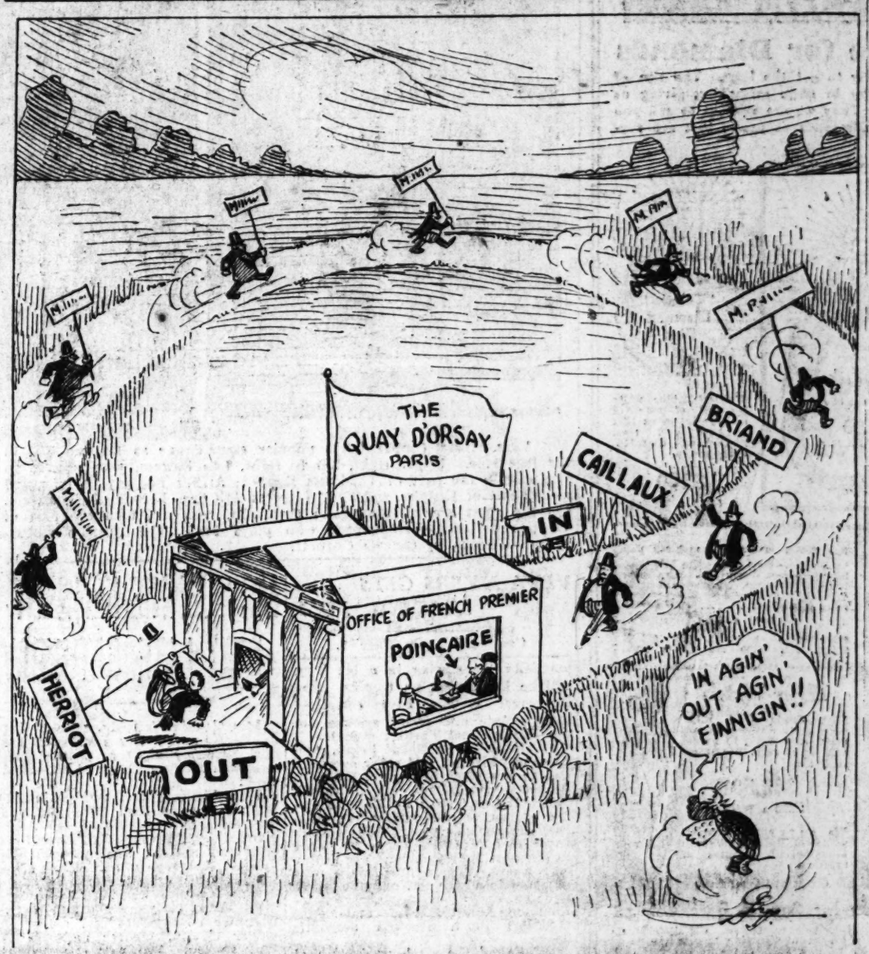

Head of Police Force Accused of Being Lax in Enforcement of Law and Inefficiency.

Canton, July 24.—(AP)—As the unavailing search for the assassins of Don R. Mellett, crusading Canton publisher, slain at the door of his garage July 16, lagged through the ninth day, Mayor S. M. Swartz, dissatisfied with law enforcement in Canton, late today ordered the suspension of S. A. Lengel, chief of police.

Mayor Swartz said he suspended Lengel because the chief was lax in the enforcement of law and rendered his department inefficient because he had no control over his men.

Safety Director Earl Hexamer was appointed acting head of the police department. Lengel's suspension was effective immediately. He will be given a hearing before the civil service commission.

Child Near Death Run Down by Auto In Front of Home

Mildred Evans, Age 2, Is Reported Dying at Grady Hospital After Accident on Bankhead Avenue.

Mildred Evans, 2 years old, is reported by doctors at Grady hospital as dying, following an accident which occurred early Saturday evening, when she and her mother were run down by an automobile in front of their home at 412 Bankhead avenue.

Mrs. Evans was carrying Mildred in her arms across the street when the automobile, driven by W. C. Sailors, of 210 Woodward avenue, struck them down. The accident was said to be unavoidable, and no case was made against Sailors, who reported it to the police himself.

It was at first thought that the child was not seriously hurt and she was sent to her home from the hospital. On the way, however, she developed nausea and by the time the home was reached was in convulsions. Rushed back to Grady hospital, doctors declared that she was suffering from concussion of the brain and possible internal injuries, and held out but slender hope for her recovery.

Mother's Arm Broken.

TO ERECT $150,000 OFFICE BUILDING ON SPRING STREET

Construction of 5-Story Edifice Between James Street and Carnegie To Begin at Once.

Construction of a $150,000 five-story concrete office and store building by the Massell Realty company, to start immediately on an 85 by 75 foot lot on Spring street, between James street and Carnegie way, was the outstanding feature of real estate transactions by the Adair Realty and Trust company announced Saturday, amounting in all to $300,000.

Acting as agents for the Enterprise Realty and Investment company, the Adair company sold their vacant lot on Spring street, valued at $100,000, to the Massell Realty company, who will construct the $150,000 building on it. Payment to the Enterprise Realty company for the Spring street property was made by transfer to them of the property at 419 Whitehall street, which consists of a building leased to the Wilson company, packers, for 10 years at about $9,250 a year, and, until transferred, owned by the Massell Realty company.

This Wilson building was immediately resold by the Enterprise Realty and Investment company to Frank C. Wright, of Gainesville, according to the announcement by the Adair Realty and Trust company, who also acted as agents in this transaction. The consideration in the resale was not made public, though it is understood that the Wilson building was valued at $100,00 in the first transaction.

VERA MYERS GETS LEADING ROLE IN NEXT OPERA

Brilliant Music, Bright Comedy and Georgeous Costumes To Feature "Katinka."

Vera Myers, the little comedienne who has made such an impression in various parts, will have her first really good role of the season in "Katinka," this week's production of the Municipal Opera association at the Atlanta theater. She will play the title role of the Russian girl who weds the old ambassador while loving another, and will occupy the center of the stage through most of the three acts.

"Katinka" promises to be one of the most thoroughly delightful productions of the summer season, with its beautiful music, its bright comedy, and its gorgeous costumes and stage settings. It calls for a large cast of principals and will give individual opportunity to every member of the company.

Lou Powers will return to the cast this week to play a comedy part with which he is familiar, having played it for an entire season. He will be Thaddeus Hopper, a rich American tourist who strays into a Turkish harem. Anne Yago, the contralto, will be Mrs. Hopper, an excellent comedy part with several song numbers.

Musical Features.

Louis Templeman will be Boris, the Russian ambassador, who is married to Katinka in the opening scene, a gorgeous Russian wedding with old-world costumes and lovely music. Arthur Burckley will be Ivan, the sweetheart of Katinka, and Francis Tyler will be Asif Bey, keeper of the harem and guardian of the Turkish beauties. Mary Leila Patterson, the Georgia girl who sang so beautifully in "Robin Hood," will be Olga, with the leading song number, "Allah's Holiday." William and Leslie McLeod will have excellent parts and little Hazel Jones, one of the most attractive girls of the dancing corps, will have a "real part" as Varenka, the maid.

Lew Morton, the stage director, who is responsible for so much of the success of the productions, has worked especially hard to make "Katinka" a big hit. It offers every op-

CHURCHILL SCORED IN FIERCE ATTACK BY SENATOR BORAH

Idaho Statesman Claims That Great Britain Is Attempting To Secure War Debt Cancellation.

DENIES CHARGES U. S. IS SHYLOCK

Senator Asserts That Great Part of Debt of Former Allies Already Cancelled Under Pacts.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, July 24.—Giving voice to an opinion advanced here privately for several days, Senator Borah, of Idaho, charged in a caustic statement today that Winston Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer, is seeking cancellation of Great Britain's war debt to the United States through his interpretation of the nature of that debt and the "campaign of vilification" against this country.

Previously, Borah charged in a private interview that cancellation of war indebtedness is the aim of France, and explains the recent hostility toward Americans in Paris.

"Mr. Churchill, it would seem, is conducting a Gallipoli campaign for cancellation," Borah declared.

"His strategy is exceptional. But there is no doubt about his objective."

Vilification Campaign.

Saying that a recent book had insinuated that Churchill was a military genius, Borah said "it is for this reason, I presume, he adopts military tactics in his political campaign.

"One of the methods of modern warfare is a campaign of vilification against the enemy. Hence, apparently this campaign of criticism against the United States."

The chairman of the senate foreign relations committee issued his statement when he learned that the treasury did not intend to carry further the controversy with Churchill that was begun by Secretary Mellon a few days ago. In it he quoted British leaders who testified that the United States entered the war from a humanitarian motive, and made reference to the acquisition by Great Britain of nearly 4,000,000 square miles of territory, several times more than France, as a result of the Versailles peace conference.

Cancelled Big Part.

Borah said that the United States has cancelled the British debt "to the extent of about 30 cents on the dollar, and gave her 62 years in which to pay."

"Our settlements with Great Britain, Italy, Belgium and the proposed settlement with France, represent a cancellation of $7,000,000,000. The taxpayers of the United States distributed to the taxpayers of these countries $7,000,000,000 at a time when we held their notes."

Borah emphasized the leniency of the debt settlements and the amount of territory, actual material gain, which went to Great Britain, while

SUNDAY MORNING

According to one of Harry Lauder's songs it is a wonderful thing to have your breakfast in your bed on Sunday morning. But we don't advise it for this particular Sunday morning.

No, indeed! We suggest you get out on the front porch with the Sunday Constitution, and after you have given the "once over" to the news of the world, pay careful attention to the advertisements.

The merchants of Atlanta have not gone out of business because the weather is hot, and you are buying things right along—a different line from what you purchased in January, of course, and you will find seasonable offerings in The Constitution advertisements this morning.

Make out your list today in the cool of the morning, and buy the articles tomorrow morning.

portunity for staging in a big way, and he has spared no trouble. The Stagecraft studios have completed three ornate and costly settings for the Russian and Turkish scenes.

"Katinka" is by Rudolf Friml, composer of "Firefly" and other successes and he has given it some of the most beautiful music he ever conceived. "Rackety-Coo," sung by Katinka and the chorus, is one outstanding number, while Olga's song, "Allah's Holiday," and Mrs. Hopper's "I Want to Marry a Male Quartet," are known everywhere. There are fine chorus numbers in every act, and the ballet will be exceptionally elaborate, introducing Leonard White and Lottie Henschel in a Russian acrobatic dance.

"Katinka," the sixth production of the season, will be given every night this week with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. On Thursday morning, seats will go on sale for "Sari," the following week's bill.

MRS. JENNIE KENNEDY DIED LATE SATURDAY

Mrs. Jennie Kennedy, wife of Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, died Saturday night at a local hospital following an illness of one week.

Mrs. Kennedy had resided in Atlanta for more than 30 years, and was an active member of the Associate Reform Presbyterian church on Highland avenue, serving with the Ladies' Aid society and other affiliated church organizations.

Mrs. Kennedy was born in Shelbyville, Tenn., 52 years ago and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Cowan, pioneer residents of that section. She was educated at Columbia College for Women at Columbia, S. C., and female institutes of learning at Nashville, Tenn., and other places.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. S. L. Hurt; one son, J. P. Kennedy, Jr.; one sister, Mrs. O. Foght, Shelbyville, Tenn., and two brothers, H. B. Cowan, of Shelbyville, and W. C. Cowan, of Fayetteville, Tenn.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. H. M. Patterson & Son are in charge.

Three Policemen In Chicago Held For Burglary

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., July 24.—Following the dismissal of seven men, three of them policemen, and all charged with burglary by Judge Henry M. Walker, on a technicality, the Chicago crime commission, through one of its managing directors, Frank Hanna, recommended that the whole matter be placed with State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe for immediate investigation.

The charges involved John Manion, traffic division police officer; Philip Lorenz and Walter Farrell, patrolmen attached to the central station, and four private watchmen, Howard Blair, Alfred Wood, Alden Baughman and Charles Baker. They were alleged to have burglarized business houses in the west side wholesale dry goods district, obtaining goods valued at $1,000 before their arrest June 9.

Arraigned yesterday on these charges, a motion to suppress the evidence was presented on the grounds that police in searching the defendants' homes for stolen property had obtained some articles of clothing, alleged to have been taken, without search warrants.

When this motion had been made Judge Walker asked the prosecutor attached to his court if he could cite any law decisions to counteract the motion, but the attorney could find no legal substantiation for further prosecution.

The court then dismissed the seven men and directed the property, alleged to have been stolen, be returned to them, although a part of it had been identified by merchants from whom it was said to have been taken.

FIRST COTTON BALE SELLS IN SAVANNAH FOR RECORD PRICE

Savannah, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—What is said to be the highest price received for upland cotton since the civil war was realized when the first bale was sold on the Savannah Cotton exchange today at 99 1-2 cents to Anderson Clayton Cotton company. P. D. Daffin, who will celebrate his 85th birthday next month, acted as auctioneer.

The bale was knocked down to T. S. Blundell, of Anderson Clayton & Co., and was shipped immediately to New York by this firm.

J. P. Getzen, of Webster, Fla., sent the first bale to Savannah again this year for the third time. It was consigned to the John W. Gleason Cotton company, as was the case last year and the year before. The bale arrived yesterday morning. It was classed as middling, and weighed 310 pounds.

Scott Confession Will Not Be Used In Court Appeal

Chicago, July 24.—(AP)—The confession of Robert Scott, recently sentenced to life imprisonment, that he and not his brother, who is under sentence to be hanged October 15, fired the shot which killed Joseph Maurer, young drug clerk, came against the advice of their attorney and will not be used in appealing to the state supreme court.

That was the statement today of William Scott Stewart, who defended both brothers in their various court appearances excepting the first of Russell when he was given the first of a series of three death penalties.

The confession followed the forecast of Emmett Byrne and William Mueller, assistant state's attorneys, who prosecuted Robert recently when he pleaded guilty to the slaying and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge William N. Gemmill. In fighting against Robert Scott's cross-examination being limited, the assistant state's attorneys pointed out that should Robert get a sentence of less than death that judgment would be pointed to in a further effort to save Russell's life.

NO PLEA RECEIVED BY MOOSE LEADER TO BAN 18 LODGES

Battle Creek, Mich., July 24.—(AP) James J. Davis, secretary of labor and director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, tonight said he had received no petition from the Council of Churches of Pittsburgh demanding that eighteen Pittsburgh lodges where liquor was found, be ousted from the national organization. Such a plea, he said, would undoubtedly be directed to Thomas Howell, supreme dictator, who lives in South Bend, Ind.

"I do not know much about the Pittsburgh affair," Mr. Davis said. "I do not think it would be fair, however, to cancel the charter of a lodge because a few members were found to have brought liquor into the lodge room."

A. M. E. CONFERENCE ENDS AT CARTERSVILLE

Cartersville, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—The Sunday school, Allen Christian Endeavor league and Christian workers' conventions of the Marietta district, North Georgia conference, A. M. E. church, holding sessions in Saint Luke church, this city, for the past four days with the Rev. R. T. Romans, pastor, will close Sunday night.

Dr. J. A. Collier, presiding elder of the district, expressed himself as having been much gratified at the progress made in this convention by the workers on the "school of methods" or "training for service."

Dean W. G. Alexander, of Turner Theological seminary, addressed the convention on "The Claims of Financial Drive for Christian Education." "The Sunday School Missionary Extension Work" was discussed by Rev. I. Hargrove.

Rev. W. E. Alexander will preach Sunday at St. Luke A. M. E. church at 11 o'clock, Rev. I. Hargrove at 3 o'clock and L. J. Hamilton Sunday night.

Coolidge Captures Seventy Brook Trout

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 24.—(AP)—It was after 7:30 o'clock tonight when President Coolidge returned from a successful fishing expedition. The president and the secret service men who accompanied him brought back 70 brook trout, some weighing 1 1-2 pounds.

Mr. Coolidge went to the same stream on the Rockefeller preserve that he visited a week ago with excellent results. Clambering over rocks and logs, he whipped the stream, until the approach of darkness forced him to abandon the exciting sport and return to White Pine camp.

MILTON COUNTY MAN IS PLACED IN FULTON TOWER

Andy Higgins, 21, was lodged in the Fulton county tower Saturday, having been brought to Atlanta by Milton county officers, following an investigation into the slaying on Wednesday night of Gaston Gravett, a 11-year-old boy.

Three Milton county justices ordered Higgins held for a grand jury probe of the killing.

Young Gravett was shot as he stood in the road in front of a neighbor's house after an ice cream party had broken up and the guests were returning home.

Mid Gravett, uncle of the slain youth, had the warrants for Higgins issued.

CARSWELL TO OPEN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Macon, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—With the opening of headquarters in Atlanta Monday morning at the Kimball House, George Carswell will begin an active campaign in his race for governor, which will continue until the primary, September 8, it is learned here.

Sam Nunn, of Perry, who has undertaken the active management of Mr. Carswell's campaign, will go to Atlanta Monday morning to open and arrange for headquarters. Mr. Nunn announced that C. D. Roundtree, editor of The Wrightsville Headlight, has been named chairman of the publicity committee. Malcolm D. Ainsworth, former newspaperman, will be office manager at the headquarters in Atlanta, Mr. Nunn said.

Monday morning at 11:30 o'clock Mr. Carswell will speak at Dublin. On the same night he will attend a gathering of his friends from all sections of the state to be held at his campaign headquarters in Atlanta.

A Carswell rally is planned for Wednesday night in Irwinton, Mr. Carswell's home, and a Carswell club will be formed. A similar rally will probably be held here Thursday night. Mr. Carswell plans to speak in Tifton next Saturday. While Mr. Nunn plans to direct the campaign from the office he also said that he would visit practically every section of the state and organize Mr. Carswell's supporters.

Mr. Nunn said that enthusiastic reports had been received from all sections of the state that Mr. Carswell's supporters planned to wage an active campaign in his behalf.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

$100 in Cash for the Best Rhymes!

JOIN the White Label Syrup rhyme contest in which everyone is having so much fun—and in which there will be awarded cash prizes for the best rhymes of four lines describing the goodness of White Label Syrup.

1st prize - - $50 3rd prize - - $10
2nd prize - - $25 4th prize - - $5
and 10 prizes of $1 each

All you have to do is buy a can of White Label 100% pure Georgia Cane Syrup at your dealer's. Get acquainted with its wonderful, country-made flavor. Then write up a good rhyme, along the idea of this sample one:

When you've hungered and wished for some pure Georgia Cane
When of "blends" and corn syrups you're weary
Get a can of White Label for hot cakes and biscuits
Wondrous flavor—delicious—most cheery!

Anyone may enter the contest. You may send as many rhymes as you wish. Each rhyme MUST be accompanied by that part of the label from a can of White Label Syrup which says: "Guaranteed to be 100% Pure Georgia Cane," and no rhyme mailed later than July 31st will be accepted.

White Label is sold in pints, quarts, half-gallons and gallons.

Atlantans Give Flagpole, Memorial to Son Slain In War, to Canadian Town

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson Donors of Flagpole Recently Dedicated At North Hatley, Quebec

Following dedication of a steel flagpole, presented by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Atkinson, of Atlanta, as a memorial to their son, Captain Henry Morrell Atkinson, gallant officer of the American expeditionary force, who died in France, November 2, 1918, eagle and lion now keep vigilance together over Memorial park in North Hatley, Quebec, Canada. Stars and Stripes of the United States and the Union Jack of Great Britain float over Canadians as they pay tribute to their sacred dead of the world war.

Presentation ceremonies were held Saturday, July 3, at North Hatley, where Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson have been summer residents for more than 30 years and where Captain Atkinson was known and loved by citizens of the community. Participating in the dedication exercises were officers and men of the Sherbrooke regiment, crack Canadian military organization; the regimental band; ranking military officials of the district and officials and prominent citizens of North Hatley.

The memorial flagpole is situated in the center of a beautiful park, purchased about a year ago by Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson and donated by them as a park memorializing residents of North Hatley and American visitors who died in the world war.

Impressive Dedication.

The inscription at the base of the memorial flagpole reads: "This park and flagpole were given by the parents in loving memory of Captain Henry Morrell Atkinson, who died in the service of his country at Angiers, France, November 2, 1918."

"With the Union Jack flying proudly from the top," The Sherbrooke Record said in its account of the ceremonies, "the steel flagpole erected on Canadian territory in memory of a gallant soldier of the United States, who died for his country while serving in the great war, was dedicated and presented by its donors to the village of North Hatley at an impressive and largely attended service in the Memorial park on Saturday afternoon. On the shore of beautiful Lake Massawippi, near the railway station, the park presents a splendid appearance, with its war memorial, flying the Stars and Stripes at one end and the flagstaff, with its Union Jack, at the other. The ceremony took place in the presence of the father, mother, sister and two young nephews of him whom the new staff commemorates.

"Brigadier General C. J. Armstrong, C. B., C. M. G., was present, and with him were Brigadier General W. M. King, C. M. G., D. S. O., who is to succeed General Armstrong as officer commanding this military district; Lieutenant Colonel K. M. Perry, D. S. O., general staff officer; Major W. Neilson, D. S. O.; Lieutenant Colonel M. W. McA'Nulty, O. C., Sherbrooke regiment, and J. B. LeBaron, mayor of North Hatley."

The guard of honor, consisting of four officers and 30 men of the Sherbrooke regiment, headed the procession as it filed into the Memorial park. Upon arrival at the base of the flagstaff, the guard gave the general salute, after which Mr. Atkinson, General Armstrong and Colonels Perry and McA'Nulty and Major Smith inspected the guard and band.

Prayer of Dedication.

"The short service commenced with the singing of 'Onward, Christian Soldiers,'" The Record said. "Rev. E. K. Wilson, rector of North Hatley, delivered the prayer of dedication and the flag was then broken out by Mrs. Atkinson. Muffled roll of a drum broke the silence respecting the memory of Captain Atkinson and the Last Post, and reveille sounded in turn. After another roll of the drum had died away, 'Abide With Me' was sung."

While Mrs. Atkinson and her daughter, Mrs. Jackson P. Dick, and the latter's two young sons stood by, Mr. Atkinson delivered a short address quoted by The Record as follows:

"There are no words which I could add to the inscription at the base of this flagpole because it is complete. Mrs. Atkinson and I wanted this staff because it is in memory of one who spent nearly every summer of his life here and loved it. He went from here to school, then to study his profession of engineering and then to Plattsburg, where he won his commission in the regular army. His record at school, college, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and in the army was always at the top, both in studies and sports. He played all games, including the game of life, according to the rules, and never made a misplay.

"So this flagstaff and flag are a fitting memorial for him. That is true because the Union Jack, equally with the Stars and Stripes, is the emblem of bravery, honor and manhood, the three qualities inherent in the Anglo-Saxon race and which have made it what it is. It is a personal pleasure to present a Union Jack, the emblem of old England.

Both Stand for Good.

"There is little difference to me between it and our own American flag. Both stand for the good of the world. May this simple gift and program this afternoon help to bind England, Canada and the United States together and may all three in time become one again, at least in spirit, so that those who think alike may act alike, and the two flags blend into one common, glorious future.

"There is no sadness in my words. I have described a perfect life. Of that, in addition to our own knowledge, we have the written testimony of his associates. So may this flagstaff and flag be an inspiration to all, young and old, English, Canadians and Americans. In conclusion, through you, Mr. Mayor, official representative of the people of North Hatley, I present to them this flagstaff and flag. Mrs. Atkinson and I will maintain the gift and renew the flag as long as we live. When we are gone our hope is that someone will carry it on because if for no other reason, it represents, together with the American flag, the hope of the world and everything worth living for."

In his speech of acceptance on behalf of the village, Mayor LeBaron expressed gratitude for the gift and for many previous gifts received from the Atkinson family and spoke of what splendid citizens they had made during their long sojourn in North Hatley.

With the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King," the dedication exercises were brought to a close.

ATLANTA CHOSEN AS HEADQUARTERS BY NITROGEN FIRM

Atlanta has again been chosen as southern headquarters by a company of nation-wide business interests. Kuttroff, Pickhardt and company, importers of synthetic nitrogen, selected Atlanta because of its importance as a center of the fertilizer industry. The southern office has been opened in the Grant building.

The Atlanta office is the southern division of the agricultural department of this company, and will function in

ACTIVE START SEEN ON SEWER SYSTEM

Prospects for instituting immediately a program for a complete sewerage system in Atlanta under the provisions of the $8,000,000 municipal improvement bond issue were given a considerable boost Saturday when it was learned that the bond commission will take this matter into consideration at its meeting Monday afternoon at the Biltmore hotel.

Coordination of all departments now in charge of expenditure of funds provided in the bond issue is expected to culminate in the immediate commencement of the sewer program. Preliminary matters probably will be considered at the meting but it is expected provisions will be made to begin a topographical and triangular survey of the city so that engineers may lay plans for the sewerage system.

Although not anounced officially, it is expected William A. Hansell, chief of construction for the city, will give a report Monday afternoon in this regard. Mr. Hansell was in Tate, Ga., over the week-end in conference with a government surveyor, and it is believed likely he will confer with the surveyor in regard to making a topographical map of the city.

Although officials are anxious to get the work under way, it is pointed out that to make a comprehensive improvement in the present sewerage system full information must be obtained to find where various kinds of work are needed. Tentative plans of the commission are to have government surveys made for both maps.

In addition to consideration of the expenditure of sewer money the commission also will consider recent action of the board of education in regard to the expenditure of the first $1,000,000 provided for schools by the bond issue; action of city council at the last meeting regarding the site for the new city hall; and developments in the twin viaducts which will span the N. C. & St. L. tracks at Pryor street and Central avenue.

City council at its last meeting named A. B. Greenfield, member of the city hall committee from the bond commission, to act as special agent for the city in securing options for property at the proposed location of the new city hall.

Wife Saves Life Of Mate as Fire Sweeps Clothing

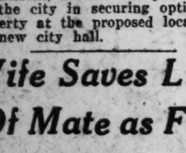

E. F. Landrum, 28, of 1051 Dunning street, was badly burned Saturday morning when flaming gasoline was thrown on his clothing by the explosion of a stove he was trying to adjust. Only quick action on the part of his wife, who smothered the flames by rolling Mr. Landrum in blankets, saved him from burning to death, it was stated.

Officials at the Grady hospital, where Mr. Landrum was treated, said he will live, although he is suffering from severe burns on the body. Mrs. Landrum's hands and arms were badly burned in rescuing her husband, hospital officials said.

Entry Lists for Screen Test Remain Open One Week Longer

Screen tests to develop future stars of the moving pictures will be given at the Howard theater the week of August 2 under the auspices of The Constitution. The pretty girl (left) is Miss Ivy Harris, of Atlanta, who won a contract with the Paramount studios in a contest last year. In the center two of the stars in "Fascinating Youth" are shown, the girl being Miss Harris. The full stage scene shows the setting for the screen tests which will be found in the production "Alice in Movieland," in which the junior stars appear.

Everything is "all set" for a week of "inside stuff" about the making of motion pictures when screen test week begins Monday, August 2, at the Howard theater where the leaders in the screen test contest, now in progress under the auspices of The Constitution in association with the Famous Players-Lasky company, will appear to stand under the movie light to test their fitness for future careers as stars of the silver sheet.

One big feature of the week will be the appearance on the screen of the picture "Fascinating Youth," which was produced by 16 junior screen stars selected in national contests last year and the presentation on the stage of "Alice In Movieland," a John Murray Anderson production with the 16 junior stars appearing, including Miss Ivy Harris, of Atlanta, one of the 16 winners in the national contest last year.

The Constitution is offering prizes of $100, $50 and $25 to the three who make the best record in the screen tests. The entry lists for this contest will be open all this week. To enter any person between the ages of 16 and 26 can send in a recent photograph accompanied by the filled-in blank which accompanies this article. Those who have no clear, good photographs, available for publication in the newspaper, can go to the Stephenson studio, Connally building, or to Wesley Hirshberg, 34 1-2 Whitehall street, and get photographs taken free for the contest. Tobert R. Jennings, who operates both the Stephenson and the Hirshberg studios, is giving The Constitution sitters his personal attention.

In addition to chances to win the money prizes the contestants will have an opportunity to win one of the scholarships in the Paramount school of junior stars. Winners in this contest are given training in the Paramount school and will appear as stars in a motion picture production and also in a stage presentation similar to "Fascinatiog Youth" and "Alice in Movieland," which will be offered here by the winners of last year's contest.

All persons who wish to get their photographs taken free for the contest must go to the Stephenson studio or the Hirshberg studio some time before next Thursday at 4 o'clock.

Thirty persons will be selected to go to the Howard theater the week of August 2 and have their final screen tests made. The three winners in these tests will get the three big money prizes. All persons who enter, regardless of whether they win money prizes, will receive consideration in the national contest for scholarships in the school of junior stars.

WHITE TRIAL TO OPEN ON MONDAY MORNING

Trial of W. H. White, Jr., former president of the White Provision company, charged with embezzling $218,000 of the funds of the company, is scheduled to get under way Monday morning before Judge R. N. Hardeman, of Louisville, sitting in Fulton superior court for Atlanta judges who are on vacations.

Two hundred and fifty talesmen have been drawn, from which a jury will be selected, according to attaches in the office of Solicitor General John A. Boykin. Solicitor Boykin is disqualified from conducting the prosecution because of the fact that he is a stockholder in the company but he will be present at the trial to give counsel to Assistant Solicitor Ed A. Stephens who will prosecute the case for the state.

Mr. White will be represented by Attorneys Ben Conyers, Pual S. Etheridge and William Schley Howard. According to Solicitor Boykin the state is ready to present its case and defense attorneys Saturday announced they were ready for trial.

The trial is expected to be a prolonged one and will probably consume a week or ten days.

NEW DE LUXE TRAINS TO PACIFIC COAST

Effective November 14, the Chicago & North Western railway, Union Pacific system and Southern Pacific lines, will place in service a new 63-hour de luxe extra-fare train between Chicago and California. The de luxe train between Chicago and San Francisco will be known as the "San Francisco Overland Limited," while the de luxe train between Chicago and Los Angeles will be called the "Los Angeles Limited."

This is the fastest schedule ever placed in effect on a trans-continental run. In addition, these lines will operate another all-standard Pullman train on a 68-hour schedule without extra fare, with through sleeping car accommodations between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, to be known as the "Gold Coast Limited." There will be no change in the present service to California and the north Pacific coast via the "Portland Limited" and "Continental Limited."

Detailed information as to time of departure and arrival at terminals will be announced at an early date.

INDIAN WAR VETS WILL BE GUESTS AT PARK CONCERT

Veterans of the American Indian wars of 50 years ago will be special guests of Fred Lillie, Indian fighter and drummer of the Royal Purple Elks' band, at the weekly concert at Lakewood park from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. The band will play "Indian Days," a tone picture of camp and battle scenes, as one of the several features of the afternoon's program and a special section of seats, next to the bandstand, will be reserved for the veterans.

Ralph Rader's first Atlanta appearance in concert, prior to the opening of a revival campaign at the Rader airdome on Whitehall street Sunday night, and four special request numbers sung by Miss Jessie Reese Calvert, soprano, will be other features of the program.

FLORISTS WILL HOLD PICNIC ON THURSDAY

The fifth annual outing of Atlanta florists, sponsored by the Atlanta Florists and Horticulturists' club, will take place at Dixie lakes, Thursday, July 29, and an attendance of from 300 to 500 is expected, including florists and nurserymen, together with their families.

Since their first outing in 1922, each year these occasions have increased in popularity and attendance until now practically everyone engaged in this line within a radius of 100 miles of Atlanta, attend these outings.

Many sports will be indulged in during the day, and a number of handhome prizes will be awarded winners in the various contests. An old-fashioned barbecue will be served at noon. All retail florists will be closed Thursday for the occasion.

WELFARE CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN MACON

The program committee of the state welfare conference voted Wednesday, July 21, to hold its second annual meeting in Macon, October 19-21. A referendum was taken of social workers and leaders in welfare movements throughout the state. These people were asked to express their choice between Albany, Atlanta, Columbus, Macon and Savannah. Macon led with 72 votes and Atlanta was second with 70 votes.

The conference should bring to Macon some 300 or 400 people interested in the development of the state's human assets. The conference is being promoted by the State Council of Social Agencies, and organization composed of two representatives of every state agency in Georgia interested in the promotion of public welfare.

GRIFFIN YOUTH KILLED BY TRAIN

Griffin, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) Woodward Hubbard, 14, was killed instantly and his brother David Hubbard, 21, was seriously injured Saturday about noon when the truck on which they were riding was struck by a Southern railway train at Jenkinsburg, a town between Locust Grove and Jackson.

The dead boy was carried to an undertaking parlor in Atlanta and the injured man was rushed to a hospital in that city, and reports received here say he is not expected to live.

The older Hubbard was driving for a local candy concern and was en route to Indian Springs with a load of candy when the accident occurred.

Woodward Hubbard lived here with his parents and was well liked.

David Hubbard was brought to the Atlanta hospital where physicians are working feverishly to save his life. His condition is serious, it is stated by attendants. However, the exact extent of his injuries had not been determined late Saturday.

J. B. Stephens, conductor, had charge of the passenger train which struck the machine and R. Z. Gardner was behind the throttle of the locomotive, officials of the railroad stated.

CONVICTS SLAIN SEEKING ESCAPE KANSAS PRISON

Lansing, Kan., July 24.—(AP)—Ernest Hardwick, a Kansas City bandit, and Robert A. Edwards were killed by guards tonight as they attempted to escape from the state penitentiary here, after they had stabbed Captain R. B. Manatt, veteran prison official. Hardwick was shot down by Edgar Ransom, a negro guard.

fifty seriously injured when a bridge collapsed at Whitesville tonight.

Governor Howard M. Gore immediately dispatched state police officials and a staff of physicians of the state health department to the scene of the tragedy by automobile and ordered a special train containing doctors and nurses to be sent from Charleston.

The dead: Frank McClelland, miner; Della Nichols, 7; Ersie Jarrell, miner; William M. Slush; an unidentified man.

Warner Sculpture Portrait Is First Gift to High Museum

WARNER PORTRAIT OF J. ALDEN WIER, P. N. A.

The first gift made to the High Meuseum of Art, since it was presented to the city by Mrs. J. M. High, early this year, was announced Saturday by J. J. Haverty, chairman of the art committee of the chamber of commerce and a leader in the movement to establish a municipal art gallery in this city.

The gift announced is a portrait in bronze of J. Alden Weir, P. N. A., and is the work of Olin L. Warner, N. A. It is given to Atlanta by the Ferargil galleries, of New York, through the interest of W. Frank Purdy. Mr. Purdy is director of the School of American Sculpture, on 59th street, New York, and is considered a leading American authority on sculpture. He is a member of the Ferargil galleries.

Mr. Purdy visited Atlanta during the first exhibition of the Grand Central Art galleries at the Biltmore hotel, in 1924. At that time he was in charge of the sculpture section of the exhibition and was one of the speakers at the opening banquet. He has many friends in Atlanta, one of the oldest being Charles W. Crankshaw.

The portrait in sculpture presented to Atlanta is a classic reproduction of one of the earliest and greatest of American impressionistic painters. Mr. Weir belongs to the period which produced Chase, Twachtman, Abbott, Thayer and William Sartain. His work was exhibited recently in the commemorative exhibition of the 100th anniversary of the National Academy of Design.

Olin L. Warner, the sculptor, is described by Lorado Taft, in his "History of American Sculptors," as one of the highest types of American sculptors, ranking with St. Gaudens. He was considered a "sculptor for sculptors" rather than for the public.

The portrait of J. Alden Weir was executed in 1880, being one of Mr. Warner's earliest works. The style is Grecian in simplicity and exquisiite modeling of the portrait. Full length portrait statues by the same artist include Governor Buckingham, of Connecticut, in the state capitol there; William Loyd Garrison and General Devens in Boston. They are regarded among the best of American sculptures.

Mr. Warner designed the souvenir half-dollar for the Columbian exhibition and in 1894 began important work for the new Congressional library at Washington. The three bronze doors of the library were to have been done by him, but he completed only the first. It represents the figure "Imagination." Warner died before other panels of the doors were completed.

The bronze portrait given Atlanta will be placed in the High Museum of Art, which is the former High residence on Peachtree at 15th street. The new museum will be opened in the fall of this year, after necessary remodeling is completed, with a great exhibition by the Grand Central Art galleries of New York.

CHILD NEAR DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

knees, hips and shoulders. She was rushed to Grady in the automobile of Mrs. F. Z. Foster, of 400 Bankhead avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Sisk, of Sandtown road, were painfully hurt when their car collided with another machine occupied by unidentified negroes on Lee street near McCall's crossing. The injured were taken to Grady hospital in the car of F. E. Van Peir, of 578 Washington street. Sisk was arrested on a reckless driving charge after a probe by Policemen A. F. Duncan, M. V. Cartwright, J. E. McDaniel and J. H. Crankshaw. Names of the negro occupants were not learned.

Alice Connell, aged 3, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Connell, of 289 North boulevard, was treated at Grady hospital for bruises sustained when knocked down by an automobile near her home. Police have no report of the accident.

Mike Johnson, 27, 1004 Murphy avenue, suffered a dislocated arm at the elbow when thrown from a motorcycle. He received emergency treatment at Grady hospital but gave attending physicians no details of the accident.

Truck in Collision.

R. E. Richardson, of 25 Weyman avenue, and P. F. Bradford, of 12 Weyman avenue, were cut, shaken up and bruised when the truck they were riding collided with an automobile driven by E. Kimble, of 814 Stewart avenue, at Glenn and Windsor streets Saturday night.

The accident was investigated by Call Officers J. G. Bowman and L. P. Higgins, who made reckless driving cases against Richardson and Kimble.

Willie Bell, negro, age 8, suffered a mashed leg when struck by a mail box that had been knocked down by an unidentified driver at Piedmont and Auburn avenues. Officers Claude Carroll and H. A. Hardy investigated the accident and stated they secured the license number of the car and expect to arrest the driver Monday.

POINCARE MOVES TO GUARD AMERICANS

agreement in its present form, or who are likely, in view of their past political assertions, to side with Premier Poincare on a show down. These partisans of the "France save herself" policy are said to be Poincare, Painleve, Herriot, Leygues, Tardieu, Bckanowski and Louis Marin, while M. Sarraut and M. Fallieres with the other members of the cabinet are expected to concur.

Therefore ratification of the interallied debt agreements will probably be temporarily side-tracked, notwithstanding the fact that various spokesmen have predicted that both accords with the United States and Great Britain will be ratified in a short time.

M. Poincare's first act on assuming direction of the ministry of finances, was to instruct all agents throughout the country to hasten the publication and distribution of the new tax lists for 1926, and to send out notices encouraging tax payers to make provisional part payments.

THREE ARE ARRESTED ON KIDNAPING CHARGE

joined with county and city authorities.

Judge Johnson was uninjured save for bruises sustained when he was seized and thrown into the back of an automobile.

The kidnapers were said to have been led by Guy Brooks.

Personal grudges between the judge and Brooks was the basis for the attack, authorities said they believed, although they could not definitely state just what was the nature of the feeling.

Mr. Johnson said that the men threatened him with death and that he succeeded in pleading for his life until he was rescued.

The kidnaping occurred shortly after 9:30 o'clock when a stranger, entering a store here, asked for Mr. Johnson who at the time was sitting in the building and telling the sawmill men that a man was outside who wanted to purchase some lumber. Mr. Johnson accompanied him outside the store building and he was immediately seized, it was said, and placed in one of the two automobiles in which the band were riding. Two of the men sat on the judge, he told the Charlton county authorities, throughout the journey.

DAN MOODY LEADS IN G'OVERNOR'S RACE

daughter, Miss Dorrace Ferguson, to cast her vote. Her final statement was that she was confident of overwhelming victory.

Mrs. Dan Moody was denied a vote because she had relinquished her residence in Abilene, Texas, when she married the attorney general and has not resided in the capital the legal period. Moody voted at Taylor while Davidson was at his home in Houston.

The voting started with a rush this morning and the Texas election bureau estimated that about 650,000 ballots were cast on the democratic side.

Despite the bitterness of the campaign no serious disturbances were reported. There were some verbal arguments and at least one court action.

In San Antonio the forces led by Sheriff James Stevens filed an injunction suit against Democratic Chairman Thurman Barrett to force him to turn ballot boxes over to the county clerk. Barrett had announced he would send the boxes to a local hotel where the votes would be counted under his direction. The court denied the injunction.

Secret Primary Charged.

In Dallas a spokesman for the anti-Creager republican faction charged that the regular republican organization, headed by R. B. Creager, national committeeman, was holding a secret primary and that some of the following of Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, who is fighting the regulars, could not find the polling places. The regulars denied this.

Colonel H. H. Haines, of Houston, supported by Creager and E. P. Scott, Corpus Christi, supported by Wurzbach, were the republican gubernatorial contestants. Republican leaders estimated that 30,000 votes would be counted in that party's initial attempt at a state-wide primary.

The democratic congressmen with no opposition were: Eugene Black, Morgan G. Sanders, Sam Rayburn, Luther A. Johnson, Clay Stone Briggs, J. J. Mansfield, John M. Garner, Marvin Jones and Claude B. Hudspeth. The other nine had contests.

WURZBACH APPARENTLY WINNER IN TEXAS RACE.

San Antonio, Texas, July 24.—(AP) Harry M. Wurzbach, Texas' only republican congressman, who last March denounced on the floor of congress the patronage system in the south and "went to the mat" with the republican organization in Texas, apparently has been renominated.

Seventy-five boxes in the 14th congressional district tonight gave him 1,355 votes to 206 for Fred E. Knetsch, candidate backed by National Committeeman R. B. Creager and other leaders of the party in Texas.

"MA" TO RESIGN PLACE IF SHE MEETS DEFEAT.

Dallas, Texas, July 24.—(AP)—Determined to resign if her principal opponent beats her by as much as one vote, Governor Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson sat complacently in the gubernatorial mansion tonight while clerks counted the ballots which were to decide her position as chief executive.

The woman governor realized that she had come to a crisis in her political career but was confident that Dan Moody, the fiery young attorney general who opposed her for the democratic nomination, would be far behind in the final count.

"We have given the state a good government," said Mrs. Ferguson. "Jim and I feel certain that we have not been thrown down." The reference to her husband, "Farmer Jim," was a tribute to the important part he has played in the woman governor's administration and her campaign for renomination.

Moody is the one man in Texas who has made Governor Ferguson's first term in office a stormy one. He has attacked her policies persistently and in his campaign for nomination declared that he would stand or fall on the issue of "Fergusonism." When "Ma's" highway department let some allegedly fraudulent contracts for road building Moody called a special grand jury to investigate the charges and the highway department resigned under fire.

GEORGE DECLINES TO ENTER DEBATE

of difference, except upon two questions. Upon these two questions you invite debate in the several congressional districts in the state.

"Before dealing with these questions permit me to say that when I entered the senate three and a half years ago I gave up my law practice, and have since devoted myself exclusively to the duties of the office. Until my return to Georgia two weeks ago, I had not been able to visit my home since Thanksgiving day, 1925. You have been constantly in the state with full opportunity to meet the people and to visit all sections of the state. I recite these facts merely for the purpose of indicating that it now seems proper for me to respond to as many invitations as possible and from those portions of the state which I have not been able to visit for many months.

Answers Russell.

"With reference to the two questions upon which you state we are at issue in this campaign, permit me to refer first to the matter of farm relief: I have carefully read your letter. While you inferentially criticise my vote against the Haugen bill you do not say whether you favor or oppose this measure. In fact, you neither express approval or disapproval of any one of the farm relief bills considered by the last congress. In general language, you express your interest in the farmer, and in the farm problem. Self-interest alone would be altogether sufficient to induce me to vote for any adequate farm relief and even for a measure which is not altogether adequate and which leaves much to be desired. This statement is based upon the fact that all of my property is in farms which I have actually operated for many years and at a loss. As a matter of fact, I favored the bill introduced by Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader of the senate. This bill was prepared by Senator Robinson at the request of many of the democratic senators, and in my opinion was the best bill offered for the relief of agriculture. While the bill is not a perfect one, it is along the right line and offers real relief to the farmers of all sections of the country, providing, as it does, an adequate sum of money to market surplus farm products whether wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, or other staple farm crops. Since by inference you seem to approve the Haugen bill, although you do not commit yourself to that measure, and since the only definite committal contained in your letter is the statement that you will 'go to the people with the proposition that a cordial working understanding between the farmers of the west and the farmers of the south can in three months produce a bill that would afford actual relief,' permit me to say that Senator Jim Reed, of Missouri, an outstanding democratic senator in the middle west, voted as I did for the Robinson bill and voted as I did against the Haugen or McNary bill; Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, an outstanding democratic senator in the inter-mountain west, voted as I did for the Robinson bill and voted as I did against the Haugen or McNary bill, and Senator William E. Borah, the outstanding republican senator of the west, voted as I did against the Haugen or McNary bill. I may also observe that practically all the democratic senators from the south voted for the Robinson bill, as I did, including the two senators from Texas, the two senators from Louisiana, the two senators from Mississippi, one of the senators from Alabama, the two senators from Florida, the two senators from South Carolina, and the two senators from Virginia. They also voted as I did against the Haugen or McNary bill. In view of the fact that you neither favor any specific farm relief bill nor oppose any specific relief measure, I can see nothing for debate upon this question.

"The second question upon which you assert we are at issue is my vote upon the resolution laying down the conditions upon which the United States is willing to support the world court. You will recall that the last national democratic convention specifically endorsed the world court, and pledged the party to support it. You will recall that all of the democratic senators but two Senators Reed, of Missouri, and Blease, of South Carolina, voted to support the court. (The statement attributed to you that the two Georgia senators were the only southern senators who voted to support the court is, I am sure, an erroneous report of your public utterances.)

Conditions of Vote.

"From the first I insisted I would not vote to support the court unless conditions absolutely safeguarding the rights and interests of the United States were plainly and distinctly set forth in the resolution. The resolution, finally passed, is a new and different resolution from the recommendations originally made by both Presidents Harding and Coolidge. You assert that the resolution is 'but the first entangling step, the entering wedge towards involving us in European affairs;' and in substance, that it is the first step towards the league of nations, if it does not actually carry us into the league. I as positively deny the statement and every inference drawn therefrom, as I cite as the pertinent fact the very language of the resolution, as passed by the senate, namely: support of the court 'shall not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the league of nations or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the Versailles treaty;' also the conditions identical in substance with the conditions attached by the United States to our support of the Hague court of arbitration in 1907, namely: that support of the court 'shall not be so construed as to require the United States to depart from its traditional policy of not intruding upon, interfering with, or entangling itself in the political questions or policy or internal administration of any foreign state;' nor shall support of the court 'be construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions.'

"A debate between us upon this, the main proposition advanced in your letter, and otherwise elaborated in your public addresses, would involve a discussion only of the foregoing conditions upon which we have offered to support the court and without which I would not have voted to support the court. In the last analysis the language of these conditions is plain enough to be understood by any of our fellow citizens, and a debate upon the language would be of very little profit to any of our constituents. Again, the senate resolution lays down the express condition that the statute of the court cannot be changed without our consent; that no matter in which the United States is interested can be considered by the court except by agreement 'thereto through general or special treaties' concluded between the United States and any other nation at interest; and finally, that the court shall not give even an advisory opinion except publicly and after due notice to all nations supporting the court and shall not have the power to entertain a request for an advisory opinion 'touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest,' without the consent expressed in like manner of the United States. The United States claims an interest in the whole western hemisphere, North, Central and South America. In other words, the Monroe Doctrine has stood as purely an American doctrine based upon our power to enforce it, of the senate. Upon the conditions since the days of Mr. Jefferson himself, although it was actually formulated by President Monroe. If, under the conditions clearly and specifically demanded in the senate resolution, we become a supporting member of the court, every nation likewise giving its support to the court is bound to recognize the right of the United States to refuse to submit any question involving the Monroe Doctrine.

Ample Protection.

"As a matter of fact, the court is a court to which we can go, if we wish to go, but we can go only by a two-thirds vote of the senate; a two-thirds vote of all senators present and voting being necessary to the ratification of any treaty, general or specific. We cannot be hailed into the court; we may submit any question to the court which we deem proper to be submitted. Any question between the United States and any other nation may now be settled by treaty made by the president with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the senate. Upon the conditions stated in the resolution we give to the court our moral support, reserving every right which is now reserved under the Constitution to the treaty-making power of this government. Not a single question can at any time be submitted to the court in which the United States has or claims an interest, except by the joint action of the president and two-thirds of the senate of the United States.

"Since 1899 we have supported the court of arbitration at The Hague. In 1907 our representative went to The Hague with the very statute which is the foundation and substance of the statute creating the world court. No responsible voice in America has ever been raised against our support of the court or arbitration. It is a point worthy of notice that this court of arbitration, which for more than 30 years has had our support, has the exclusive power to nominate the judges of the world court. The judges must be selected from those arbitrators now appearing on the permanent list of arbitrators at The Hague, and from a specified number of such arbitrators named by the nations supporting The Hague court of arbitration. We are already, therefore, in association with the very men who sit as judges in the world court. The two courts occupy different rooms in the same building.

"If the names and nationalities of the judges of the court is a matter of real concern, then we should withdraw from The Hague court of arbitration, and I do not understand you to favor withdrawing from that court.

Facts Stand for Themselves.

"Under the foregoing conditions, definitely stated in the resolution, it is my settled conviction that the United States is not involved and cannot become involved in any entangling alliance, political or otherwise. You assert the contrary. Mere assertion and counter assertion will add little to the real understanding of our fellow citizens, especially when the very language of the resolution set out above is clear to every citizen of Georgia.

"The forty-eight nations now members of the court have not agreed to the conditions upon which we are willing to support the court. They may never do so. If they do not, then the whole matter is at an end, because the senate, having adopted the conditions, will not consent to any change or modification thereof. In these circumstances, I am unable to see that the actual and unquestioned facts present any real issue.

"The propriety of a joint debate between members of the same political party is always open to question. I have no criticism to make of you personally because you seek a purely political office upon political issues, while at the same time holding the most exalted station in the highest court in the state, but I have the right to my own view upon the question of propriety involved in a joint debate between a member of the supreme court of Georgia, who is seeking political office, and myself. My high regard for the supreme court of this state, in the absence of any other consideration, will not permit me to consider an invitation to discuss with you the issues which you have attempted to make in the campaign.

"I wish to assure you that the cordial relations existing between us and between members of your family and myself shall, so far as I am concerned, remain undisturbed.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,
"WALTER F. GEORGE."

Russell's Statement.

Judge Russell's statement follows:

"Chief Justice Russell's campaign for the senate is gaining momentum every day. His friends are confident of his election and are active in his behalf. The outlook is very satisfactory. While Senator George has evidently decided not to accept Judge Russell's invitation for a joint canvas of the state to present the issues to the people face to face, press dispatches indicate that it is his position that the League of Nations and its world court is a dead issue. The wish is evidently father to the thought and Senator George will find thousands of patriotic citizens who disagree with him. Senator George enters the same plea that Senator McKinley did in Illinois; Senator Hanna did in North Dakota, and Senator Cummins did in Iowa; but the voters of these states decided this issue would live as long as the agitation and propaganda continues in an effort to make America take part in the family quarrels of Europe, just as the people of Georgia will decide on September 8. The men who defeated Cummins, McKinley and Hanna promised their constituents to introduce measurse to annul the entrance of the United States into the world court and it is highly probable that at least one of them will make good their promise. Whether they do or not, the people of Georgia can rest assured that Judge Russell will himself introduce such a measure.

"The truth of the matter is that Senator George's vote for the entrance of this country into the world court arises like Banquo's ghost, to haunt and confound him.

Says Wisdom Shown.

"Recent press dispatches from abroad clearly show the wisdom and safety of following the time-honored advice of the fathers of this republic, that we should avoid such agreements as the world court, into which Judge George has voted this country. These dispatches say that innocent American citizens, visiting in foreign lands, have been grossly insulted and manhandled during the past week by mobs of foreigners, merely because this country is asking repayment of a small part of the money our citizens stinted themselves to raise and loan them during the world war. With such open manifestation of hatred and hostility on the part of those we have befriended and for whom our sons sacrificed their lives, can the people of the United States expect to receive justice in the decision of international questions from a court composed of judges from such countries and appointed by the League of Nations?

"Judge George is quoted as stating in his speeches that if Judge Russell is elected he will not have a chance to vote on a single plank in his platform for six years. This statmeent can only be construed as meaning that as far as he is concerned the world court issue is satisfactorily settled and that all efforts for farm relief were exhausted at the last session of congress and there is no hope of obtaining relief for our agricultural interests."

the charge is now made that this country is guided by "materialism."

Denies "Shylock" Charge.

"It would seem," he said, "that under all the circumstances, there is no occasion for charging the United States with being a 'shylock.' But I do not wish to have it inferred that Great Britain has been false to her ideals.

"It is a matter of no concern, I suspect, to the American taxpayer what the British government did with the money borrowed. It is not important that we settle that question."

"So far as the taxpayer is concerned, the transaction is rather a simple one. The Earl of Denbigh deplores the lamentable ignorance of our people and wants, in the benevolence of his heart, to start a campaign of education.

"But the American people have sufficient intelligence without any extraordinary educational exertion to understand how a debtor acts when he does not want to pay what he owes. We understand perfectly that the attack upon the United States is the peculiar way they have of asking for cancellation of their debt."

Borah said: "It would be difficult to find a term of reproach or insult which has not already been applied to the United States by those conducting a campaign for cancellation.

"This seems to be the ideal campaign of villification against the enemy. The whole world is to be brought to believe the American people are void of all sense of humanity or correct principles or high ideals or honorable purposes."

Quotes British Leaders.

The Idaho senator quoted former Premier Asquith, who said the United States entered the war because of the "constraining force of conscience and humanity," and Lord Curzon, who said Americans responded to the "voice of freedom."

"It would see mthat as to time, manner and purpose of entering the war, we were fairly above criticism, according to our English critics," Borah said. England, he pointed out, received 3,805,000 square miles of territory from the war; France, 402,892, while the United States wanted nothing and took nothing. He said both Great Britain and France were "true to their ideals" in taking territory.

"Certainly there are no reasons here for calling the United States 'Uncle Shylock,' whatever reason Great Britain had for complaining against France," he said.

JACKSON RIFLES TO LEAVE TODAY FOR TYBEE CAMP

Jackson, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) The Jackson Rifles, company A, 121st infantry, Georgia national guard, will entrain Sunday morning for the annual encampment at Tybee Island, Captain E. S. Settle, officer commanding, announces the company will carry three officers and 68 enlisted men.

The baseball team will again try to win the cup awarded for the best regimental team, and a strong nine will be carried to camp.

BARNESVILLE BLUES TO VISIT TYBEE CAMP

Barnesville, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—The Barnesville Blues, local national guard company, will entrain here Sunday morning for Tybee, where they will take part in a two weeks' camp with other members of the 121st infantry.

The Blues, whose official designation is company B, will be commanded by Captain C. P. Graddick, who has held this office since the post-war reorganization of the unit in 1922. First Lieutenant J. D. Burnette and Second Lieutenant W. B. Smith, Jr., complete the commissioned personnel of the outfit. Homer A. Sappington is first sergeant.

Company B in the past four summer camps of the state militia has made itself known as one of the crack organizations of the regiment. Its drills put on by picked squads and platoons have attracted favorable comment on the part of military officials and spectators. The company's camp strength will be 86 men.

A. M. E. CONFERENCE MEETS AT POMONA

Pomono, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—Minutes of the third day's session of the Griffin District A. M. E. Sunday School convention, with Dr. H. D. Canady presiding, stirred no little comment on the adoption of the previous day's record.

Upon the question of the status of visitors in attendance at the convention, Dr. Canady ruled that they could become honorary members.

The convention is largely attended. The missionary women, led by P. L. Canady, president, made their reports today, which showed much increase in missionary work.

President J. H. Lewis, of Morris Brown university, spoke Friday night. "The History of Morris Brown" was shown in film. The missionary sermon was preached by Rev. H. F. Holmes at noon. Rev. J. R. Martin preached at night.

Greetings!

OUR store is finished, thanks to the workmen of Atlanta. Our home in Dixie is ready.

And we're mighty glad.

Everybody down here has been good to us, so much so that it is almost impossible for us to know whom to thank. It really makes us feel as if we've been down here a long time and have formed friendships that are never ending.

And so we feel at home here in Atlanta, with you. We want to be a part of this great city, the Gateway to the South. We want the folks down here to think of us not so much as the World's Largest Store, but as Sears, Roebuck and Co., Atlanta.

We're proud of our building, because we believe it adds to the beauty that is already Atlanta's. We've enjoyed building it, because in the building we have been aided by the loyal artisans of Atlanta and the South, so that we could have it ready.

Now, we're stocking the shelves in this great store-house, putting the finishing touches here and there so that it will be spick-and-span on the day scheduled for its opening.

Six months ago, when we bought the ground, we set Monday, August 2nd, as the opening day. And Monday, August 2nd it will be.

Now, a week before the doors officially open, we just want to say "Greetings"

BUSINESS CIVIC LEADERS URGE PEACHTREE CREEK PARK

Forestry Survey Shows Site Of City-Owned Disposal Plant Ideal for Beautification

Looking toward the establishment of a great memorial park, business men and civic leaders throughout the city are urging development of the civic park on the 125-acre plot of land now owned by the city at the Peachtree creek disposal plant. Letters indorsing the movement and pledging confidence in the proposal are being received by Henderson Hallman, chairman of the sewer committee of the city bond commission —the man who first suggested the memorial park.

Concurrent with other steps towards the establishment of the park, Mr. Hallman has been furnished a forestry survey of the proposed park by B. M. Lufburrow, state forester, and his assistant, Alfred Akerman.

According to this report there are 39 varieties of trees and shrubs growing there, and, it was stated, there are possibly many other kinds which were not listed in the cursory survey.

"The soil conditions are such," it was said, "that nearly all species found in the United States, north of Florida, could be introduced, should it be deemed advisable to make a feature of varietal plantings."

Suggestion Approved.

First suggestion as to placing a park in this section was made June 4, when Mr. Hallman, with other members of his committee, visited the place relative to transferring the present disposal plant to the banks of the Chattahoochee river, combine it with the Proctor creek disposal plant and furnish equipment that would care for the city's sewage for many years ahead.

The suggestion of Mr. Hallman created much interest and stamp of approval to the movement was given immediately by Mayor Walter A. Sims, John A. White, chairman of the council parks committee; L. L. Wallace, superintendent of parks and playgrounds, and many other city officials and business men.

Property owners in that vicinity have indicated their willingness to cooperate with the city by donating strips of land. Eugene V. Haynes promising to deed the city 10 acres adjoining the property of park purposes. Other adjoining land has been offered.

All the property would be adjacent to Peachtree creek and would be the site of the historic battle of Peachtree Creek, where more than 8,000 men fell, wounded or killed, in 1864.

Atlanta Battle Site.

Not only is the site abounding in beautifully wooded hills and valleys, but its history creates interest throughout the country. It is almost in the center of the battle ground over which the first important engagement was fought near Atlanta. The ground is hallowed by the blood of thousands of Confederate and Union soldiers who fell there.

It is estimated by Chief of Construction William A. Hansell that the present disposal plant on the banks of Peachtree creek throws 2,000,000 gallons of untreated sewerage into Peachtree creek daily. The Proctor creek disposal plant discharges a great volume daily which it cannot treat.

"The ultimate plan is to establish one unit which would care for sewerage from both plants and with a capacity to accommodate a city of half a million population. It is estimated that such a plant on the Chattahoochee river would care for Atlanta for the next 50 years.

Officials Urge Step.

City officials and civic leaders are urging this step because of the amount of untreated sewerage being discharged from these plants. It is pointed out that such a plan not only would eliminate the stench of the sewerage now poured into the creek, but would pave the way to give the city a great public park on land now owned by the city.

In a short sketch made by the state forestry department, which was furnished Mr. Hallman, it is stated, "that the most appropriate use that can be made of the former battle ground is to preserve it as a forest memorial of the brave men who died there."

"The flats along the creek and the adjoining slopes and ravines," the report continues, "offer a wonderful opportunity for creating a memorial forest. Nature has already supplied the main features, so the work can be done at a small cost. That work will consist mostly in putting in a network of bridle paths to make all parts of the area available, and in a little clearing and planting here and there to open up a vista or to cover up an unsightly open spot."

Natural Beauty of Spot.

A description of the natural beauty of the spot is given in the report concerning the slope west and north of the disposal plant: "There is a small ravine heading back in a westerly direction from the creek. A spring of cool water rises in this ravine. Some white oaks and poplars, 34 inches in diameter and 100 feet high, stand in this ravine. The important thing is that the ravine can be made accessible, and when accessible would be an attractive feature to lovers of natural beauty."

The complete text of the report from the state forestry department follows:

Slope To the South.

"This slope is covered by a growth of oak, hickory, poplar, and pine. The larger trees range from 15 to 22 inches in diameter breast high and the heights range from 75 to 85 feet. With very little work a bridle path can be brought through this area, making it accessible. There is an old earth work on this slope, probably one of those occupied by the Confederate forces during the seige of Atlanta.

Slope West and North.

"This is occupied by a growth of oaks and pines, ranging from 6 to 20 inches in diameter and from 40 to 75 feet in height. A bridle path can be brought along this slope from the plant, using for a part of the way a woods road already coming from the main road to the west of the plant.

"There is a small ravine heading back in a westerly direction from the creek. A spring of cool, clear water rises in this ravine. Some white oaks and poplars, 34 inches in diameter and 100 feet high, stand in this ravine. The bridle path referred to above can be brought around the head of this ravine, or it can be brought down one side, across the eastern opening and back along the other side. Which way the path is run is not important. The important thing is that the ravine can be made accessible, and when accessible would be an attractive feature to lovers of natural beauty.

"The flats along the creek and the adjoining slopes and ravines offer a wonderful opportunity for creating a memorial forest. Nature has already supplied the main features; so the work can be done at a small cost. That work will consist mostly in putting in a network of bridle paths to make all parts of the area available, and in a little clearing and planting here and there to open up a vista or to cover up an unsightly open spot.

Variety of Growth.

"The following list of native trees and shrubs noted while making the examination may be of interest, as showing the great variety of growth found on the area: Loblolly pine, short-leaf pine, white oak, post oak, southern red oak, scarlet oak, yellow oak, water oak, mochernut hickory, pignut hickory, yellow poplar, sweet gum, beech, sycamore, ash, wing elm, honey locust, red mulberry, catalpa, sourwood, black cherry, river birch, persimmon, boxelder, red maple, black gum, sassafras, hornbeam, dogwood, hackberry, haw, osage orange, willow, cucumber trees, chinquapin, smooth sumac, dwarf sumac, sweet shrub and azalea.

"These trees and shrubs were noted in a cursory examination. A thorough examination would probably extend the list. Moreover, the soil conditions are such that nearly all species found in the United States north of Florida could be introduced, should it be deemed advisable to make a feature of varietal plantings.

"The writer is impressed with the thought that the most appropriate use that can be made of the former battle ground is to preserve it as a forest memorial of the brave men who died there. Such a forest would serve as a recreational ground and at the same time be in keeping with the reverent spirit of this hallowed ground."

Added Indorsement.

In a letter to Mr. Hallman, Eugene V. Haynes says:

"I have been reading in the papers the many articles which have appeared recently regarding the movement toward making a beautful residential park of the property now owned by the city of Atlanta by the Peachtree creek disposal plant, and I would like to add my indorsement to this project. I believe that this would be a great boost to the city, should they decide to turn this property into a fine residential park.

"I own considerable land adjoining the city of Atlanta's property, which land I would be willing to deed to the city of Atlanta without cost to the city, said land to be used for park purposes, should the city decide to use their property for park purposes. I feel quite sure that other property owners having property adjacent to the city's tract of land would also be willing to deed to the city a portion of their property to be used for park purposes."

Hoke Smith's Letter.

Further indorsement is given the plan in a letter to Mr. Hallman from Senator Hoke Smith, in which he says in part:

"It will be an attraction to the people of the entire nation. Peachtree creek is known as the great battle ground for the contending forces of the Union and Confederate soldiers.

"The park will be one which would also be used for all character of amusements and could be made as attractive as the parks around Washington. It would certainly be a great contribution to the beauty of the city."

Former Senator Smith's letter follows:

"The proposed development of a park out of the land owned by the city in connection with the disposal plant would furnish a great attraction for the entire city. The property owners, I am satisfied, will add to the city property land adjacent to Peachtree creek on down to Howell Mill road. This will probably double the present size of the land owned by the city.

"It will be an attraction to the people of the entire nation. Peachtree creek is known as the great battle ground for the contending forces of Union and Confederate soldiers.

"The park will be one which would also be used for all character of amusements and could be made as attractive as the parks around Washington. It would certainly be a great contribution to the beauty of the city."

Great Historical Asset.

W. D. Hoffman, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, announces that the board of directors enthusiastically indorsed the establishment of the park. In a statement to Mr. Hallman he gives his ideas of the park. Mr. Hoffman's statement follows:

"The 150th anniversary of the founding of the United States should add greatly to the interest of American history and the preservation of historical locations.

"It is unnecessary for me to add to what is apparent to every citizen, that is, the great advantages which would be realized from the establishment of a park in the place of the sewerage disposal plant, but I am simply quoting Superintendent Sutton in his recent statement that double the park area of our city and he would guarantee to decrease the crime on hand. I am not, as I stated, going to add to the argument as to the desirability of this park because that is too well known to even discuss. What I do want to call to the attention of the people is the historical value of this ground and also its connection with both Kennesaw mountain and Stone mountain. There could be no greater historical asset to this whole country than the establishment of the park at Kennesaw mountain, the building of the boulevard through the Peachtree creek battlefield and its connection with Stone mountain and the wonderful memorial at that point. The establishment of this park as part of this development would not be a sectional matter, but would bring indorsement from all parts of this country.

Would Advertise Atlanta.

"Anyone who has visited Chickamauga battlefield realizes how the regiments of the north have marked the ground they occupied during the battle. The battle around Atlanta ranks very close to Chickamauga and Missionary ridge and there is scarcely a thing to mark the ground over which the armies fought. On the spot where it is contemplated to establish this park some of the prominent federal commanders had their headquarters and the entire ground would be rich in history if it was only developed and made accessible.

"At a meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, just adjourned, every member present enthusiastically indorsed the establishment of this park. The chamber of commerce is devoting its time to making Atlanta a great city and nothing would advertise it to the world or make it more attractive to visitors than to have this park and the connecting boulevard as described above. Regardless of any sectional feeling, the generation of the present should pay tribute to the memory of those brave men who fought and died under the colors of their regiment on this sacred ground, and their work helped to make our country great."

Ideal Location.

The following letter was written Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, by Bonnell H. Stone, secretary of the Georgia Forestry association:

"On last Sunday Mr. Hallman explained a most excellent plan for a community forest park to replace the present sewerage disposal plant on the 125-acre tract owned by the city of Atlanta and as I went over the ground with our state forester, B. M. Lufburrow, and our chief of forest management, Alfred Akerman, it gave me great pleasure to agree with Mr. Hallman and these experts from the state forestry department that this is a most excellent plan and almost an ideal location for the first community forest park to be established in Georgia. Many species of forest trees are now on the property and to reforest a large part of the area would be quite a simple matter. A small section might be used to great advantage as a state nursery, if the city of Atlanta should be willing, and untold benefits would arise to both community and state if you and other leading men and leading women of Atlanta will get behind this project. I feel sure that the other members of our state forestry department would be interested in the development of a nursery there for growing forest tree seedlings if a small area should be donated for that purpose. I trust that you will encourage Mr. Hallman and others interested in this subject and cooperate as our state chairman of community forests committee."

Battle of Atlanta.

Great historical interest is attached to the battle of Atlanta, for at that time it was a strategic point in the then weakening Confederate defense. It was there that General Sherman concentrated his forces and opposing him was General Hood, famous Confederate leader, who had just succeeded General Joseph E. Johnston.

Battle of Peachtree Creek.

The battle of Peachtree creek was the first of the big engagements fought around Atlanta. It took place on July 20, 1864.

Engaged in the battle was one of the corps of General Sherman's army, commanded by General Thomas and numbering about 50,00 men. The Confederates confronting them numbered between 40,000 and 50,000 men, under the command of General Hood.

Anticipating General Sherman's march on Atlanta the Confederates for months had been concentrating forces in Atlanta and establishing breastworks around the city with heaviest fortifications on the north side toward Peachtree creek, as it was from that direction Sherman was expected to come.

After the battle of Kennesaw mountain General Sherman divided his great army into three corps, his next objective being Atlanta.

One corps under command of General Schofield was ordered to march in the direction of the Roswell road around Atlanta and to make a stand near the old rolling mill east of Oakland cemetery.

Another corps under the command of General McPherson was ordered to flank Atlanta and to effect a junction with General Schofield to the east of Atlanta.

Supplies Cut Off.

General Thomas was ordered to bring his corps down the Marietta road and to cross the Chattahoochee river between Bolton and Pace's ferry bridge, and by a flanking movement up Peachtree creek to pass around the city and join Schofield and McPherson between Atlanta and Decatur.

The object of uniting this vast formation to the east of Atlanta was to cut off the Georgia railroad, which was then the main source of supplies to the Confederacy through Atlanta. This avenue of supply being cut off and the Federal army holding the Western and Atlantic to the north, General Sherman proposed laying siege to the city.

McPherson and Schofield effected their movements to join their forces between the old rolling mill beyond Oakland cemetery and what is now Grant park.

General Thomas crossed the Chattahoochee river and moving on toward Atlanta found the range of hills along Peachtree creek on the side toward Atlanta heavily fortified by the Confederacy.

Captain Evan P. Howell's battery was on the Confederate's right and was located at what is now the J. J. Spalding residence on Peachtree road. It overlooked the Peachtree valley. From this point for about two miles the Confederates were entrenched behind heavy fortifications reaching in a general direction along the Collier road and across the Howell Mill road.

Confederates Charge.

General Thomas entrenched the Federal army on the north side of Peachtree creek, placing his big guns on the hills between Habersham road and the Howell Mill road, these guns overlooking the valley and in direct sight of the Confederate lines across the creek.

On July 18 the Confederates began their charge down the hill slopes to the valley of Peachtree creek. They were met by the Federals in hand-to-hand conflict in which thousands fell. The Confederates fell back and reformed their lines for another charge and made a similar attack and the second bloody encounter was heavier in casualties than the first. Falling back again the Confederates reformed their lines, making a third attack about four o'clock in the afternoon in which both sides suffered losses similar to those sustained in the first and second attacks. In each of these attacks both sides were supported by the heavy fire of their respective artilleries entrenched on each side of the creek.

About five o'clock in the afternoon couriers dispatched through Atlanta to the Confederate lines carried the information that General Wheeler's cavalry on the east side at what is now Grant park, and which was hastening to join Hood at Peachtree creek, was about to be cut off by Thomas and Schofield. That would have meant the loss of the right arm of the Confederate cavalry support and after the third attack on the Federals at Peachtree creek General Hood ordered that the Confederate lines fall back through Atlanta and prepare for the conflict on the other side of the city, which was now rendered inevitable by the junction of Schofield's and McPherson's corps.

Sanguinary Conflict.

When day ended on July 18, and the Confederates had begun their move toward Atlanta, the bloody story of the day was told in the fact that 8,000 men were left on the battle field killed or wounded.

Thomas then proceeded, unmolested, to join Schofield and McPherson on the other side of the city, and the great battle of Atlanta was fought two days later.

It was in the battle of Peachtree creek that Benjamin Harrison, colonel of an Indiana regiment, was wounded, and as the result of the bravery manifested in the leadership of his regiment under hot fire he was brevetted brigadier-general on the field. He later became governor of Indiana and president of the United States.

Walter Q. Gresham, also of Indiana, received in this battle the shot through the thigh from which he limped through life. He became secretary of state under the Cleveland administration, after serving as judge of the United States Circuit court.

The Union army in this battle was composed very largely of United States troops mostly from Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

The land now owned by the city of Atlanta, a part of which is used as the Peachtree disposal plant, was in the direct line of the Confederate entrenchments extending along the hills on the south side of the creek.

Bloody Holocaust.

From the slope on which the disposal plant now stands thousands of men rushed from the left wing of the Confederate army into the bloody holocaust in the valley below. It is estimated that on the very ground now owned by the city and which it is proposed shall be devoted to park purposes, not less than 25,000 Confederates were entrenched.

Many years after the battle, on this very spot, war relics were found, such as broken pieces of cannon, abandoned guns, and side arms lost in the battle. Even skeletons of men were found on this field since the battle—unfortunates who had been killed in battle and were given hasty burial on the field, their skeletons ultimately unearthed by erosion.

Major General John L. Clem, chairman of the Kennesaw Memorial Park commission, has spoken enthusiastically of the plan to make this a city park. He was a participant in the battle of Peachtree creek. Ex-Governor N. E. Harris, of Georgia, also a member of the commission, warmly approves the proposal, and both he and General Clem think that if the city adopts the suggestion the next step should be a great historic highway from Kennesaw mountain to Stone mountain passing through the battle fields of Peachtree creek and the battle of Atlanta, in the center of which Grant park is located.

Hon. William G. McAdoo, while in Atlanta a few days ago, expressed his pleasure that the city now had this plan under consideration, saying he believed the city would not fail to take advantage of this opportunity to create a great memorial park dedicated to the battle of Peachtree creek on the land now owned by the city.

Many persons of prominence in and out of the city are actively interesting themselves in behalf of the consummation of the movement.

Following is the text of a letter received by Mr. Hallman from Mrs. Chauncey Smith favoring establishment of the park.

"I have read with great interest of the memorial park suggested by you to occupy the present site of the city's disposal plant.

"I wish to most heartily commend this project and to assure you that it will give me great pleasure to donate to the city land on the south bank of Peachtree creek for the opening of the street from Peachtree creek to this proposed park.

"It is fitting and most desirable as the city grows that all available properties acquired by the city either by gift or purchase should, when practicable, be utilized as parks.

"In a few years Atlanta, with its constantly developing subdivisions, will have utilized all the nearby available area leaving none for the pleasure and profit of our citizens as a mass.

"The location of the proposed memorial park is ideal in every respect. The land lies beautifully and is richly wooded. Peachtree creek wanders through it, and the waters therefrom, soon to be freed from all pollution by the new system of sewers proposed by your commission, can be utilized for lakes and all other beautifying ornamentation.

"Furthermore this particular tract of land should be preserved for its memorial value alone, one of the great battles of the civil war having been fought along Peachtree creek through this section.

"I feel that the citizens of Atlanta owe you a debt of gratitude for the part you have played in suggesting and promoting this great work and all who love progress and beauty in city development should, and I am sure will, heartily cooperate with you."

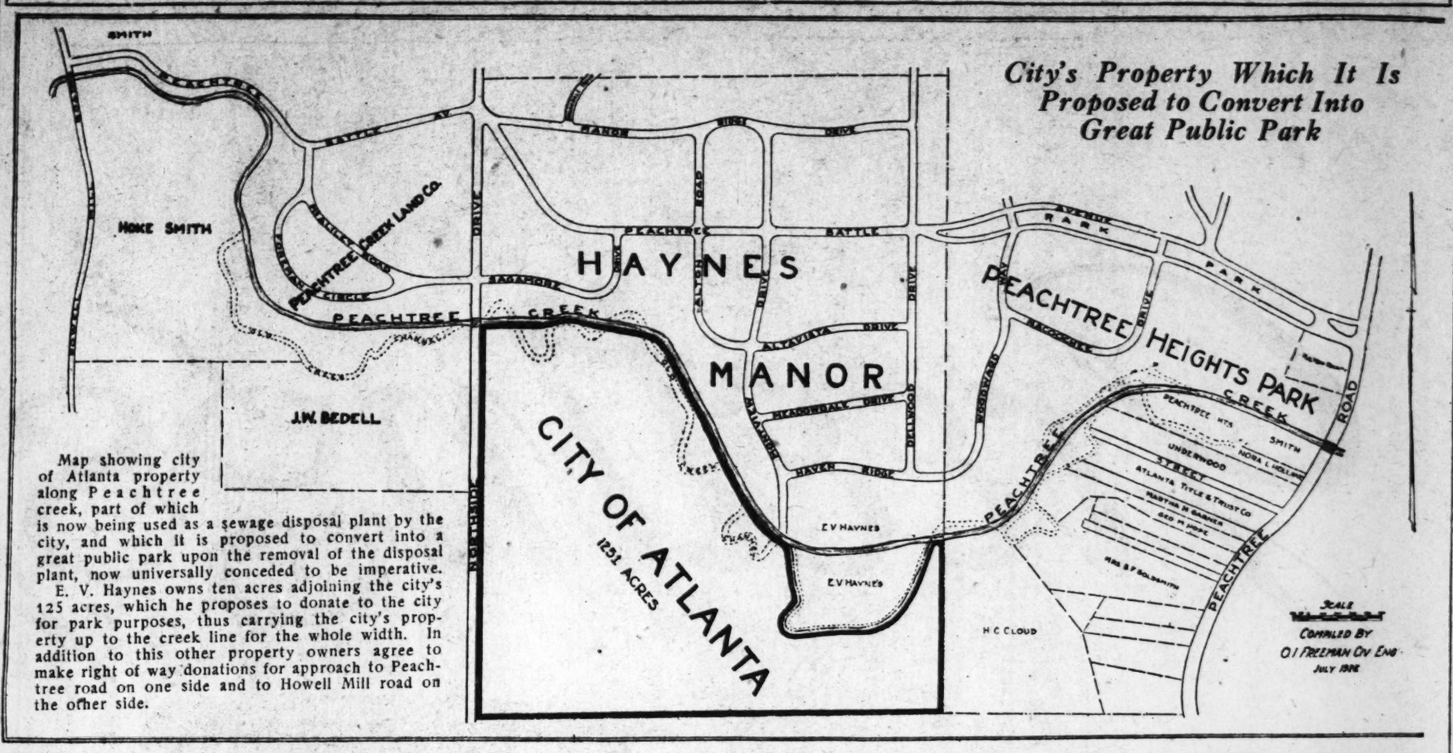

Fine Grade of Marble Found In Chattooga; Quarries To Be Opened

Summerville, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—That Chattooga county marble will soon be as famous as the beautiful white marble of Georgia, which is so artistically used in many buildings in the south and the United States, is evidenced by the fact that one of the pioneer marble concerns of Georgia has become interested in the beautiful vari-colored marble which was recently discovered in Taylor's Ridge mountain, a few miles south of Summerville, by Colonel John D. Taylor, one of Summerville's best-known business men.

The Georgia Marble company, of which Colonel Sam Tate, a former citizen of Chattooga county, is president, has shipped much machinery to the E. W. Sturdivant property, a few miles southeast of Summerville and about four or five miles south of the quarry recently opened by Colonel Taylor and associates. He will make thorough tests of the marble, and work of drilling the test cores has already started.

Mr. Taylor and his associates plan to install adequate machinery and put the industry into full operation. Two carloads of the marble have already been shipped for commercial purposes.

Location of Proposed Peachtree Creek Memorial Reservation

Map showing city of Atlanta property along Peachtree creek, part of which is now being used as a sewage disposal plant by the city, and which it is proposed to convert into a great public park upon the removal of the disposal plant, now universally conceded to be imperative.

E. V. Haynes owns ten acres adjoining the city's 125 acres, which he proposes to donate to the city for park purposes, thus carrying the city's property up to the creek line for the whole width. In addition to this other property owners agree to make right of way donations for approach to Peachtree road on one side and to Howell Mill road on the other side.

CAMP MEETING OPENS SOON AT MT. ZION

Griffin, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—Plans are being formulated for the annual camp meeting at Mt. Zion, which this year promises to be the largest and most successful gathering of many years. The camp meeting will begin Friday, August 6, and will last through Thursday, August 12.

The meeting will be in charge of the Rev. B. L. Betts, pastor, of the Griffin district, and Dr. J. H. Eakes, presiding elder of the Griffin district. Among the preachers who will attend are the Revs. R. L. Ramsey, of Atlanta; H. E. Stipes, of Culloden; J. O. Pettis, of Senoia, and T. W. Travis, of The Rock.

The Rev. J. S. Thrailkill, of Zebulon, will be in charge of the singing. Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, of the North and South Georgia conferences, will preach Sunday, August 8, and will probably spend several days at the camp ground while the meeting is in progress.

6TH DISTRICT MASONS MEET NEXT TUESDAY

Jackson, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) The annual meeting of the sixth district Masonic convention will be held with East Thomaston Lodge No. 175 next Tuesday. Prominent Masons from the district, including grand lodge officers, will be present. M. S. Turner, of Griffin, is worshipful master and Colonel T. J. Brown, of McDonough, is secretary-treasurer of the district association.

Practically all Masonic lodges in the district are members and a large attendance is expected. The various lodges in Butts county will send large delegations to the annual meeting.

A. M. E. CONFERENCE MEETS AT HELENA

Helena, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—The Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and Missionary workers of the Hawkinsville district of the Americus (Georgia) conference met here this week.

Rev. A. P. Solomon is presiding elder, Rev. K. D. Shiner, pastor, was elected chief secretary, with Susie James as assistant. Rev. W. M. Bryant, of Abbeville, was elected vice president.

The educational sermon was delivered by Rev. F. Roundtree, who showed marked ability in a practical way. He was followed by T. J. Linton, the financial agent of Morris Brown university, who made very plain the necessity of the people making a large sacrifice in maintaining the university. He believes that the white people stand ready and willing to help.

Resolution was offered commending the presiding elder for the splendid way in which he is conducting the affairs of the Hawkinsville district.

Rev. R. H. Ward, pastor of the Bethel A. M. E. church, Augusta, Ga., was unanimously indorsed for the bishopric in 1928. Rev. T. J. Linton was indorsed for the pension department.

MASONIC CONVENTION PLANNED AT MENLO

Summerville, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—Among the prominent Masons and speakers who have accepted invitations to attend the 25th annual Chattooga county Masonic convention at Menlo on next Wednesday and Thursday, July 28-29, are George M. Napier, attorney general of Georgia; Claude H. Porter, of Rome, and Judge Malcolm G. Tarver, of Dalton.

The full program as arranged by John M. Rose, of Lyerly, who has been worshipful master of the convention since its organization, is as follows:

First Day's Session.

Meet at the Masonic hall at 10 a. m. and organize.

Song, "Nearer My God to Thee."

Prayer by the chaplain, the Rev. G. P. Gary, of Summerville.

Take up business of the convention, such as appointing committees and reading reports of the lodges.

At 12 o'clock adjourn for dinner.

Meet at the hall at 2 p. m. for the election of officers, reading of the reports of the committees and transacting the general business of the convention.

Meet at the hall at 8 p. m. for talks on the general welfare of the convention and probably for conferring the third degree by a picked team.

Second Day's Session.

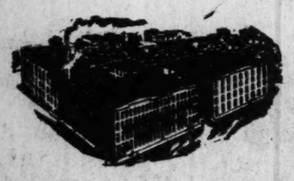

Meet at the hall at 9:30 a. m. for a procession and march to the Baptist church for the public exercises. The singers will be selected from all the churches.

Music. Prayer by the chaplain. Music. Welcome address by the Rev. J. G. Black, of Trion. Response by Colonel Claude H. Porter, of Rome. Music. Address by the Hon. George M. Napier, of Atlanta. Music. Reading by Miss Nellie Shiflett, of Lyerly. Music. Address by Judge M. C. Tarver, of Dalton, on educational lines. Short talks by prominent Masons from Rome and Atlanta. Music. Song, "God Be With You 'Til We Meet Again." Adjourn for dinner at 12:30.

FOR the first time in an automobile of economical production, this Standard Six Sedan duplicates the master creations of custom design!

Swung low in the body—close-hauled in the coach-work—fleet and flowing in its lines—resplendent with the lacquered loveliness of a duotone color scheme—and replete with every detail of correct custom treatment from broadlace trim, Butler finish hardware and Chase Mohair interior to the silvered figure of Atalanta poised on the radiator.

This Custom Six Sedan combines the lines that appeal to a woman and the stamina that appeals to a man—adds custom refinements to the ruggedness of Studebaker performance—offers disc wheels and four-wheel brakes—reaffirms the inflexible standards of Studebaker quality—and invokes anew the great Studebaker tradition of making good with the public by continually making better in the plant!

It is the latest example of the Studebaker policy of progressive betterments, and unites the smoothness and power of the quiet Studebaker L-Head motor with a custom symmetry of line and treatment that would be absolutely impossible, at the Studebaker price, without Studebaker One-Profit facilities.

Come in and see this Standard Six Custom Sedan—mechanically up-to-the-minute . . . Artistically ahead of the time . . . Economically the car of the hour!

Sears, Roebuck's Big Plant Ready for Opening on Date Set After 6 Months' Building

Completion of Structure and Installation of Goods Is Great Achievement for Atlanta, Says Beall.

After six months of construction work, Sears, Roebuck and company is ready to open its store on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Months ago the opening date was set for August 2. Many doubted that the huge building would be completed and stocked by this time and looked for the postponements which are usual in such cases. But, according to L. H. Beall, general manager of the big company's Atlanta house, the store, retail and wholesale divisions, will be thrown open to the public August 2.

"We will open Monday, August 2, as planned," said Mr. Beall. "Due to the splendid cooperation we have received in Atlanta it will be possible for Sears, Roebuck and company to open its doors on the appointed date.

"For six months steam shovels, concrete mixers and riveting machines have been converting the old amusement park into Atlanta's greatest structure. And it's ready now. We have the workmen of Atlanta and surrounding territory to thank. With tireless energy they set about the work of construction, determined to break all building records in this part of the country. This they have done.

"To construct a nine-story building with more than 750,000 square feet of floor space in less than six months is an achievement of which Atlanta can boast. As you view our building, with its floor after floor of solid concrete and steel, you will vision the immensity of the task and appreciate the accomplishment in its completion.

Everything Ready for Opening.

"I would like, on behalf of Sears, Roebuck and company, to express appreciation for this cooperation. The spirit which made possible this outstanding record is one of which Atlantans and Atlanta can well be proud.

"We know now, beyond question of doubt, that we will be ready. The building is ready. The merchandise is ready. The personnel is ready, in short—everything is ready.

"I would like at this time to extend an invitation to all to visit us in our new store. We want to be a part of this great city in the south, to share with our fellow citizens in the achievements of this metropolis. And so, we'd like everyone to visit the store—to see what we have done and are going to do. We've plenty of car parking space right on our own tract."

To gather together more than $1,000,000 worth of merchandise was the task assigned to C. B. Cook, general merchandise manager of the Atlanta store. Already nearly 250 carloads of merchandise have been unloaded at the store and placed on the floors ready for opening day.

"For weeks," said Mr. Cook, "we have been busy getting our merchandise into the proper place. As fast as the builders finished a floor we began the work of setting merchandise in bins and compartments, so that there would be no delay.

"Everything is here now, and we will be ready with what we believe to be the most complete stock of goods ever put under one roof in the south. From pins to furniture, covering the entire alphabet, a total of some 35,000 articles will be available to our customers.

Personnel Is Local.

"We are distributing this week hundreds of thousands of our new catalogues throughout the territory to be served from our Atlanta store. This means that our stocks are complete and our organization ready for business."

C. A. Woods, general superintendent of the Atlanta plant, stated Saturday that the personnel had been engaged and trained and is ready for the opening. Out of the force of some 1,000 employed only a handful have come from territories removed from Atlanta. Sears, Roebuck and company is practically an Atlanta organization, as far as personnel goes.

"The aptitude shown by these Atlanta folks in adjusting themselves to our methods has been most remarkable," Mr. Woods said. "There is no doubt that our service will be of the highest order.

"Into our building we have put every convenience and contrivance which will aid in getting the merchandise to our customers quicker than ever before. This will be the most modern of all Sears, Roebuck plants and embodies the results of some 40 years of experience.

"We have enjoyed the cooperation which it has been our privilege to receive from everybody in Atlanta. It has been a plensure to work here."

A cordial invitation to visit the retail store was issued Saturday by C. M. Lafferty, manager of that division. He stated that the retail department would be open and ready for service with the rest of the huge plant.

Mrs. Brewster To Be Buried.

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma Brewster, 21, of 147 Simpson street, will be held from the residence at 10 o'clock this morning. Interment will be in Hollywood cemetery.

COUCH ANNOUNCES IN MAYOR'S RACE

Outlining a platform to weed petty politics out of city government and asking support of his ticket on his past record in council, Alderman J. Allen Couch Saturday made his formal announcement for the mayoralty race and qualified by paying his entrance fee to oppose I. N. Ragsdale and Charles M. Ford.

Mr. Couch has served as member of the city council for six years and on the aldermanic board for the past two years. During that time he has served on all principal committees of both boards and has advocated economical administration of the government.

J. ALLEN COUCH.

In issuing his statement, Mr. Couch declared that he entered of his own free will and without "the usual solicitation of hundreds of friends," and an ambition of "20 years to be mayor of this city." Mr. Couch was born on a farm in northwest Georgia and moved to Atlanta 20 years ago.

In outlining his platform, he said that he favored every safeguard to be thrown around expenditure of the $8,000,000 bond funds 'to the end that the public get value received for every cent expended and that the improvements in contemplation shall be in keeping with the program of this community."

"I believe that the public affairs should be administered in the most economical way possible to get the best results," he continued, "and I believe that public officials should be held responsible for the expenditure of all moneys entrusted to them, just as they would be if made by and for private enterprises.

Raps Extravagance.

"I believe that waste and extravagance is to blame for some errors in our ordinary affairs of life and I believe that municipal affairs should be administered with the greatest degree of economy, and that the city's income should be adequate, but not excessive, for the purpose of carrying on its activities. With this in mind, I shall oppose any undue raises in assessments in taxation, and will at all times oppose any increase in the tax rates."

One of the most important changes advocated by Mr. Couch was that of a revision of law governing the revenue set aside for schools. Under the present laws 26 per cent is set aside for the schools, but Mr. Couch declared that he would adocvate a 30 per cent annual appropriation, since, he declared, the mayor and general council "have had to furnish more money the latter part of each year."

An extended statement was issued by Mr. Couch in regard to the police department, in which he promised moral and actual support of Chief of Police James L. Beavers.

MORNINGSIDE PARK RECEIVERS NAMED

W. D. Thomson, Atlanta attorney, and Ronald Ransom, trust officer of the Fulton National bank, were named permanent receivers by Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court Saturday for Morningside Park, Inc., realty subdivision.

Judge Humphries designated a receivership Tuesday upon petition of T. R. Bennett, state superintendent of banks, appointing Mr. Thomson and Mr. Ransom temporary receivers until the hearing which was set for Saturday.

Since the filing of the petition, Morningside Park, Inc., has filed an answer, admitting willingness to have permanent receivers appointed. Robert H. Jones, Jr., and Alex Smith, Jr., were appointed attorneys to represent Morningside Park, Inc., in the litigation.

In asking that receivers be appointed, Mr. Bennett's petition set out that the corporation was fully solvent, but that on account of the death of J. R. Smith, active promoter of the project and the principal officer of Morningside Park, Inc., and the proceedings against the Bankers' Trust company, which served as the fiscal agent for the development, it was necessary for the protection of creditors and the purchasers of lots that there should be a responsible head.

WOOTAN'S FRIENDS RAISE ENTRY FEE FOR COUNCIL RACE

At an enthusiastic meeting of representative citizens of the tenth ward Friday night the entrance fee of J. D. Wootan, of 692 Brookline street, was raised for councilman from that ward.

Mr. Wootan has been prominent in civic affairs in the tenth ward for many years and was defeated by W. Garland Cooper, incumbent, in the primaries in 1922 by a small margin. The contest is expected to be one of the warmest of the councilmanic races in the city this year.

Emmett L. Quinn, former president of the Atlanta Federation of Labor, was named chairman of Mr. Wootan's campaign committee. Formal entry of Mr. Wootan was made Saturday when the entrance fee was paid to W. J. Laney, secretary of the city democratic executive committee. The meeting Friday night was held on the lawn of the Oakland City Methodist church and was well attended.

Exhibits To Show Industrial Output Totaling Millions

Auditorium to Overflow With Atlanta Products Being Manufactured at Big Show.

GREAT EXPOSITION TO OPEN AUGUST 2

Practically All Space Already Taken—Will Show Varied Industries Located in Atlanta.

Representative products of Atlanta factories, manufactured articles whose value runs into the millions annually, will fill almost to overflowing next week the big auditorium, where the Atlanta Industrial exposition will be opened to the public for the week of August 2 to 7.

Nearly 800 manufacturing industries are carried on in Atlanta, with payrolls amounting to $3,000,000 a week, according to figures on record at the industrial bureau at the chamber of commerce. Hardly a city in the country has more varied manufacturing interests. Atlanta goods are sold throughout the United States and exported to Europe, Asia and South America.

Not all of these industries will be represented at the big industrial exposition, but more than a hundred separate exhibits are scheduled, and the display will be thoroughly representative of Atlanta manufactures.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants and Manufacturers' association and the Georgia Manufacturers' association, which are sponsoring the exposition, wish to create in the mind of the public a pride in Atlanta's industrial achievements, and to show something of the romance of the far distribution of her products. Recently, the Southern Saw works, one of the exhibitors, sent a shipment of fine steel saws, by ocean freight to Para, the port of Brazil, where it was transferred to an Amazon river boat for a 3,000-mile journey into the tropical jungle. This company sells saws in every section of the world where timber is cut.

Other Exhibits.

Two other exhibitors are the Atlanta Milling company, which has been grinding Georgia wheat and corn since 1883, and the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, which has helped to finance Atlanta industries since 1865. The Atlanta Milling company affords a daily cash market for all the wheat grown in Georgia and yet the entire crop of the state would not run its mills longer than 15 days.

This is the first time the exposition will be held at the same time as "Merchants' Week," which brings thousands of retail merchants to Atlanta each year for the fall buying season. "Merchants' Week" is held under the direction of the Merchants and Manufacturers association, an organization composed principally of wholesalers and jobbers, and this year they will conduct their visitors to the auditorium as a part of the week's entertainment.

Working on the belief that a stationary exhibit is a "dead" one, the manufacturers have entered into the spirit of the show to the extent of showing articles in the process of manufacture and machinery in motion, rather than the finished products. There will be few of the show window type of displays. Many of them will have entire factories in miniature and will employ skilled artisans who will make fine products by hand.

Next Thursday the auditorium will be turned over to the officials of the exposition. Arrangements will be made for the installation of machinery which will be set in motion during the exhibit, manufacturing the actual product before the eyes of the spectators.

Army of Workers.

An army of electricians, mechanics and carpenters will be set to work running extra wiring to supply current for hundreds of motors, installing machinery and building display booths. Practically the entire space of the huge auditorium and Taft hall is under contract, and it is estimated that the current used in the displays that are in motion will be sufficient to run a small city.

During the exhibit week, an excellent orchestra will give a concert every afternoon and evening. A series of motion pictures showing the entire range of Atlanta industrial activities

GERRY PREDICTS SENATE CONTROL BY DEMOCRATS

G. O. P. Seen as Split Into Two Factions and Evenly Divided on the Tariff Question.

DEMOCRATS SEE TARIFF AS ISSUE

Nominess Will Be Asked Whether They Will Vote For Vare, Democrats Declare.

Washington, July 24.—(AP)—A prediction that the democrats will control the next senate was made today by Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, chairman of the democratic senatorial campaign committee, who declared that the republican party was split into two factions, seemingly evenly divided on the tariff.

"The republican party is so badly divided and has been for some time that it could not have organized the senate last year had the full democratic strength voted," he said. "The democrats refused, however, to make any coalitions.

"The country must realize that the only party that has been able to agree on a policy and carry it out has been the democrats and that the republicans in the last session of congress were only able to enact legislation on important measures by democratic assistance.

"The people, in my judgment, have decided that one of the two parties must be in actual control of the senate, able to carry out a legislative program. The democratic party is the only one today which has a party program. It represents sound progressive principles and can be relied upon to carry them out in a sane way."

DEMOCRATS PLAN POLL ON VARE.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, July 24.—All nominees for United States senator will be placed on record as to whether they will vote to seat William S. Vare, republican senatorial choice in Pennsylvania, the democratic national committee asserts in a statement today. The Pennsylvania scandals are linked with the tariff issue, the large campaign contributions coming chiefly, it is asserted, from "over-protected manufacturers." The tariff, it is declared, will be foremost among 1926 issues.

"The most comprehensive undertaking so far disclosed in our political history to buy the whole people of a commonwealth was made in the Pennsylvania primary," says the statement.

"The expenditure of $800,000 in behalf of William S. Vare, who got the nomination for United States senator, presents an immediate vital question of whether a republic can long endure when men secure places of power by money, rather than merit. Backers who advance colossal sums of course expect a return. Under such conditions government cannot retain public confidence.

"Every nominee for United States senator this year should be asked to state publicly before the November election whether, in the event Vare succeeds at the polls, he would vote to seat him or any other man for whom an unconscionable campaign fund was employed."

The tariff ranks first as an issue, it is asserted, both because of the agricultural as well as because of its bearing on excessive expenditures in senatorial campaigns.

"Foremost among issues of 1926 is the tariff," says the committee.

"It is first not just because the democrats would have it so but largely because the republicans, by their record in the recent congress on farm relief and by their use of funds forwarded with a free hand by over-protected manufacturers, for the corruption of elections, have made it so."

LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID MADE ON PROHI CHIEF

Colonel Ned M. Green Tells Reporters He Is "a Human Being and Not Religious Fanatic."

WELCOMES COURT TRIAL, HE STATES

California Administrator Says He Frequently Finds Liquor in His Office and Room.

San Francisco, July 24.—(AP)—Colonel Ned M. Green was suspended today as prohibition administrator for northern California and Nevada on orders from Washington and his supply of alleged confiscated liquors with which he has entertained guests in his hotel room here were seized.

Following his suspension by Gerrard B. Winston, acting secretary of the treasury, pending investigations of misconduct charges against him, Colonel Green was visited in his room at the Hotel Whitcomb late today by government agents, who demanded the liquor in his possession.

Turns Over Liquors.

"You can take anything in the room you want," Colonel Green smilingly welcomed the agents. He then turned over a varied assortment of liquors which almost filled a bureau drawer.

"Some of that stuff may be pre-Volstead stuff and some of it may not," he said. "Don't tell anybody, but it isn't anybody's business.

"It isn't against the law to have liquor in your home or to offer it to your guests."

Charges against the dry administrator will be taken before a federal grand jury Monday.

George Hatfield, United States district attorney, announced he would seek Green's indictment on charges of misappropriating liquor seized by the government and with misconduct in office.

Colonel Green answered that he welcomed indictment and trial because, he declared, it would establish he has not been in possession of governmentally-controlled liquor and has not been guilty of misconduct. "A trial," he said, "will clarify a situation which puts me in a very bad light."

Finds Liquor in Room.

"I have had liquor in my hotel room," Colonel Green said, "but it has been sent to me by friends unknown to me. I frequently find liquor which has been left in my room and in my offices. Friends who have called on me in my room at the hotel have accepted my invitation to drink. My friends know that I drink very seldom and that I won't drink alone. If visitors call on me, I offer them a drink; I won't be a 'death head' and I join them in the drink even if it gags me. I have nothing to fear or be ashamed of in this tempest."

"I have had under my control liquor valued at more than $2,000,000. If I was crooked I could order a barrel or two sent around to the homes of friends. But no one can accuse me of having broken that trust.

"I am doing what I came out here

Flaming Youth Must Quench Thirst Indoors

Injunction Bars Soda Curb Service at Pershing Point.

Sheiks and shebas of the Hemlock section are all agog over a temporary injunction granted by Judge John D. Humphries Saturday which practically compels them to go inside for their chocolate milks and cracked ice at Pershing Point or do without entirely.

The injunction restrains J. L. Coursey from conducting his extremely popular and, according to the petition, extremely noisy curb service unless he does so in a place other than in front of that exclusive apartment house and unless all noises, such as competitive horn blowing, ice cream cone crushing, getting cherries out of the bottom of a glass and shooting pistols of more than 45 caliber are suppressed.

It's just another case of flaming youth, red hot mammas, the reckless age, and wide-open moving picture shows. Quite the thing to do these summer evenings is to park in front of Mr. Coursey's establishment with your boy friend and sip cool drinks. One just has to do it before one takes one's date home to write in one's diary.

W. F. Wimberly, Jr., Atlanta attorney, an occupant of the Pershing Point apartment, allowed in his petition that the outdoor soft drinks at Pershing Point made sleep impossible and life no sweet song. He objects principally to the blowing of horns and the general disturbances which he alleges customers, servants and innocent bystanders create while the younger and more terrible set indulges in that twentieth-century luxury, which is paving the road to eternal damnation for so many of our young; in short, curb service.

The drug store does business until 12 and 1 o'clock at night, Mr. Wimberly alleges in his petition—each night, including Sunday. Not only that, but Mr. Wimberly says that the defendant "has no right at all to convert the public highway (in this case, Peachtree road) into a public reception hall."

The injunction does not completely put a crimp into curb service at Pershing Point. It isn't that bad. But there must be no parking in front of the apartment house and there must be no noise.

Seventeen Deaths Blamed by Police Upon Poison Liquor

Five Arrests Are Made In Hamilton, Ont., and Three Persons Jailed in Buffalo.

SOURCE OF LIQUOR SOUGHT BY POLICE

Ten Persons Die in Hamilton, Ontario, and Seven in Buffalo; Raids Made in Latter City.

Hamilton, Ont., July 24.—(AP)—Five persons were arrested today in connection with a steadily increasing list of deaths by poison liquor, and within a few hours one of the prisoners himself died of alcoholic poisoning. His death brought the total during the past three days to ten. The persons arrested were William Maybe, his wife and two sons, and Bert Dangelo. Against the latter, only a technical charge of vagrancy was placed pending investigation. The others were charged with selling the poisoned liquor. Shortly after his arrest, Maybe became ill and died.

The seven who died today were C. Foreman, of Hamilton; Maybe, George Hill, George Johnson and Thomas Lyon, of Oakville, and Mary Dushere and Paul Finka, of Hamilton. Three men had died previously in Allanburg.

Officials of the Ontario license board and the attorney general's department are trying to determine whether the same supply of poisoned liquor was responsible for all the deaths. They are also investigating any possible connection between the Ontario deaths and those in Buffalo, where four are reported to have died from drinking wood alcohol.

FIVE WOOD ALCOHOL VICTIMS IN BUFFALO.

Buffalo, N. ., July 24.—(AP)—Four men and one woman are dead here from wood alcohol poisoning. Deaths of another man and a woman are attributed to the same cause and two men were in hospitals today, blind as a result of the same poison.

The following deaths have been positively attributed to alcohol poisoning by the medical examiner: K. Verne Jenkins, 38; Anthony Korsak, 40; Mrs. Helen Dillott, 43; Albert Leslie, 47; William Pylzmaien, 35.

Those whose deaths also are attributed by the police to alcohol poisoning are Stanley Wrubel and Mary Gillman. The two blinded are Frank Gernak and George Sokesilwicz.

The trio under arrest are Joseph Banas, described by police as an alleged bootlegger in alcohol; Joseph Sucharski, saloonkeeper, and his wife, Carrie. All were charged with homicide.

Coincident with the wave of deaths from bad liquor, federal dry agents tonight began a series of raids in all parts of the city and suburbs. About 50 places were visited, 125 prisoners were taken and thousands of bottles of liquides, chiefly beer, were seized.

LIQUOR EXPORTERS TO ENGAGE IN WAR.

Detroit, July 24.—(AP)—The Detroit News today says that a war in which virtually all liquor exporters on the Canadian side of the Detroit river are involved will commence early next week when organization of the second "rum trust" on the border will be completed.

The battle to get rid of the two combines which supply Detroit and nearby American cities with Canadian beer and liquor will take place over a 40-mile lake and river front, says The News.

"The Bermuda Exporters, Inc., described as a powerful amalgamation of more than a dozen Ontario breweries with capital estimated at several million dollars, will be on one side, and exporters "frozen out" by the brewers' organization which has refused to continue stocking smaller exporters' warehouses with beer and ale will be on the other.

The breweries combined more than ten days ago to end the cutting of beer prices at export docks. They at once raised the price of Detroit bound beer at the dock from $2.50 to $3.50 a case and now demand cash payment in advance for all loads taken across the river by runners from the Michigan shores.

When exporters not included in this organization sent their orders as usual to the breweries a week ago the orders were refused.

SPILLER TO BUY BALL PARK LEASE FROM MICHALOVE

Owner of Spiller Park Will Buy Cracker Franchise and Lease, He Announces.

BIG DEVELOPMENTS FIGURE IN RUMORS

No Verification of Reports That Department Store or Mail Order House Is To Use Site.

Pending purchase of the 22-year lease on Spiller field, owned by Dan Michalove, president of the Atlanta Baseball company, together with Michalove's Southern league franchise, by R. T. Spiller gave rise to innumerable reports of a big commercial development on the Ponce de Leon site, but no definite information on the matter could be secured.

Spiller late Saturday announced that he would exercise an option on the lease and Southern league franchise given him by Michalove and would again become sole owner of the ball park property and the Cracker franchise.

"I have been trying to buy back the franchise for two years," said Spiller Saturday. "I want to get all my investments close together and be in position to develop them or trade them whenever proper opportunity presents itself."

Spiller stated that there would be no change in the management or personnel of the Crackers as a team at present. Bert Niehoff will remain as manager and there is no present contemplation of adding any new players to the roster.

It is understood that the deal involved approximately $275,000.

Rumors Denied.

The ball park is located opposite the Sears, Roebuck and company store, and rumors were current to the effect that a big Chicago department store was dickering for purchase of the park as a site for a branch store, and that another mail-order concern was negotiating for the same purpose.

Dispatches to The Constitution from cities in which these firms are located, however, denied the truth of the rumors.

It also was reported that Clark Griffith, president of the Washington American league team, was seeking to secure the local franchise and ball park as a training ground for the Senators, where major league exhibition games during training season might be staged and where a farm for the Washington team could be located.

These reports were denied Saturday night in Washington by Griffith, who said he was in no way connected with the matter.

Spiller Former Owner.

Sale of the franchise automatically carried with it the long lease Michalove held on Spiller field, which ran until 1948, with rent practically free.

Spiller was the former owner of the franchise, selling out his interest three years ago to S. A. Lynch, who, after one season, turned it over to Michalove. Rumors have been current some time that the park was to be sold as a site for a business structure.

'Red' Grange Plans To Sue 'Somebody'

Football Star Angry Over Charges Made in Divorce Suit Answer.

Chicago, July 24.—(AP)—Harold "Red" Grange, with whom Charles H. Taylor, of Los Angeles, charged his wife was infatuated in a reply to her divorce suit, today threatened to "sue somebody."

Grange who has said that he knew neither Taylor nor his wife except casually, having met them through C. C. Pyle, his manager, said he did not like the publicity.

"If this matter isn't cleared up," he said, "I'm going to sue somebody. It isn't funny any more. I saw Mrs. Taylor only twice."

LAMP EXPLOSION IS CAUSE OF DEATH OF AGED VETERAN

Lincolnton, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—W. A Flanagan, 83, Confederate veteran and a leading figure in Lincoln county, was the victim of a tragic death this morning at his home at Lovelace, in this county, as a result of burns caused by the overturning of a lamp last night.

It is reported that Mr. Flanagan pulled the lamp off the dresser near which he was lying and in falling it exploded, throwing the oil and flames over his body and the bed.

Mr. Flanagan was sheriff of Lincoln county for a number of years.

ILLINOIS GRAFT PROBERS BEGIN WORK MONDAY

Stories of Vote Stealing and Slush Funds in Illinois Will Be Related at Senate Hearing.

MANY ELECTION OFFICIALS INDICTED

Recount of Vote Cast in Senatorial Races Has Started at Request of Chairman Reed.

Chicago, July 24.—(AP)—All the tales of political chicanery told behind barred doors to four grand juries since Illinois held its April primaries are grist for the mill of a special United States senate election investigating committee which meets here Monday, under the chairmanship of Senator James A. Reed.

Senator Reed's statement that "nature and the common counts" will guide the committee's inquiry is no indication how far it may proceed into the jumble of charges of vote stealing, slush funds, alliances of politicians with gunmen and bootleggers, and other irregularities which have been charged in the last three months.

But these things stand at least as a background for the committee in its particular mission of discovering how much Frank L. Smith and Senator William B. McKinley spent in their contest for the republican senatorial nomination, and how much it cost George Brennan, democratic leader, to crush the faction of his party which opposed him.

Bitter Factional Fights.

The senate fight was only a detail in Cook county of bitter factional contests over nominations for county offices, and Smith and McKinley found their fortunes linked in Chicago and its environs, with the fortunes of the opposing republican factions which supported them.

Charges arising from the county contests already have resulted in indictment of more than a hundred election workers and a complete recount of the vote. The recount includes, at Reed's request, the vote on the senatorial races in both parties. The handling of the Smith and McKinley campaigns in Cook county by the two republican factions embroiled in grand jury investigations of the balloting interlocks the senatorial situation in Cook county with factional combats. And the grand juries have found factional dissension linked with stories of gangs and gang feuds, state prison conditions, and Illinois politics in general.

SEVEN WITNESSES ORDERED TO APPEAR.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., July 24.—Only seven witnesses have been served with subpoenas to appear Monday morning for the slush fund investigation of the Illinois primary of April 13, last. Two witnesses for whom subpoenas have been issued have not been served. One of these is William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, who is spending a vacation in the west. The other is Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney of Cook county, who is having a holiday at Eagle River in Wisconsin. The offices of both men have promised to notify them that subpoenas are awaiting their return and it is expected that both will appear soon before the senate committee, headed by Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri.

The seven upon whom service has been obtained are as follows:

Frank L. Smith, republican nominee for United States senator.

Chester Willoughby, secretary to Senator William B. McKinley who was defeated for re-nomination.

George E. Brennan, democratic candidate for United States senator.

Samuel Insull, head of the Commonwealth Edison company, Gas Company, Elevated Roads, and sundry other public utilities.

Edward H. Wright, member of the Illinois commerce commission and negro republican leader of large influence in the second ward.

Charles V. Barrett, member of the board of review and prominent leader in the Crowe-Barrett faction of the local republicans.

Roy O. West, treasurer of the national republican committee and prominent leader in the Deneen-Lundin republican faction in the primary.

CRIME BODY SEEKS PISTOL SOLUTION

Higher Taxes and Other Measures Urged To Prevent Sale of Pistols to Criminals.

New York, July 24.—(AP)—The National crime commission today turned its heavy artillery to the task of silencing the pistol of the criminal.

Representative Ogden L. Mills led the attack, supported by other prominent speakers, who urged the imposition of high taxes on pistols, a system for registering their sale and the restriction of sale to police, army and navy officers. Representative Mills' suggestions for checking crime were contained in a letter read to the national crime commission's subcommittee which is studying the relation of the sale of small arms to crime.

Indorsing the views of Representative Mills, Commissioner of Police McLaughlin advised the committee that only the police should be allowed to sell pistols.

Tide Reveals Girl's Murder In New Jersey

Jaw Probably Fractured and Many Contusions Found on Body.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, July 24.—The tide at Deal Beach, N. J., today brought ashore the nude body of a girl, about 18, deposited it on the sands, and ebbed, leaving no solution to the mystery.

Very pretty, with dark brown hair and fair complexion, it is believed the dead girl was a murder victim. There were contusions on her face and very little water in her lungs. Her jaw was possibly fractured.

Playing on the beach, Jack Paterno, 7, found the body near his mother's summer estate.

On a preliminary examination police estimated the body had been in the water 48 hours.

Prosecutor John J. Quinn, of Monmouth county and the Deal police have commenced an investigation. A check-up of all missing girls at summer places in the vicinity is being made.

SITUATION GROWS TENSE IN CITY POLITICAL RACES

Candidates Draw Lines For Hot Campaign as Time for Primaries Draws Near.

COUCH ANNOUNCES FOR MAYOR'S POST

Six New Candidates in Last-Minute Rush To Join in Coming Contest.

Lines in political circles are becoming more tautly drawn as the final hour approaches for last entrance fees to be paid in the 24 municipal races. Six more candidates threw their hats into the ring Saturday, and others indicated that they would qualify for various races before August 12, the final day for entrance fees to be paid.

One of the most important developments in the political situation during the week was the announcement of J. Allen Couch for the mayor's race, now making a triangular race with I. N. Ragsdale and Charles M. Ford as opponents. While Mr. Couch had indicated previously he would enter the ranks for mayor, definite announcement was not made until Saturday.

New entrants into the councilmanic race, according to announcement by W. J. Laney, secretary of the city democratic executive committee, are: T. C. Morris, for council from the fifth ward; C. D. Knight and Jack C. Savage, for council from the ninth; W. Garland Cooper and J. D. Wootan, for council from the tenth, and H. M. Rantin, for council from the twelfth.

Only three candidates have qualified for places on the board of education. While there are only three places to be filled at the primaries this fall, other candidates are expected to announce within a few days. Candidates who have qualified for the race in the board of education are: Thomas C. Smith, for the tenth ward; Mrs. Paul West, for the eleventh, and James A. Steele, for the twelfth

According to political observers, a number of warm races are due in councilmanic and aldermanic elections. Recorder A. W. Callaway, of the first division of police court, will be opposed in his race by John L. Cone. No qualifications have been made for judge of the second division of recorder's court, now held by Murphy M. Holloway.

A complete list of qualified candidates for the various positions follows:

For mayor, Charles M. Ford, I. N. Ragsdale and J. Allen Couch; for alderman, from the first ward, R. F. Pennington; sixth ward, R. E. Gann; ninth ward, Alvin L. Richards and Oscar H. Williamson; eleventh ward, Foster L. Hunter and J. C. Murphy; for council, first ward, H. T. Loehr and E. Walter Tripp; second ward, John W. Bolton and Howard C. McCutcheon; third ward, Charles L. Chosewood; fourth ward, J. E. Berman and Dr. C. J. Vaughan; fifth ward, T. C. Morris; sixth ward (short term), Jack Hardy and Harry Roberts; seventh ward, Wiley L. Moore; eighth ward, Frank H. Reynolds; ninth ward, C. D. Knight and Jack C. Savage; tenth ward, W. Garland Cooper and J. D. Wootan; eleventh ward, W. R. Johnson and George B. Lyle; twelfth ward, H. M. Rantin; board of education, tenth ward, Thomas C. Smith; eleventh ward, Mrs. Paul West; twelfth ward, James A. Steele.

GIRL IS KILLED, TWO SISTERS HURT IN AUTO WRECK

Glens Falls, N. Y., July 24.—(AP)—Millicent Lample, 22, daughter of F. H. Lample, of New York city, former United States consul to San Domingo, was killed and her two sisters seriously injured late today on the Glens Falls-Lake George Road when their automobile overturned.

Brown Challenges Talmadge To Joint Debate at McRae

Commissioner Says Court Records in Opponent's Home Town Will Eliminate Him From Race.

TALMADGE ASKED TO QUIT CONTEST

Shettlesworth Would Leave Stewart in Race Against Brown; Hot Cards Are Issued.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

After a week of considerable activity among candidates for state offices, many of whom were in the field making speeches, the political campaign for 1926 swung into a steady stride Saturday and gave promise of some interesting developments within the next fortnight.

Developments of the day were:

J. J. Brown, incumbent in the race for commissioner of agriculture, publicly challenged Eugene Talmadge to meet him in joint debate in McRae, Talmadge's home town, where, Brown said, he would charge that Talmadge's court record as attorney for the board of roads and revenues of Telfair county, proved him unfit to become commissioner.

Brown denied Talmadge's charge that he had assessed members of his force a percentage of their salaries to defray the expense of Brown's campaigns.

J. S. Shettlesworth, anti-Brown candidate, issued a statement challenging Talmadge to retire with him from the race and let Charles Stewart, of Appling county, and Brown fight it out.

Stewart issued a card declaring his campaign is progressing rapidly; that anti-Brown sentiment is crystallizing in his behalf and that Brown's campaign manager manipulated the labor committee in such a way as to get that body to indorse Brown.

Candidates Are Busy.

With the primary election day, September 8, about six weeks distant, the candidates got down to real business during the week and began to conduct their campaigns in real earnest. Chief activity was noted in the race for commissioner of agriculture. The battle for the governorship still appeared to be in somewhat a somnolent condition, with no developments of unusual interest to report.

J. O. Wood, candidate for governor, will speak at Buchanan Monday noon, it was announced at his headquarters here Saturday. Large crowds are expected to be in Buchanan to attend a famous trial scheduled Monday, and Mr. Wood will speak at the noon recess of court.

In the senatorial race, United States Senator George took the field in his opening speech at Greenville Monday and followed with several other addresses in which he outlined and amplified his early campaign statements. He announced Saturday he would go to Savannah Monday to deliver two addresses and would remain in that part of the state several days. Judge Russell made his opening speech at Milledgeville Tuesday.

Commissioner's Race.

Recent developments have been numerous in the race for commissioner of agriculture. John R. Irwin, one of the four "anti-Brown" candidates, retired during the week in favor of Eugene Talmadge after he had visited Talmadge's home and ascertained Talmadge was a "real dirt farmer." Talmadge delivered speeches at Newnan, Rome, Carrollton, Bowdon and Villa Rica and announced he would go to Savannah Monday to speak.

Shettleworth's statement Saturday in which he called on Talmadge to withdraw from the race and support Charles Stewart, of Atkinson county, said if Talmadge would withdraw in favor of Stewart, Shettlesworth would do the same and thus center all the anti-Brown strength on Stewart.

Stewart opened his campaign at Marietta Tuesday where he launched a caustic attack on Brown. His statement Saturday, in which he attacked the recent action of a labor committee in indorsing Brown, charged that James D. Weaver, chairman of the committee which recommended Brown to labor in Georgia, was campaign manager for Brown. He pointed to his record in the legislature, where he said he was 100 per cent for labor.

Brown Issues Card.

Brown gave out a statement in which he denied a charge by Talmadge that he or any of his agents has solicited a contribution from Cobb Holland, one-legged war veteran of Forsyth, and submitted a letter from Holland also denying this charge. Brown denied he had ever assessed

Five-Day Working Schedule

:: U. S. EFFICIENCY CHIEF ADVOCATES COUEISM ::

Urged During Hot Weather

Washington, July 24.—Five days is enough to work in hot weather. Compensate for the loss of one day by starting work the other five days earlier in the morning, when it is cool.

This is the program outlined in the interest of efficiency by Malcolm Kerlin, acting chief of the United States bureau of efficiency, who also advocates a bit of coue philosophy. In brief:

"I am getting cooler and cooler."

"The most logical policy for efficiency," Kerlin said, "Is to add half an hour a day to five working days and give employees a full day off Saturday. The extra time should be added to the morning hours, when it is cool."

Such a heat wave as the country has experienced recently decreases efficiency of workers nearly 25 per cent, Kerlin has found through observation.

"But if all workers," he said, "manual and otherwise, would simply practice self-argumentation and say to themselves that it is growing cooler and cooler, they would not suffer so much from the heat.

"Workers just don't seem able to keep their minds on their tasks when it gets hot. They become languid, inattentative and restless.

"Women are more sensitive to heat than men, and they devote more time to personal appearance in the summer than in the cooler weather. It takes extra powder at extra intervals to keep the face from shining.

"Men acclimate themselves to the heat and while shedding their coats, really don't mind the collar and tie."

Then Kerlin topped it off with this observation.

"In both sexes, there are certain classes who work better in the summer than at any other season of the year."

There is no indication that the government will adopt Kerlin's program of five days a week work, though Uncle Sam's workers get off half a day on Saturday now during the summer.

Gloria Weeps as Marquis

:: HENRI'S PASSPORT LIMIT EXPIRIES ::

Husband Sails for France

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, July 24.—Emotions come easy in the movies, say the wiseacres.

It would have helped some of these wise birds a lot if they could have witnessed the sailing of the Paris, flagship of the French line today when Gloria Swanson parted from her husband, Henri, the now famous Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudraye.

For it was these same cynical ladies and gents who were quick to predict a short-lived romance when Gloria married Henri in France a year and a half ago.

This was their first separation. It was a necessary one. For Henri has been in the country nearly six months—all his passport will allow. He must return to France in order to be admissable again under the immigration laws.

Gloria couldn't go with him at this time. She is busy making a picture. But she could go to the pier, and she did.

Sailing time, 10 o'clock came around. But the gangplank was not lifted. For Gloria was still aboard saying goodbye to her husband. Reporters and cameramen had taken up much of the precious time, and, as was her regal right, she demanded more.

Ten, 15 and finally 20 minutes went by, then Gloria came ashore. She stood on the pier, 20 feet away from the cabin window that framed Henri's head and shoulders.

Tears flowed down her cheeks. Also down Henri's. She hung her head and wiped her eyes, she caught a rose thorny side up that Henri threw and then the boat carried him away.

MAYOR SIMS HITS UPSHAW RECORD

Lithonia, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) Mayor Walter A. Sims, of Atlanta, candidate for congress from the fifth district, in a campaign speech delivered here this afternoon relentlessly scored the record of Congressman William D. Upshaw.

The principal features of Mr. Upshaw's record which Mr. Sims attacked were:

1. Five consecutive years' residence in the city of Asheville, N. C., which he verified by reference year by year to the city directory of Asheville, giving Mr. Upshaw's "home" address at 35 Orange street, 121 Broad street and 24 Woodfin place, with the last entry made in the last edition of the directory printed.

2. His congressional record on absenting himself from roll calls, which the mayor said was "at least one-third and nearly half the time he has been in congress."

3. The claim made by Mr. Upshaw that he is opposed to the League of Nations and the world court, though congress has nothing to do with either and does not vote on them; to which Mr. Sims replied, "his record shows he voted appropriations for the world court, and in behalf of the League of Nations every time any sort of appropriation for that purpose came up, whereas it is my purpose to starve them both to death, even if the lower house of congress does not vote directly on these foreign entanglements."

Never Passed Bill.

4. That Mr. Upshaw has never passed a single constructive bill in congress for his district, and admits himself he cannot do so. In respect to the Upshaw claim that he went on the floor of congress and had the negroes removed from base hospital 48, Mr. Sims read a telegram from Washington saying no legislation was ever had on the subject, none was necessary, and the matter was entirely discretionary with the commanding officer, who exercised it himself.

Probably the highlight in Mayor Sims' speech was his declaration that, though he is the son of a Baptist minister, "I do not hesitate to sound the word of warning to our people that, unless the Baptist church stops 'Weary Willie' Upshaw from riding its pulpit as a hobbyhorse for pure political purposes, to keep himself in public office, it is going to bring the Baptist church into disrepute among the people.

"I want to reiterate the statement I have made before, if 'Weary Willie' will prove that he has put through congress one single piece of constructive legislation benefiting the district he represents in all the time he has been in congress, I will retire from this race and vote for him—and that's a perfectly safe offer for me to make, and still say he's the last man in the district I'd support for anything.

"The same record, too, faces my other opponent, Mr. Steele. In all the service he has performed in the Georgia legislature I fail to find one bill with his name on it, but I do find that he voted against labor on that anti-strike bill; that he sought to nullify the semi-monthly pay bill which was passed in the interest of the working people; that he supported the income tax bill by his vote, and generally was found voting consistently along that line—when he did vote."

Mr. Sims said at a meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Trades "where 'Weary Willie' butted in." Miss Barker asked him, 'Mr. Upshaw, how did you vote on the child labor bill' and 'Weary Willie' replied, 'I was paired.'"

"'Why, Mr. Upshaw,' Miss Barker said, 'you know you were not paired, for I have the record right here in my hand.' He knew he wasn't paired but he didn't know he was going to get caught in his own trap."

Mr. Sims charged that Steele and Upshaw are in a compact, else Mr. Steele could not have known, as he printed, what form of questions Mr. Upshaw would ask the mayor.

Wants Taxes Reduced.

In closing his speech Mr. Sims declared himself in favor of an immediate further reduction in the federal income tax and to continue that reduction until the whole tax is wiped out, and said the prohibition issue is no longer an issue "for it has been settled as much as is the question of slavery. They are both constitutional questions, and only the people of the nation can repeal them."

LIQUORS OF PROHI AGENT ARE SEIZED

to do, stopping liquor at the source. Why don't they investigate that angle of it?"

Colonel Green declared he was "a human being, not a religious fanatic," and has not "come out here with a long nose to snoop into other people's affairs to see whether they had liquor or not." Asserting that his mission had been to cut off illicit liquor at the source, he added that he had made "considerable progress."

The administrator's office has been taken over by Colonel Sam I. Johnson, chief aide to Green.

ENFORCEMENT MACHINE IS HITTING THE ROCKS.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, July 24.—Has the boasted prohibition enforcement machine, built up by General Lincoln C. Andrews, federal dry czar, already hit the rocks?

This question confronted both critics and friends of the 18th amendment following a tumultuous day in prohibition enforcement circles. High lights of the day's proceedings, which critics assert point to a breakdown in the dry organization, follow:

Suspension of Colonel Ned M. Green, prohibition administrator at San Francisco, on charges of irregularity and misconduct in office, by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Winston. Announcement that as a result of the revelations of bribery and graft in New Jersey among coast guardsmen, the coast guard is to have a thorough investigation with the spotlight directed on the rum-running division of the organization.

Andrews Cannot Speak.

Secretary of State Kellogg denies reports that General Andrews has authority to negotiate a new treaty directed against rum-running with England. The secretary also let it be known that General Andrews cannot speak for the government where treaties are involved.

It is reported that congress is to be asked to investigate the activities of the entire investigation unit directed by Major Walton Green, head of the under-cover squad, as the result of testimony in the Dwyer case in New York, where it was testified that A. Bruce Mielaski, an enforcement agent, had received $1,100 a month for his work.

Suspension of Colonel Green is regarded as the greatest blow yet struck against the dry machine because of the fact that General Andrews has always held up the San Francisco enforcement officer as one of the aces of his staff. From the beginning, General Andrews has paid the closest attention to the work of this officer and on several occasions has taken over innovations worked up by Colonel Green and attempted to apply them throughout the country.

Most notable among these was the suggestion that the president sign an executive order permitting the appointment of local, state and municipal officers as dry officials. This suggestion was adopted by Andrews and worked into action by the president. Such a storm of protest developed, however, that it was shelved. Even Colonel Green withdrew his recommendations for the appointment of local officers in his district.

Colonel Green has also been spoken of as a successor to General Andrews when the latter retires this fall.

Green's Suspension.

The suspension of Colonel Green was brought about by the activity of the special intelligence division of the bureau of internal revenue. Alf Oftedal, one of the aides of Elmer L. Irey, chief of the intelligence department, was appointed when General Andrews worked out the scheme of having special intelligence officers take over the investigation and prosecution of big liquor conspiracies. He assembled the facts which will be used before the grand jury next week. Some of the charges against Colonel Green under investigation are protection of bootleggers, padding of government expense accounts and being intoxicated in a public place. He is also suspected of taking government liquor for his own use.

The suspension of Colonel Green followed a conference attended by Mr. Irey and Mr. Winston. After a report sent by Mr. Oftedal had been read the suspension order was issued. It is "pending the investigation of charges" filed against him.

Aroused by the developments in New Jersey, the coast guard office here has started a shake-up of its rum chasing force. Courts-martial have been ordered for the enlisted men held for trafficking with bootleggers.

Taken alone the Green suspension might not arouse any suspicion of demoralization in the dry organization. Critics point out, however, that when the signs of graft in the coast guard, the expected resignation of General Andrews with probably several of his officials in the fall and other developments are coupled with it, there is ground for belief that a break-up is impending.

Some go so far as to predict a complete new shuffle of the dry organization when the present dry chief retires.

EXHIBIT TO SHOW IMMENSE OUTPUT

will be shown every night. Souvenirs by the thousands will be distributed by various exhibitors and special demonstrations will be given at specific hours. In order to keep out stragglers and idlers, a nominal admittance fee of 10 cents will be charged. Tickets will be sold at the entrance and distributed by local manufacturers to their customers who are guests in the city.

The exhibitors are not confined strictly to Atlanta and her suburbs. The Valley mills, of LaGrange, owned by the Callaway interests, have been invited to display their products at the Atlanta show and they immediately agreed to take eight spaces in which beautiful rugs will be woven, and in addition a collection of articles worthy of New England mills will be shown, consisting of new sport knickers, laundry textiles and rugs.

BROWN CHALLENGES TALMADGE TO DEBATE

any person connected with his department any amount of money to be used for campaign purposes. He challenged Talmadge to meet him in joint debate and discuss the question.

Shettlesworth in his statement reviewed the recent "split" in the department of agriculture which led to the retirement of Lem B. Jackson, chief of the bureau of markets, and Fred T. Bridges, assistant commissioner of agriculture, from the department caused by their support of J. H. Mills, also a former Brown employee, who recently retired as a candidate for commissioner. He also reviewed efforts made to get all "anti-Brown" candidates out of the race save one. He expressed opinion that Stewart is the candidate to make the race against Brown and called on Talmadge to join him in retiring in Stewart's favor.

In calling on Talmadge to retire, Shettlesworth said:

"Now, Mr. Talmadge, I will make this proposition to you, open and above board. You have repeatedly stated that you had rather smash the Brown-Mills machine than to satisfy your ambition to be nominated commissioner. If you are honest in this turn the Mills remnant of the machine loose and let it go back to J. J., to whom it belongs. Come out of the race and I will follow you and we will both support Charlie Stewart, the biggest and best educated farmer in the race. Now put up or shut up. J. J. says 'Judas,' 'Brutus' and 'Benedict' stole a part of his machine, and, as a lawyer, you should know what the law is as to receiving stolen goods."

Text of Statement.

Following is the statement in part of Brown concerning the Holland charges and the statement of Stewart in reference to the indorsement of Brown by the labor committee:

"To the people of Georgia:

"In reply to an article published in last Sunday's paper, July 18, 1926, under the headlines of 'Brown challenged in open letter of Eugene Talmadge,' we find the following language:

"'Mr. Talmadge said, the only way that we can judge the present and future is by the past. Mr. Brown cannot deny that in 1922 he assessed Mr. Hillman 5 per cent of his salary, together with the other employees of his department, as his campaign expenses for that year.

"'Mr. Brown cannot deny that last summer, while the legislature was in session, an official from his office went to Forsyth and demanded of Cobb Holland, an oil inspector of Monroe county, who is a one-legged war veteran, $40 to be used in 'fixing' the legislature, as they expressed it to Mr. Holland. Mr. Brown cannot deny that Mr. Holland offered them a check for this $40 and they would not accept it in the form of a check, and Mr. Holland had the check cashed and gave them the money. Mr. Cobb Holland is the son of ex-Sheriff Tye Holland, of Monroe county, and the information I have above cited came from Mr. Tye Holland to J. O. Ponder, clerk of the court at Monroe; Judge Newton, ordinary of Monroe county, and J. M. Fletcher, representative of Monroe county. All of them can be reached by letter or wire.'

Denies Charges.

"In reply to the above statement made by Mr. Talmadge I desire to say that I have never assessed any person connected with the department at any time for any purpose one penny. As to the contribution from Mr. Cobb Holland, the one-legged war veteran, I have never asked Mr. Holland for one dollar for any purpose and have never authorized anyone else to do so. If he was ever approached for one dollar it was without by knowledge or consent, and as proof of what I say I publish herewith a letter written by Mr. Holland, without solicitation on my part, and his signature is witnessed by a notary public, and if Mr. Talmadge is a gentleman of honor he will retract the statement that he made relative to Mr. Holland, so far as I am concerned.

Forsyth, Ga., July 19, 1926.

J. J. Brown headquarters,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen: My attention has been called to an article in a recent issue of The Macon Telegraph, which is misleading. This article states that one W. C. Holland, a one-legged, world war veteran, was called on by one of J. J. Brown's employees to contribute to a fund which was to be used to defeat certain legislation.

I want to state that W. C. Holland was never called on by J. J. Brown or any of his employees to contribute to any fund for any purpose.

It is my purpose to answer the article within the next few days and will send it to you so that you may publish if you see fit.

Very truly,
(Signed) W. C. HOLLAND.

Challenges Talmadge.

"Hundreds of my friends, to whom I feel very grateful, have contributed to my campaign for the purpose of helping me fight just such falsehoods as those hurled by Mr. Talmadge, and the public will bear me witness that these are the same old charges that we have met and successfully refuted in former campaigns.

"In order that the people may know the whole truth, I here and now challenge you, Mr. Talmadge, to meet me in joint debate at a number of places, which will be anounced within the next few days, and especially do I invite you to meet me in McRae, Ga., at a date to be arranged by your friends and mine, as it is your record in Telfair county, both as attorney for the board of roads and revenues and your court record, which is public property, that I propose to deal with, and in the presence of your own people let you answer to your record, and I will answer any charge that you will make against my administration of the affairs of the department of agriculture.

"I shall also speak in Elberton, my home county, and I invite you to met me there in debate.

"I shall charge in my speeches that you, Mr. Talmadge, are unfit to be commissioner of agriculture and will show from the official records of your own county, while you was attorney for the board of roads and revenues, and your county records, that you are unfit and will not do to trust with the affairs of the great department of agriculture. I will charge further that you are circulating falsehoods relative to the administration of the department of agriculture. I shall charge that you, Mr. Talmadge, are a lawyer, but not of the best repute, and that you are not a practical farmer.

"J. J. BROWN."

Stewart's statement follows:

"I note from the press that the Brown machine has had the indorsement of another committee. This machine is wonderful when it comes to handling committees. The amusing part of the affair was that James Drake Weaver, J. J. Brown's campaign manager, headed the so-called labor committee. The question is, can Mr. Weaver corrall the labor vote of the state and deliver it to his boss, J. J., in any such crude manner as this? As they are high-toned, intelligent citizens and voters, I believe they will resent such tactics.

"I wish to say to organized labor that I was a member of the house of representatives for ten years. The last four years of this time I was made chairman of the labor committee at the request of organized labor. I wish to refer you to this ten years' official record and if you do not find that I was your friend 100 per cent, vote against me. Mr. Weaver, Mr. Brown's campaign manager, was in the legislature, too—see if he was your friend.

Progress Gratifying.

"My campaign is progressing to my entire satisfaction. I have been through over 15 counties in the northern part of the state the past week and have heard from my friends in numbers of counties all over the state and they assure me that my candidacy is in excellent condition and the anti-Brown machine sentiment, which is overwhelming over the state, is rapidly centering upon me as a candidate to defeat the machine from the fact that I started the fight in the legislature years ago and was fighting when numbers who are now fighting the machine were either kneeling at its throne or trembling and running away from the fight. I expect from now out to make a most aggressive campaign. I shall make a number of speeches next week in north Georgia and expect to go into every county in the state during the campaign. I say to my friends in all parts of the state to keep the fight going and that victory is certain to reward our efforts."

In the race for governor no statements were given out Saturday. George Carswell, of Irwinton, announced during the week he would open headquarters in the Kimball house soon. Chairman John M. Holder, of the state highway commission, had no statement to make other than that he was entirely satisfied with the situation. Dr. L. G. Hardman made two campaign speeches during the week and J. O. Wood, who also is running for governor, delivered several speeches and announced speaking dates for this week.

Wood announced speaking dates as follows: Waycross, Wednesday night 8 o'clock; Columbus, Thursday night 8 o'clock; Dahlonega, Saturday at 11 a. m.; Cleveland, 1 p. m.; Blairsville, Monday, August 2, 10 a. m.; Hiawassee, 3 p. m., and Clayton 7 p. m.; Cornelia, Tuesday, August 3, 11 a. m.

Talmadge in Hot Attack.

Talmadge, in his speeches, attacked the J. J. Brown administration of the department of agriculture, reiterated the charges of "machine domination of Georgia politics" through this department and presented a list of relatives alleged to be on the department pay rolls by Mr. Brown's direction.

"It is no time to be diverting the interests of the state of Georgia to criminations and recriminations of personal nature," Mr. Talmadge said. "What the people of Georgia are interested in is the record set up by the J. J. Brown regime in his diversion of the department of agriculture of the state from a department for the farming people to a bureau of family employment and a roundhouse for his own political machine. Three times the legislature of this state has been confronted with the necessity for a general house-cleaning, and three times that legislature has been bull-whipped into sidetracking legislation which the state of Georgia has been clamoring for. The auditing department of the state of Georgia has one time gone over the affairs of that department and in its report has presented a statement of fact that this department spends $1,000,000 a year—the figures are those of the state auditor—and that there is less control or restriction on the use of money by the agricultural department than any department in the state government. In other words, the implication is that the department of agriculture does pretty much as it pleases with the state's money and, in the absence of legislation which everybody who has been in the legislature knows Mr. Brown will not permit, there is no cure for it."

Raps Telephone Bills.

Mr. Talmadge attacked the expenditure by the agricultural department of over $9,000 a year for telephone tolls, saying "no matter what sort of claim may be made to try to justify such a waste of money, the actual expenditure was occasioned by the free use of the telephone by the Brown machine for its own political purposes, and if there was any way the telephone call records could be obtained it would be found that practically all that $9,000 went entirely for that purpose."

Mr. Talmadge asserted that agricultural science is no part of the operation of the agricultural department under Mr. Brown, but that he has converted the scientific branches into an army of workers for his own political causes until it now can't be housed on one floor of the state capitol, but overflows the building.

"Even today," Mr. Talmadge said, "J. J. Brown has the high-salaried employees of the state of Georgia, drawing their pay from the tax money of our people, out over the state working exclusively on his campaign, and he can't deny it and tell the truth. The men who are paid $200 and $300 a month by the state are during this campaign period paying no attention to their state duties, but are traveling Georgia exclusively in the interest of their King John. It is the same practice Mr. Brown has employed in each of his past campaigns, only it is more exaggerated now than it was at first, because he has increased the army of employees on the state's payroll.

"I readily admit," Mr. Talmadge said, "that Mr. Brown is a dirt farmer, just as I am, and I assert that he is doing far more dirt farming for himself than he is for the state; that he is spending far more time running his farm down at Baxley—where one of his sons is drawing state pay—than he is in the department of agriculture. What other benefits that farm draws from the state treasury, aside from the pay to the various members of the Brown family, I am not going to attempt to say, because no man on earth knows, but it does draw fully 50 per cent of the time of the commissioner of agriculture, at his full salary and expenses."

List of Salaries.

"I knew, we all knew," said Mr. Talmadge, "that the department was loaded down with kinfolks, but it remained for the Mills-Jackson-Bridges upheaval, which grew out of a Brown family row, to furnish the state the official data. Here's what the Mills-Jackson-Bridges crowd picked out from their own office records:

"J. J. Brown, salary $5,000; Walter J. Brown, son, salary $2,400; Polk Brown, son, salary, $1,200; Vester Brown, son, salary $2,400; Marion Brown, half-brother, salary $1,800; Harvey Brown, nephew, salary $1,800; W. L. Neese, nephew, salary $3,000; E. W. Greenway, nephew, salary $1,200; H. F. Ginn, nephew, salary $1,500; H. W. Mewborn, Polk Brown's brother-in-law, salary $2,400; O. A. Teasley, son-in-law, salary $1,200; O. S. Lee, Walter Brown's father-in-law, salary $3,000; P. V. Rice, kinsman, salary $2,750. That's a total salary list of $28,930 a year to the Brown family, and does not include W. A. Brown, whom J. J. got appointed to a job in the office of keeper of public buildings and grounds, which he has recently left to go to the state highway department at a better salary.

"That's the story. These are the issues. Whether or not the people of Georgia want to keep on paying J. J. Brown and his family $30,000 a year or more, as remuneration for maintaining a shrine at which every aspirant to political office in the state, from senator down to justice of the peace, must worship or else be relegated to oblivion. Whether or not the people of Georgia want to maintain the Brown family and their individual farms at the expense of the taxpayers, or whether they want an agricultural department of their own. Whether or not the people of Georgia want the science of agriculture operated properly and in the interest of betterment and improvement in farming conditions in Georgia, or want the science of agriculture to be continued to be converted into an army of political workers of King Jay Jay. The vote on September 8 will decide."

COMMUNITY CHEST DENIES REFUSAL TO HELP NEEDY

Efforts are being made by community chest officials to locate several indigent persons reported to have visited residential sections recently broadcasting statements they have been declined aid by this agency.

Reports are that the persons have made many other erroneous statements about the chest. Ninety-eight per cent of needy people in Atlanta cooperate with agencies benefited by the chest, it is declared, while two per cent refuse to accept help and go from door to door spreading criticism.

EXPECT $750,000 WORTH OF PAVING IN CITY IN 1926

With street improvements far past the $250,000 mark for the first half of the year, it is predicted in the constructoin department that total paving during 1926 will reach nearly $750,000.

A total of 137,600 square yards of street paving has been completed and the assessments made, according to figures given out by the construction department Saturday. This only includes work which has been completed for the first half of the year.

One of the features of this announcement is the fact that this work includes paving on 45 streets, indicating the wide territory covered by the construction department this year.

Expect To Complete Candler Park Golf Course This Year

Announcement that a golf course probably will be completed this year in Candler park was made Saturday by Councilman C. D. Knight, of the ninth ward.

Mr. Knight said that he had been in conference with officials of DeKalk county who promised work would begin on the course when construction work on Whitefoord avenue is completed. Workers are now rushing to completion the opening of Whitefoord avenue.

This announcement met with instant approval of residents of that section, as the matter has been under consideration for some time. Due to the small acreage in the park the course will be a seven-hole course, it is stated.

Friends Enter Jack Savage in Council Race

Friends of Jack Savage gathered in the office of W. J. Laney, secretary of the democratic executive committee and paid his entrance fee in his race for councilman from the ninth ward. George West is seen in the center handing a check to Mr. Laney. William H. Spratlin, spokesman of the committee, is just to the left of Mr. Laney and next to him is Mr. Savage.

One of the most enthusiastic groups of citizens to meet in political circles during the past week was at the office of W. J. Laney, secretary of the democratic executive committee, Friday afternoon when friends of Jack Savage met and paid his entrance fee for the councilmanic race from the ninth ward to oppose C. D. Knight, present councilman.

William H. Spratlin acted as spokesman for the committee and made the following statement:

"Before publicly indorsing any candidate for city council from the ninth ward this committee of business men, along with a number of others representing every section of the ninth ward, made a careful canvass of the ward and thoroughly investigated the record of Jack Savage, both as a lawyer and as a citizen. We are confident we have made the best possible selection for this important office. We have found him to be a successful young lawyer of 10 years' integrity, energy and ability, unaexperience and a man of unquestioned ligned with any political faction or clique. We confidently predict that his election will secure for the ninth ward an able and competent councilman."

In reply to Mr. Spratlin's statement and making his announcement, Mr. Savage expressed his thanks for the interest shown him and declared that he would lend his efforts toward the betterment of the city.

"I am deeply gratified," he declared, "at this additional evidence of the confidence reposed in me by my friends, many of whom I have made since my formal announcement. If I am elected I shall serve my city and ward tirelessly, fearlessly and conscientiously, to the best of my ability.

"I shall lend every effort to the development of Candler Park, that our citizens and their children may have the benefits to be derived from outdoor exercise and recreation. There is also a crying need for a suitable building to house the branch library in order that the vast hordes of school children may have convenient access to the same. I shall do my utmost to bring about the erection of such a building. I shall vigorously support all constructive measures and oppose the 'ham-stringing' of our department heads, such as school, fire and police, in the furtherance of the selfish political ambitions of any party or faction."

STEELE DISCUSSES ISSUES IN RACE

Palmetto, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) In a speech in which he divided his time between discussing national issues before the people and in answering references made to him by the other two candidates, Leslie J. Steele, of Decatur, candidate for congress from the fifth district, addressed the voters of this section here this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Not Fitted.

"Let me say," said Mr. Steele, "that the present congressman has much to his credit as a man and he has in a measure rendered, at times, valuable service to humanity, but his mental makeup, his temperament, and life characteristics are not suited for the service as a congressman, and for eight years he has been a complete misfit as representative in congress from the great Atlanta district. If he ever meant anything to us, he has lost all his influence in Washington, and his return to congress would mean that the most important district in the south would be practically without representation.

Referring to the claim that Congressman Upshaw maintanis his residence in North Carolina, Mr. Steele said the constitution of the United States specified that the "congressman shall reside in the district he represents" and that it is necessary every two years for Mr. Upshaw to print copies of tax receipts to show where he maintained his citizenship.

Replies to Sims.

"Now, let me come to the mayor of Atlanta," Mr. Steele said, "who is a candidate for congress in this race. In his speech at Douglasville, where I am less known than in the other counties of the district, with ridicule, he referred to me posing as a great lawyer before the people of the fifth. I am not a great lawyer, and have never posed as one. There are few great lawyers in any age.

"He attacks my vote for the income tax constitutional amendment with great vigor, and claims that the state would go to the bow wows under such a tax. He forgets that a large part of the income from the United States government is derived from the income tax. He does not say that he will advocate a repeal of this tax, if he is elected to congress.

Voted for Income Tax.

"Yes, I voted for an income tax amendment. I did more than that. I was a strong advocate for it before the committee and on the floor of the house: I have no apologies to offer and no excuses to make. My object and purpose for voting for this amendment was to take from the lands of this state the burden of state taxation and to distribute the support of our state government among those people who have substantial incomes.

"Mr. Sims knows he has no chance for election. He knows he will not carry a single county in the district. He sees that he will be the third man in the race in Fulton county, and his whole purpose is to defeat me and elect Upshaw. He hopes to throw so much money in this race that it will cause me to spend my all and come out a bankrupt, and if Mr. Upshaw is elected, I will not be able to come back in his way two years from now and he will have the field all alone.

Issues Discussed.

After paying his respects to the running-fire controversy among the candidates, Mr. Steele, in a dispassionate manner, went over some of the issues in the campaign.

"I find that the voters desire to know a candidate's stand upon the prohibition question, and I am always glad to give them my answer. I am in favor of maintaining the 18th amendment and am opposed to modification of the Volstead act. I am not only a prohibitionist in my public record, but am one in my private life, and no man living has ever smelt the odor of liquor upon my breath.

"I am the candidate who first called the attention of the people of Georgia to the necessity of farm relief legislation. As early as March 29, 1926, at Fairburn in my opening speech for congress, I said southern congressmen were asleep upon this question, and that the present congressman from the fifth district did not seem to know that there was pending in the house a bill for farm relief. At that time Mr. Upshaw was resting at Clearwater, Fla., from his arduous duties of making prohibition speeches in Pennsylvania and West Virginia."

Favors Road Funds.

Mr. Steele declared that if elected he would fight for a continuance of the federal aid fund for states in building highways and pledges his support to the ex-service men in any needed legislation. He also declared he was opposed to "any further encroachment upon state's rights by the federal government, through and by means of bureaucracy."

In closing, Mr. Steele touched upon the world court and said:

"As to the League of Nations and the world court, this is a matter not within the jurisdiction of the lower house of congress, exclusively for consideration by the senate. But as it seems to be agitating the minds of so many people, I may say that it seems the American people definitely expressed their attitunde in 1920, and I am opposed to any further agitation of this subject and believe that the senate of the United States made a mistake in accepting the provision of the world court, especially with the present attitude of the American people to anything akin to the League of Nations."

LAHM ORDERED TO WASHINGTON FOR AIR DUTY

Washington, July 24.—(AP)—Brigadier General Frank P. Lahm, one of the two new general officers in the army air corps, has been ordered from San Francisco to Washington for a month of "temporary duty."

Army circles believe he later will succeed Brigadier General Fechet in charge of air training and operations, while General Fechet will go to Kelly Field, Texas, to take command of the largest air corps station.

Will File Petition Asking Referendum Early During Week

The petition asking that a referendum be held on election of city clerk by popular vote, which was initiated by members of the democratic executive committee, will be presented to J. P. Wall, chairman of the committee, early this week, according to W. C. Wilkerson, member of the committee who cirgulated the petitions.

According to Mr. Wilkerson's statement Saturday he has sufficient number of votes assured to place the question before the voters at the democratic primaries, September 22. There were 38 signers of the petition circulated, he declared.

In event the measure fails in the committee meeting members behind the move will circulate a petition among the voters for the question to be placed on the ballots this fall, Mr. Wilkerson said.

Mr. Wall announced that he would call a meeting when the petition is presented. The petition asks for the hour to be at 8 o'clock next Thursday night at the city hall.

Coolidge Discusses Plans

:: HOLDS CONFERENCE WITH WILBUR ::

To Build $5,000,000 Airship

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 24.—(AP) The naval aviation program under the new five-year building authorization was discussed by President Coolidge with Secretary Wilbur, of the navy department today, particular attention being given to the construction of a dirigible three-fold the size of the Shenandoah, which crashed in a storm over Ohio last year.

Mr. Wilbur came here for the week-end on his way to the west coast for an inspection of the United States fleet and took up with the chief executive questions entering into the framing of the naval budget for the fiscal year 1928.

No conclusions were reached, however, concerning beginning construction next year of the huge dirigible, two of which have been authorized by congress. The lighter-than-air craft would have a capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet, be inflated with helium, and cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000, or nearly twice that expended in constructing the Shenandoah.

A number of departmental questions were gone over by the secretary with the president, and a report made on the recent arsenal explosion at Lake Denmark, N. J. Details of the aviation program were withheld under the policy of secrecy which is thrown about all budget estimates until they are submitted to congress.

Mr. Wilbur, however, in receiving newspaper correspondents, said that Assistant Secretary Warner, in charge of naval aviation, was developing a policy and considering a number of matters for development of naval aeronautics.

The secretary also informed the president that arrangements had been made for the receivers of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in California to turn into the treasury at Washington on August 1, $3,500,000 of accumulated profits from operation of the properties during the period of litigation between the E. L. Doheny companies and the government. The funds are above and beyond the amount at issue in the civil suit for cancellation of the lease which is pending in the United States supreme court. After August it was added, $250,000 will be deposited monthly with the treasury by the receivers.

The leases in both reserve No. 1 and 2 in California, as well as the contracts with Doheny for construction of tanks for storage of Royalty Oil at Honolulu have been ordered vacated by the lower courts as a result of suits growing out of the senate oil investigation of two years ago but a final determination is to be made by the supreme court.

Reporting to Mr. Coolidge of the Lake Denmark disaster, Mr. Wilbur said although reports are yet to be received from two naval courts investigating the explosion, it was apparent that the damage was not as great as the $100,000,000 first reported, while the damage to private persons and property was small.

The explosives stored at the arsenal, he added, were largely accumulated during the war and while it would be necessary to replace all the materials destroyed, a gradual program will be worked out for accumulating what is needed.

Whether a new arsenal will be built on the site of the disaster, the secretary said would not be determined until after the court of inquiry has reported but the construction decided upon probably will not be on so large a scale as the plant that was destroyed.

Secretary Wilbur arrived at White Pine camp early today and within one hour accompanied President Coolidge to the executive offices where they discussed navel questions and the chief executive, following his daily custom, attended to a number of other government matters.

In the afternoon they remained at the summer white house for a short time, when Mr. Coolidge left for the William Rockefeller preserve to try his hand at fishing after refraining from his favorite sport for several days.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge with Secretary Wilbur are expected to attend services tomorrow morning at the First Congregational church of Saranac Lake, which has been selected as the church home of Mr. Coolidge this summer.

Mr. Wilbur plans to leave for Seattle Monday morning.

GOVERNORS OPEN MEET TOMORROW

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 24.—(AP)—The paramount problem of state government, state finance and state's rights will be thoroughly devled into by more than a score of governors at their 12th annual conference which opens here Monday.

The governors, many of them accompanied by their personal and official families, will arrive here tomorrow and tomorrow night for the opening session, at which time they will be officially welcomed to Wyoming by Nellie Tayloe Ross, the United States' first woman state executive.

The following governors have signified that they will be present: J. H. Trumbull, Connecticut; J. W. Martin, Florida; C. M. Walker, Georgia; C. C. Moore, Idaho, Len Small, Illinois; Ed Jack, Indiana; John Hammill, Iowa; W. J. Fields, Kentucky; Ralph A. Brewster, Maine; Theodore Christianson, Minnesota; J. E. Erickson, Montana; Adam McMullen, Nebraska; J. G. Winant, New Hampshire; A. T. Hannet, New Mexico; M. E. Trapp, Oklahoma; A. Sorlie, North Dakota; Walter Pierce, Oregon; Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania; T. G. McLeod, South Carolina; Carl Gunderson, South Dakota; G. H. Dern, Utah; Franklin S. Billings, Vermont; Harry E. Byrd, Virginia; Howard O. Gore, West Virginia, and W. R. Farrington, of Iowa.

Three governors will be represented by delegates. These include Judge Samuel White, Phoenix, Ariz.; W. O. Hart, of New Orleans, state commissioner on uniform laws, and John A. Bennett, executive secretary to Governor Pothier, of Rhode Island.

Martin Massacre Violated Treaty, Says Dr. Rogers

Charging that the bird treaty between the United States and Great Britain had been violated, indignant protests against the "ruthless slaying" of purple martins Friday night on Capitol avenue were made Saturday by Dr. Wallace Rogers, ornithological authority, and Carter Whittaker, president of the Atlanta Bird club. A wagon load of the birds were killed, it was reported, and many who have made a study of birds in this section of the state say the slaying was not justified.

"A more serious phase of this affair that many of our citizens seem to have overlooked," Dr. Rogers said, "is that in killing these birds there has been an infraction of the bird treaty between the United States and England insuring protection for insectiverous birds."

In discussing the habits of the purple martin, Dr. Rogers declared that they breed in various sections and congregate in one central spot—usually at a place where they have gathered for generations—to begin their migration south, which takes them as far as Brazil.

Many stories have been written anent "Tom Johnson" who cursed the spot on Capitol avenue when he was denied the hospitality of the "Two Tom's Inn" because he could not pay. This was supposed to have been the cause for the martins swarming at the same spot year in and year out, but it was declared that the birds probably gathered there years before "Tom Johnson's" day, if there ever was a "Tom Johnson" and if he ever had a day.

JERSEY MOTHER GIVEN CUSTODY OF TWO CHILDREN

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Oxford, N. J., July 24.—Mrs. Anna A. Gautier, of Oxford, N. J., today won the custody of her two children, Lucille, 12 years old, and Margaret, 10 years old, through habeas corpus proceedings against Mr. and Mrs. John J. Weber, of Wilmette, before Circuit Judge Ira Ryner.

The two children are beneficiaries of a $100,000 trust fund left them by their father, who died several years ago. Weber was designated as trustee and he has had custody of the children since the father's death.

But Mrs. Gautier, who was divorced from her husband two years before his death, produced the divorce decree which stipulated that she should have custody of the children. Previously, she told the court, she had been penniless and unable to take care of the children, and had therefore allowed their father to have them.

ANTI-KLAN FEELING IN IOWA SERIOUS

Corning, Iowa, July 24.—(AP)—Anti-klan demonstrations here during the last 24 hours have developed a tense situation, County Attorney Ed Fackler asserted tonight and declared he would appeal for state troops in the event of further trouble.

Investigation of last night's disorders in which a mob of about 75 persons attempted to waylay a large group of Ku Klux Klansmen on their way to a meeting, will lead to information being filed against more than 40 citizens, Sheriff J. S. Coakley said.

The sheriff said charges of mob violence and inciting a riot would be brought against the demonstrators before the grand jury in September.

$50,000 BUILDING PERMIT IS ISSUED FOR NEW BAKERY

A permit was issued by the building inspector's department Saturday for a $50,000 bakery plant at Glenn avenue and Murphy street, for the American Baweries company.

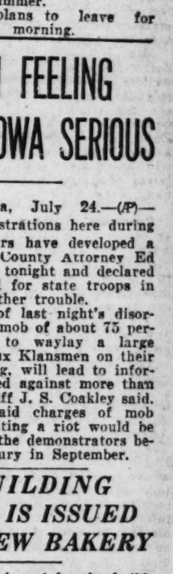

The permit was taken out by the Griffin Construction company. Announcement that the building would be placed there was made several weeks ago by the company, when it was announced that due to the expansion of business the company would have to move into larger quarters.

DUGGAN IS NEARING END OF LONG FLIGHT

Florianopolis, Brazil, July 24.—(AP) Nearing the end of his long flight from New York to Buenos Aires, Bernardo Duggan, Argentine aviator, and his two companions in the seaplane "Buenos Aires," left here today for Rio Grande, 400 miles down the coast.

Reduced Her Weight

Without Dieting, Thyroid, Exercise, Massage, or Use of Harmful Drugs

"I can't express my gratitude to you," says Mrs. H. K. Miller of Michigan. "I had tried several remedies and hesitated trying more, but others told of the great results they secured from Rite-Wate, so I finally made up my mind to get some. I have reduced my weight 27 pounds, and feel like a different person. That slow, dragging feeling has left me, and I feel full of pep and energy now."

Why be fat or burdened with useless overweight? Thousands of women (and men) have been made happy through Rite-Wate and are enthusiastic in their praise of this new, safe way to reduce. It's really surprising how wonderfully well it does the work, whether the reduction desired be 5 lbs. or 50 lbs. or more.

Rite-Wate is a Vegetable Compound in convenient tablet form. Guaranteed not to contain any thyroid, poisonous metallic salts, alkaloids or any other harmful ingredient. Possesses tonic qualities as well. Compounded in one of the largest drug laboratories in the world, thus insuring a thoroughly reliable product. One of the leading drug stores in Detroit says: "In six months we have sold 2500 boxes of Rite-Wate. We have had more satisfied customers on this item than on any similar remedy that we have ever sold."

When so many women, once fat and ungainly, have found the way to reduce and enjoy the charm of a slender, attractive, stylish figure, why not try Rite-Wate and see what it can do for you? Remember—we guarantee it to be absolutely harmless. Money refunded if not satisfied with results within seven weeks.

JANE ABBOTT.

Juliet Is Twenty. By Jane Abbott, whose love for girlhood in general, and happy and sweet girls in particular, tells a lovely story. Twenty! It is a magic word in this century. It means so much to the young girl who with diploma packed away from some noted college is going home to take up the duties of a debutante.

In writing of this Juliet, and she is no different from any other girl of her years, the author writes of the result of the first twenty years, "it is the maddest folly and the most careful prudence wrestling together." And that has been the experience of every Juliet of every age.

This bright beautiful girl is twenty years old and is full of all the ideas that all other twenty-year-old girls have had since colonial days. One day she wants a career, the next day she wants to travel, and then she changes her mind altogether and wants to be the most popular girl in her set with lots of beaux, but especially does she want a certain brown-eyed student to fall in love with her or some young athlete to make love to her.

Among the many things a young girl of twenty wants to do is to have a career of course, and next is to have some young man fall heels over head in love with her, and this is what Juliet wanted. She is also brave enough to dare all Finley if it will bring peace to poor Monty Boyce. "All amber eyes and tawny hair and April changes she takes each fence of circumstance with reckless honesty, leading clear in the radiance of youth and the valiance of her spirit."

How certain it seems that "Twenty" is a time that must be filled with all the ingredients that it takes to make a clever, wholehearted and happy girl. "It recaptures the dream whose colors never quite dull once one has seen their shimmer."

Jane Abbott writes stories that are not only read by the young girls but by every one. They are fresh and usually full of life's cheer. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Nomad's Land. By Mary Roberts Rinehart, whose many readers are now just recovering from the mental condition caused by the puzzling effect of "The Red Lamp," the greatest mystery story of the day, for it was a mystery within a mystery.

Mrs. Rinehart is one of literary-dom's cleverest and most popular writers, a charming woman, and of splendid companionship. Among others her popular stories are "Temperamental People," "The Breaking Point," "K," "Isn't That Just Like a Man," but no story she has written will prove more interesting than her latest book. (George H. Doran company, New York.)

Prodigals of Monte Carlo. is another story by E. Phillips Oppenheim, whose stories are always welcome visitors whether at home, to be read in the den, or at the camp in the mountains, but the masculine gender can no longer be discussed in writing of Mr. Oppenheim's books for they are universally popular with both men and great readers of mystery stories.

The location of his last story occupies the central point of Monaco, a little principality which is perhaps too well known through experiences of many men—among them plenty of Americans who visit Monte Carlo. The central figure this time, is an Englishman, Sir Hargrave Wendever, whose physician, a heart specialist, tells him that he has only a few months to live. Upon receiving this information he interviews three of his best friends asking each one what he would do in the time allotted to him.

The first man suggested a sensation in the financial world—the second advised a "good time at Monte Carlo," and the third, a young rector, asked him why not try to make the people happy who could not be reached by ordinary charity? He promised to do all three and in doing so experienced some exciting times.

Mr. Oppenheim has for years made his home just outside of Monte Carlo, and he has made this the setting for his new story which is one of attractiveness with its natural beauty and interesting descriptions of the countryside, the restaurants, the sporting club, and the men and women who live and die in the clutches of the roulette wheel. It is truly an Oppenheim book. (Little Brown & Co., Boston.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED

The Sleeping Cat. A mystery story by Isabel Ostrander, who is the author of some fourteen popular books of fiction.

The author has woven her story around the renewal of an old friendship of college days—of olive Mercer and Gloria Warrender—who were roommates in Misses Faraday's exclusive boarding school for girls. And now, after ten years, Olive was en route to visit Gloria and to renew old memories and to tell of the new ties that now filled up both their lives.

Pleasure turns into a tragedy! Olive Mercer is found murdered. No motive can be found. Yes, a half-forgotten memory becomes a clue and it is on this that the story is built. (Robert M. McBride Co. New York.)

The Laughing Heart is a new novel by Beatrice Sheepshanks, and the reader will thoroughly enjoy the story which is located "so eerily amid wild beauty on the northern English coast." Here is a lonely looking cottage called "Whispers," and it is the secrets of this cottage on which the author has woven a splendid mystery story, one that will interest the tired, the weary and even the clever fiction reader. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

Rough Justice. Written by C. E. Montague, who begins his most interesting story with a description of the old English houses along the Thames—just out of London—where one especially attracts the attention of the passerby, for it has been in the Garth family for generations. At the present time it is occupied by Thomas Garth, a widower, with his son Auberon, and his ward, Molly.

The story is filled with many interesting incidents from the time of their happy childhood to the day when Molly becomes the fiancee of Victor Nevin. There are several characters whose influence is felt all through the story, among them being Colin March and others.

The scene opens the night that war is declared and, while it's not a war story, it is filled with many experiences around the first days of that never to be forgotten time. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, New York.)

AFTER THE BALL.

Forty Years of Melody. An autobiography by Charles K. Harris, composer, who many years ago sang his way into the hearts of millions with the publication of "After the Ball," a song that was sung all over the world and by the highest and the lowest:

"A little maiden climbed on an old man's knee,
Begged for a story: do, Uncle, please:
Why are you single, why live alone?
Have you no babies, have you no home?

"I had a sweetheart years ago,
Where she is now, pet, you will soon know—
Listen to the story, I'll tell it all;
I believed her faithless after the ball."

The life story of Charles K. Harris will be read with interest by his many admirers. It begins with hard work, a little recreation and then, after years of mixing and mingling with singers, actors, musicians, writers and impressarios, came success. The style of the book has been compared to a gallery filled with the pictures of noted men and women.

The volume is written in a clever style, presenting also the original Mss. of "After the Ball." There are also lyrics and titles of the many songs he has written which became very popular music. In this is included pictures of his old stageland favorites, with reminiscences of the happy days when the popular composer was at the height of his popularity. (Frank Maurice., Inc., publishers, New York city.)

ADVENTURES OF NEW GUINEA.

The Heart of Black Papua. Amazing adventures among the cannibals of New Guinea. By Merlin Moore Taylor, which story, with the many illustrations, is indeed a great adventure, for a party of white men who were sent by the government to investigate certain rumors penetrate the unknown mountain fastnesses of Papua. Of course, the natives of this far-away spot had never seen a white man and the sight of this party caused them to be panic-stricken and naturally ready to fight at the unusual sight, and now and then since then the writer says: "Again I am hedged in by black men whose peering eyes ever seemed focused upon me, waiting and watching for that moment of relaxed vigilance which would give them the opportunity to strike. Again I see them in ever-increasing numbers in the trail before me, their bows tight drawn, their spears poised. . . .

The author gives also a map of the Never Never Land, which gives you an opportunity to locate it and will make more interesting his relation of its people and their mode of life. (Robt. M. McBride & Co., New York.)

LETTERS FROM MEXICO.

The Rosalie Evans Letters From Mexico. This is the true story of the life of Rosalie Evans as arranged from her letters by her sister, Daisy Caden Pettus, with comments which the reader will find most interesting. The volume is attractively illustrated with pictures that will add to the interest of the story.

Mrs. Evans' letters are written mostly from Mexico City, from January 11, 1918—June 2, 1918, and from other places in Mexico to 1924. She writes of many things occurring in Mexico during this time, and says "ruined Belgium was not comparable to ruined Mexico."

After reading this volume, Gertrude Atherton write the publishers:

"This is a great human document, one of the greatest ever written, and one so profoundly interesting and exciting, so cumulative in its interest and so heartbreaking in its tragedy, that I know of no novel or modern drama that surpasses it."

On the cover of the book the reader will see these lines: "Those who have watched the strained relations between our country and Mexico with anxiety will read these letters not only with interest, but with a new understanding." The book is published by Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.

PROVERBS AND MAXIMS.

The World's Best Proverbs and Maxims. By J. Gilchrist Lawson author of "The World's Best Epigrams," etc. This anthology of wit and wisdom is invaluable. Men for many years have been saying things of wit and wisdom which are being handed down and quoted by the next generation, on through all these years these sayings have been carefully guarded for the benefit of the next generation. These sayings or quotations begin with the Bible, and they cover the wise and witty remarks of every country.

For instance. Proverbs says: "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." Genesis: "God created man in His own image." Pope says: "Worth makes the man and the want of it the fellow."

This volume is an anthology of the wisdom of all ages and of all countries, completely indexed and designed, and is invaluable for speakers and writers. (George H. Doran C., New York.)

A VACATION BOOK-SHELF.

"——a book——underneath the bough," sang Omar a few years ago. It was a good line, and still works wonders in making paradises out of wildernesses. Here are a few books that will help you forget what Mr. Fahrenheit's invention is registering "in the shade."

The Red Gods Call: A tale of romantic nights under the southern cross the far-away tinkle of a guitar and the lovely cadences of a dusky girl singing a Spanish love-song. A night, darkly mysterious, laden with the half-felt rumor of a revolution. A duel with bright knives flashing in the moonlight. Away off out there where romance is waiting around every corner to spring at you. Romance!

The Splendid Rascal: Pirates! The Spanish inquisition! Gold, pearls! The luckless king, Charles Stuart, waiting for his doom!

In Bad With Sinbad: A modern Arabian night (and knight!) in Bagdad-on-the-Subway. A tale that takes you from Times Square to Chinatown and back again. This is a good one to read on your next trip to Chicago.

Travel Charts and Travel Charts: Whether you go to Europe this summer or whether you do your Cook's tour on your front porch, you'll want to read Frederick Collins' book. Decidedly new! Charts of where to go, what to see, where and what to eat, all spiced with pungent, witting chatter about this and that. The book itself is a trip to Europe and no bother about passports!

Current Magazines.

The July number of The Connoisseur (New York) contains a special article on the "Ashcroft Miniatures" by Basil S. Long of the Victoria and Albert museum, London. The article is illustrated with twelve plates. Of particular interest, too, is another article by Mary Martin on the "Physionotrace in France and America," which considers the work of Saint Memin and others and is accompanied by 23 illustrations. Besides these and the usual departments of American Art Comment, Sales Reports, Book Reviews, and Notes and Queries, there are articles on "Ancient Church Chests and Chairs Round Greater London," by Fred Roe, R. I.; the "Relics of St. Pierre de Luxembourg at Avignon," by Charles Beard; the "Pottery of the Japanese Tea Ceremony," by J. Gordon Dalgliesh, all of which are profusely illustrated. There is also a report of the British Antique Dealers' association annual meeting, and several interesting color plates including a self-portrait by James Barry, R. A., and the Remains of an Ancient Chapel near Cranbrook, Kent, painted by Frederick W. L. Stockdale, and Sir Peter Lely's portrait of Prince Rupert, K. G., from the National Portrait Gallery, London.

Vanity Fair for August is quite an attractive number with the following headlines a splendid idea of the style of the magazine which is presented in most artistic style. "In and About the Theater" tells what is happening in the theatrical world, among the interesting articles is "Doubling for Don Juan—John Barrymore, An Eminent Star of the Stags Interprets the Great Lover of the Byron Poem for the Screen." "The World of Art" has "Some Recent Portrait Busts by Chana Orloff: "The World of Ideas." "The Strike That Failed," and "The Peril of Narcotics" are among the articles. Literary hors d'Aeuvres includes "Conflicting Aspects of Paris: What is the Matter With My Golf Game; The Ideal Woman." And then comes "Miscellaneous," which the reader will find both readable and original.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

How many novel-writing husbands and wives are there besides Charles G. Norris and Kathleen Norris? A. Hamilton Gibbs and Jeannette Phillips Gibbs are the newest additions to the list, Mrs. Gibbs with "Portia Marries" and Major Gibbs with "Labels," scheduled for publication in August and September respectively.

Glenna Collett, who has recently returned from Europe after the strike in England forced the cancellation of the championship golf tournament in which she was to have played, has written "Golf for Young Players." Miss Collett is amateur woman golf champion of the United States.

Henry Russell, former managing director of the Boston opera house, and later a member of the directing staff of the Metropolitan opera house, was married recently in the British consulate at Paris to Lady Patricia Blackwood, daughter of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, speaker of the senate in northern Ireland.

Owen Davis, who is perhaps the most prolific playwright of the period, is dramatizing Homer Croy's "They Had to See Paris," for production in the fall. One of Mr. Davis' latest published works was "Icebound," which won the Pulitzer drama award for the best play in 1922.

SAFFRON SKIN FROM SOUR BILE

South Georgian Drives Out Enormous Quantity Sour Bile with Dodson's Liver Tone.

After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with sour bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those bilious attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution, so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel weary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights."

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.—(adv.)

Bad Luck and the Devil Pursued Him

"I don't think any one has had more bad luck and sickness than I have. In 1905 I had two ribs, an arm and collar bone broken in a railroad accident. Then I had pneumonia. After recovering I crossed a pasture when a bull chased me, tossed me over the fence and broke my right leg. In 1910 I had typhoid fever; since then severe stomach and liver trouble, which no medicine or doctor touched until two years ago I got a bottle of MAYR'S, which proved the first ray of light in thirteen years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.—(adv.)

Formal Opening of Lake at Avondale Is Set for August 1 Instead of Today

Postponement for a week has been made necessary for the formal opening of Lake Avondale swimmers, and this event, the crowning detail of the summer's program of recreation at Avondale Estates, has been set for August 1 instead of this Sunday, as originally planned.

This change was made necessary, according to John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates, by the failure of a quantity of sand from the sea shore to arrive in time to be laid compactly on the shore and bed of the head of Lake Avondale. The decoration and furnishing of the casino-bathhouse, undertaken painstakingly and at direction of a staff of interior decorators, likewise will not be completed before the end of this week.

Lake Avondale is open, however, for canoeists, and for the pleasure of these a fleet of canoes has been installed, to be obtained by guests at the landings on the shore of the wooded penisula at the head of the lake. On this penisula, thick with trees and grass, has been created a park that is one of the beauty spots about Atlanta.

The Avondale swimming pool, with its distinctive features for water sports, is expected to continue in favor with dwellers of Avondale and their guests. The lake is designed to give a broader opportunity for water sports in the new suburban city without drawing from the popularity of the spring-fed pool.

Interest drawn by the outdoor attractions of Avondale was said by Mr. Byrley to be reflected in high records for sales, with the July figures likely to approach the record mark of $265,649.47 established in June. Sales the first two days of last week were $47,904, and a number of profitable re-sales were reported.

Construction activities in line of the $1,000,000 development program of Avondale Estates are kept pace with the landings on the shore of the wooded penisula at the head of the lake. the details of recreation and sales, with more than 350 men engaged in the schedule that includes paving and improvement of seven miles of street frontage, erection of a new business block, and construction of a minimum of 100 homes in 1926.

SCHOFIELD ACQUITTED OF SHOOTING CHARGE

Mt. Clemens, Mich., July 24.—(AP) William H. Schofield, of Utica, Mich., school teacher, was acquitted here last night of the charge of attempting to slay Mrs. Mattie Mott, aged blind woman.

The charges against Schofield grew out of an investigation into the firing of a shot through a window of the Mott home on the night of June 11. Mrs. Mott had been accustomed to sitting near the window and police charged the bullet had been intended to take her life.

Schofield, a roomer at the Mott home, was charged with having acted the part of a hired gunman for others who would have profited by the woman's death.

FUNDS ARE SOUGHT FOR NORMAL SCHOOL

Americus, Ga., July 24.—(Special.) Major George W. Riley, one of Sumter's representatives in the general assembly, has started a movement here to raise $100,000 to aid the Americus Normal college, which was created at the last session of the legislature. The normal college now has possession of the splendid plant of the third district agricultural school, together with all of the equipment of that institution, but needs funds for current purposes.

The act of the legislature establishing the new college carried no special appropriation for its added maintenance expense, and it is proposed to issue $100,000 in county bonds to supply this deficiency.

It is believed that with this evidence of financial support from the community in which the college is located, that the general assembly at its next session can be prevailed upon to appropriate from $75,000 to $90,000 annually as a maintenance fund, and that the college will at once assume a position of importance among the junior colleges of Georgia.

HOWARD RELEASED FROM MEXICAN JAIL

Mexico City, July 24.—(AP)—John F. Howard, Haverhill, Mass., manufacturer, has been released from jail at Cuernavaca where he has been confined in the warden's room after his arrest at the instigation of his two sons, Albert and John, who charged their father with perjury and bigamy in connection with his divorce and remarriage in Mexico.

Although there has been no formal trial, the judge declared that the evidence was not sufficient to justify holding Howard any longer, and released him under 1,000 pesos bail. Legal experts have expressed the opinion that the case may never go to formal trial.

NORMAL WEATHER PROMISED SUNDAY; SHOWERS LIKELY

With the exception of light thundershowers that are predicted for Atlanta Sunday afternoon, normal weather for this time of the year, with the temperature ranging between 88 and 90 degrees as a maximum, was the forecast for today by C. F. von Herrmann, meteorologist of the local weather bureau.

Minimum temperature for the day, comingly early Sunday morning, will vary between 70 and 75 degrees, Mr. von Herrmann stated. This is approximately the same as Saturday's temperatures, when the morning minimum was 72 degrees and the highest temperature reached during the day was 89 degrees.

The return to normalcy came as a sudden relief from the record-making heat that has been visited upon the city this past week. Reports indicate that relief from the heat wave that has taken a toll of more than 100 lives in various sections of the country is being experienced throughout the country, with the exception of extreme coastal points from Charleston, S. C., to New York city.

BROOKLYN GIRL MARRIES AT SEA, DESPITE WARNING

New York, July 24.—A recent warning by the United States shipping board that marriages performed at sea by ships' captains might be illegal did not deter one Brooklyn girl, who wanted to be married on the high seas under the Stars and Stripes.

Captain Van Veek, of the President Harding of the United States lines, announced upon arrival here that on the insistence of Miss Jeanette Sellinger, 36, of Brooklyn, he had married her to Karl Made, 30, of Germany. Made was going to Greece and and his bride insisted they be married by an American.

PAVING BOND ISSUE VALIDATED AT JACKSON

Jackson, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—The $13,000 worth of paving bonds recently voted by citizens of Jackson to pave the courthouse square and the business district have been validated by Judge Ogden Persons. Surveyors are now at work and as soon as the necessary details can be arranged council hopes to award the contract for the paving.

NATURE'S OWN PARK.

The proposal to convert the 125 acres owned by the city on Peachtree creek, and now used as a disposal plant, into a great north side city park, is meeting general approval. In The Constitution today a number of leading citizens heartily and enthusiastically indorse the proposition, and urge that no effort be spared to carry the conception of Mr. Hallman, chairman of the sewerage committee of the bond commission, into early and definite execution.

That the present disposal plant must be moved there is no question.

That the site, already owned by the city and therefore absolving the city of any land purchasing in the present park program, is ideally situated, and is admirably adapted by nature for park purposes, is illustrated in the full page of photographic views published in the rotogravure section today.

There is no area around Atlanta more beautiful with its primal forests of many varieties, its hills and valleys and stream—typically mountainous in its landscape grandeur, and provided by nature with an inviting attractiveness that limitless resources applied to formal landscaping could not provide.

Added to these features is the outstanding historic value of the site as a memorial park symbolizing one of the imperishable pages in the history of Atlanta, and of the civil war—the battle of Peachtree Creek.

With nature having already largely provided the Peachtree creek site with its varied park attractions, and with the city owning the site, and the demand for the removal of the disposal plant irresistible, there should be no cross currents of opinion as to what the city should do with Mr. Hallman's suggestion that this city land be converted to park purposes.

CURVES AND DIMPLES.

Flo Ziegfeld is the outstanding glorifier of American beauty. He swings his specifications from one extreme to another, like the pendulum of a grandfather's clock. And the world takes notice.

If he says brunettes then the blondes must take a back seat until their season comes around.

So it is now. The 1926 model of the stage, and the famous Follies chorus, must be a brunette.

Of course it is not difficult in the stage world to make brunettes out of blondes. But he perhaps means the real, genuine black-haired, black-eyed, olive-skinned creature with a snappish vivacity, and, of course, the other physical trimmings that go with hair and eyes.

For instance, the 1926 edition provides "curves and dimples!"

That's getting back to old times and to good sense.

Time was, and not so long ago, when the model girl who measured up to standard beauty qualifications had to be built along curved lines, certainly from a reasonable distance above the knees upward. And then a dimple or two, and a winsome smile and a flashing eye—and it didn't make much difference whether the eyes were blue or black just so they were not green!

And then a humanized edition of Jack's bean pole came along to substitute the curves and the dimples. A builder's plumbline had to figuratively drop from the chin and plumb the figure to the feet. Nature's rounded front and curved hips were taboo.

To meet these specifications the anti-fat fakirs have gotten rich, and the bust reducers and hip reducers and all that sort of thing have found as ready a market as bustles did in the '70s. Starvation diet was the accompaniment. Anything to "reduce."

Just how many undertakers got rich in the process of sacrificing health to the beauty formula is a matter of conjecture.

Now Ziegfeld says "more curves and more dimples"—which means more nature, more beauty, more health.

That's real sense.

We are getting back to the fundamentals! Whatever the women may say about it, the men will rise and call Ziegfeld blessed.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

During the fiscal year closing June 30 America's trade balance reached the lowest point it has reached since 1910—and came within a little more than a quarter of a billion dollars registering on the wrong side of the ledger.

The aggregate value of merchandise imported during the year was $4,466,687,000, which exceeded the previous year about 17 per cent, the 1924-25 imports reaching $3,824,128,000.

When one stops to analyze the enormity of these figures, especially for the last year, and then add the high protective tariff and the profits along the line until the consumer makes the final purchases, some understanding may be had of just how much money Americans put into the goods manufactured or mined in other countries and sold in America.

On the other hand, our 1925-26 exports—of which cotton is the biggest commodity item in value—reached $4,753,516,000—an excess of only $286,829,000. In the year preceding the excess amounted to $1,040,452,000.

America must stimulate its foreign trade. It will be a process of international trade retrogression to allow imports to exceed in value our exports—that is, to buy more from the outside than we sell to the outside. That is a simple pad and pencil proposition.

With one exception our imports in 1925-26 reached the highest value in any one year in history. Our exports showed a marked decline. That is a situation that wants to be watched.

There is no doubt that our official attitude toward foreign nations, as emphasized by congress, and by the announced policy of the state department, is causing us a loss of trade and rapidly swinging our trade balance to the wrong side.

We need to cooperate. It is poor economic policy to withhold cooperation that we should offer, and certainly when it does not in any way, directly or potentially, involve us in any of the political entanglements of other nations.

We spend our good money to the tune of four and a half billion dollars a year, plus tariff duties, in foreign trade. We are justified perhaps in doing it, but we are more than justified, on the contrary, in showing such a spirit of friendly relationship to other countries as to demand of them in the aggregate a sufficient trade to offset, with a healthy balance, our imports. This is more acutely true when we realize that America supplies more than half of the raw cotton demands of the world, which enormous item cannot be counted in a strict merchandising balance. Most of our imports are counter merchandise pure and simple.

THE PHILIPPINE ISSUE.

The presence of Carmi Thompson, the personal representative of the president in the Philippines, has apparently stimulated rather than retarded the growing insurgency in that country against American governmental domination. The Philippine legislature, which is amenable to the veto power of Governor General Wood, has just passed a measure calling for an election on the independence issue over the veto of General Wood, and by a majority thereby in excess of that of a year or more ago when a similar measure was passed. There seems to be a growing feeling of resentment at the existing administration, and the presence of a personal envoy of the president does not seem to have helped the situation. As it is the fight has turned even upon the $6,000 a year pension paid Aguinaldo, the old revolutionary leader, because he is friendly to America.

The delegation of American members of congress that visited the Philippines in the summer of 1925, among which was Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, took the firm position that the Philippine people were not ready for absolute independence. The fact is, outside of the native political group in Manila, and in the provincial capitals, the people of the Philippines are opposed to drawing down the American flag and are strongly in support of the Wood administration. It has stood for the material, educational and social development of the islands, and brought a half-civilized, and in many instances savage, people to a state of progress unprecedented in history in the number of years and the circumstances involved.

The Philippine people, under the agreements of peace following the Spanish-American war, and by subsequent agreement with the Philippine people, should have their complete independence at such a time as their ability of self-government of a secure, democratic nature may be established. The progress, marvelous as it is, has not put down the revolutionary spirit to such an extent that a democracy now would be secure from the possibilities of insurrectional troubles. Such a situation must be entirely clarified before the American flag comes down, and this probably will be some years in the future. In the meantime the Wood administration has been autonomous, and the people of the Philippines now have their own congress and local governments established on a self-government basis. The American hand for the present, however, should not be less firm, and General Wood's policies should be strongly supported in America and on the islands.

"A COMMERCIAL CRIME."

The Constitution is in receipt of a private letter from a leading Georgian, and one closely identified with the merchandising of some of the state's perishable products, commending heartily its position that the present distribution of Georgia melons and peaches is inexcusably faulty on the face of the market reports, and not only should be revolutionized, but with sufficient teeth and discipline to prevent the penalization of products that consumers throughout America are anxious to pay premiums to obtain.

This correspondent writes as follows:

"Your editorial of the 21st on market conditions of Georgia peaches and Georgia watermelons is timely and to the point. You are charitable in stating that present conditions amount to 'almost a crime.' They in fact amount to a commercial crime and is further evidence that the producers must organize themselves into a body for the express purpose of marketing their own product without interference from individuals or agencies whose only motive is selfish gain at the expense of both the producer and consumer. Such an organization must be constructed around the principle of cooperative marketing without any element of speculation or profit to itself. The farmers who own the sales organization should employ only men whose record of achievement in actually advertising and merchandising farm products will warrant them in giving to the organization complete control of the product to be marketed and full cooperation in their marketing policies."

This is true, and such an organization is needed not only to protect investments already made, but as a guarantee to future operations, It is needed to carry into effect the economic principle of serving the consumer by eliminating the lost motion in the chain of distribution—especially of food products.

There is no occasion for experimenting. It has been done with other commodities and in other communities. An efficient organization of the nature cannot be built over night. It must be built soundly upon the basic principles of cooperative marketing, and it should have the hearty and pledged cooperation of at least a majority of the larger producers. That is to say, to become effective it must control at the basis of supply at least the major portion of the merchantable commodity thus organized. In such an organization there must be the complete elimination of conflicting organizations handling the same Georgia product. It can avail nothing to have one peach cooperative marketing organization handling the products of one group and another the products of another group. In other words, the commodity itself should be organized, otherwise the keystone of cooperative marketing will collapse under its own weakness.

The manner in which Georgia watermelons and Georgia peaches have been handled this year is sickening to everybody except the consumer. In more than half the primary markets of the country the consumers have been paying fancy prices for the Georgia products under circumstances unknown to them that reduce the income to the growers to less than actual costs of production.

It is time to start now, and start with a militant spirit to correct the present weak and spineless method of marketing the finest peaches and the finest watermelons produced in America. This is a problem that the producers themselves must solve, but in its solution the banks, refrigerating companies and other collateral interests must heartily and constructively cooperate.

MORE CHICAGO CRIME.

Chicago has long been notorious as the "gunman" center of America—that is to say, as the outstanding relic of the old frontier days when the ready pistol swung from every cartridge belt, and when the man "quickest on the pull" held the nine points of law and order, and self-preservation, in his favor. It seems to be more than the center of gangsters and gunmen, making it also a center of homicide. When it even comes to election frauds, Chicago and Cook county seem to have Philadelphia and Pittsburgh shoved off the mat. The grand jury has thus far returned indictments against 109 election officials, charging frauds and corruption in the April primaries, and dispatches from the ringside say the real bout has just begun. At any rate, the situation has reached the interesting stage where a county judge ordered a recount of all the votes cast in Cook county in that primary, and a dispatch from Chicago contains the alarming information that "upward of 200,000 false ballots" have been uncovered.

Thus again is America's primary system brought into disrepute. The coordination of federal and state laws governing primaries in which United States senators are nominated seems to be necessary, and certainly a general strengthening of state primary laws on the basis of universal uniformity, eliminating not only the opportunities for corruption, but the expenses of candidates, is not only necessary but vitally urgent. The state primary laws in America are running a neck and neck race with the prohibition laws, all falling into the discard of public opinion through weaknesses, connivances, corruption and deliberate defiance.

The primary must be made clean and democratic or we must return to the old convention method. Fundamentally, the primary doctrine is good. The practice is bad. There must be a revolution, or our nominating elections will not only become auction block propositions, but monumental forces in so far as interpreting the letter and spirit of popular government.

A BAD SHOWING.

After almost seven years of alleged prohibition enforcement under the Volstead act, which is the statutory vehicle for carting the 18th amendment, involving enormous government expenditures paid by federal taxation, the startling statement is made by Major Chester P. Mills, prohibition administrator for southern New York, that "at least 15,000 'speak-easies' are running wide open in New York at present."

The major number of saloons, and other places at which liquors were obtainable prior to the prohibition law, was 10,000 in round numbers, and this had been reduced almost 2,000 at the time the Volstead act went into effect. It is seen, therefore, that instead of prohibition being enforced in New York, the whisky traffic is 50 per cent greater than it was under its legalized sale—attended with all of the misery and crime and underworld sordidness that goes with such an open, flagrant defiance of fundamental and statutory law.

Everybody who visits New York and takes the trouble to learn the facts knows that it is as wet today as at any time in its history, except that it now takes conniving and patronizing with the bootleggers and the underworld, whereas before there was at least a legalized respectability thrown around the purchaser of liquor who wanted to be respectable.

But the increase in the traffic—as shameful and as alarming as it is—is not the worst feature. The cemeteries and the mad houses and the hospitals are filled with men and women who have become poisoned through drinking of the thousands of kinds of deadly intoxicating concoctions that are being sold—not only in New York, but everywhere else.

Worse still is the report from Washington city, where the nation's power engines should act most easily and efficiently, that in the past 12 months arrests for intoxication increased 17,875 over the previous year and figured out one arrest for less than every six minutes of the year. Surely, if the Volstead act is a wise and workable one it should present its most convincing proofs in the national capital, but in truth the showing of its inefficiency is more glaring there than in most cities of the nation.

Even that is not the worst feature, although it is difficult to conceive of one more menacing to a robust, virile American manhood. The social licenses that are tearing at the morals of young and old—especially of the young—created very largely by the conditions that a lack of prohibition enforcement have created, cuts the deepest into the heart of the American home.

The whole prohibition situation, saturated in corruption, striking at the most vital and sacred tenets of human existence, defying law, and promoting crime, is a nightmare. Something must be done—the conscience of America must be aroused to its necessity—to either enforce the law as it is written, or so change it as to make it enforceable. No good citizen wants the bar-room back. But no good citizen wants a continuation of that which is as bad or worse. There is no sense in trying to hide the facts. Instead of prohibition enforcement getting better it is getting worse, and as the traffic increases so do deaths and invalidism and crime and dementia.

The moral status has changed fronts. It is no longer an argument for our so-called "prohibition" to teach the virtues of sobriety and the horrors of liquor. Sobriety and virtue, too, are in hazardous company along with our present brand of unenforced prohibition. Instead of serving the good and laudable cause of temperance, the present situation is stimulating a tragic condition of intemperance.

Perhaps Valentino may merely make a paying picture of a duel and let it go at that.

Perhaps American tourists in France are not paying money enough to please the hard-up Parisians.

THE MIDNIGHT SEEKER

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I heard the Thunder
With the midnight roll
As I went out to seek
For the peace of my soul;
An' the scritchowl scritched
From the old dead tree,
With Lightnin' blazin'
Of the way for me.

Oh, the Han' that's higher
Is the Han' you must hol'
When you're jes' a seeker
For the peace of your soul.

The Witch-Win' listened
To the tale I tol'
When the sinner went a-seekin'
For the peace of his soul;
It took it up to glory—
To the streets of gol';
An' Heaven heard my story
For the peace of my soul.

Oh, the Han' that's higher
Is the one you must hol'
When you fly from fire
For the peace of your soul!

Dr. Connally Relates Interesting History Concerning Early Days of Atlanta

Editor Constitution: With further reference to early Atlanta, about which the Historical society has asked me to write, it occurs to me to mention the first "barbecue" I ever attended in Atlanta.

It took place about 1854 or 1855, the time of Buchanan's presidential canvass. It was held at Walton springs, under a bush arbor, with split logs for seats. These springs were located near where the Baptist Tabernacle now stands, on Luckie street, and were the head of a branch running through a dense woods west of Peachtree street.

The important thing about the barbecue was the presence of the three most prominent men in Georgia at that time—Senator Toombs, Alex Stephens and Homer Virgil Milton Miller.

Mr. Toombs made a splendid address in the cause of Mr. Buchanan, which he pronounced "Buke-hanan."

Mr. Stephens made a talk after Senator Toombs, which impressed me very much. He had a sharp shrill voice and dwarled out his words in a most amusing manner.

I was a small boy; it was my first barbecue, and a notable occasion for me, seeing for the first time these three great men, of whom I had heard so much.

My thoughts next go back to one of the most prominent citizens in Atlanta and Georgia in the late 1855s, Governor Joseph Emerson Brown, known as Georgia's war governor.

As a young man Joseph Emerson Brown taught school in Canton, Ga., and studied law. He borrowed a small amount of money and went to Yale for one term.

I have often heard him tell of his first visit to Atlanta, in 1847 (when it was Marthasville), on his way to Yale. He said he arrived here during a hard rain, and transferred his little trunk himself, from one train to another, through the mud and rain.

After completing his work at Yale, he started home, stopping off in Washington to visit his "ideal" statesman, Senator John C. Calhoun, who came from his native state. He wanted to meet him so he called at Mr. Calhoun's rooms, where he found a number of other people waiting for him. After Mr. Calhoun had seen the others, he came over and sat down by Joseph Brown, and asked him where he came from. Mr. Brown told him that he lived in Canton, Cherokee county, north Georgia. Mr. Calhoun asked him why he did not go to Atlanta. Mr. Brown said his first thought was that he had never heard of Atlanta, but upon second thought remembered that while at Yale he had heard that Marthasville had been changed to Atlanta. He asked Mr. Calhoun if he had ever been to Atlanta, and something about it. Mr. Calhoun told him that he had never been to Atlanta, but that a railroad would run by his home in the northern part of South Carolina to Atlanta, and that some day Atlanta would be a great city. (Mr. Calhoun's home was where Clemson college is now, and the location can be seen from the railroad.)

Sometime after Joseph Emerson Brown returned to the south he became governor of Georgia, and served four terms. After serving eight years as governor, he remembered his conversation with Mr. John C. Calhoun, and moved to Atlanta from Milledgeville, Ga.

A LOOMING BATTLE

Prohibition Must Meet Its Ordeal

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Can you blame sincere persons, who favor the abolition of intemperance from our social and industrial life, for being skeptical of the wisdom and efficacy of our present national prohibition scheme? Yesterday The Constitution printed a news dispatch from Washington city stating that in the nation's capital, in an area of six square miles with a population of half a million, the wet arrests by the police for the year ending June 30, amounted to 93,204, an increase of 17,875 over the year before.

One Arrest in Six Minutes.

Do you get what that means? More than 255 arrests for public drunkenness for every day of the year, plus 10 for every hour, or more, than one arrest for every six minutes, day and night, from year's end to year's end!

And that, too, at the heart of the government with the dynamos of national power in full gear; with the president in the white house and congress in almost continuous session in the capitol, and the responsible chiefs of prohibition enforcement functioning (or not) in the treasury department and the department of justice! If prohibition falls down in such circumstances, where will it stand up?

Firing Public Anger.

Such stark-naked facts, not alone from the national center, but from all parts of the country, are attacking public faith on both the value of the Volstead law and the honesty of national enforcement operations.

The great majority of the pepple want the nation to be sober. They intend that it shall come to that status as thoroughly as human power can establish it. And they are rapidly growing convinced that the way to that condition is not this one into which they have been led by Volstead and Wayne Wheeler. They want that "something better" which will produce the effects they meant to secure by the adoption of the prohibition amendment.

* * * *

The Big Fight Coming.

Senator Tyson, of Tennessee, who is an ardent dry, was reported in The Constitution yesterday as saying that "the liquor question will be the overshadowing issue in the next campaign," and he has full warrant for saying so. But if a large proportion of the people were not discontented with prohibition as it is the question of what more to do about it could not be made a political issue—much less an "overshadowing" one. The fact looms, however, that so many of the people want a popular verdict for or against Volsteadism that their demand cannot be longer and safely evaded.

* * * *

False Charge of Treason.

Is it treason to the constitution to suggest its amendment, or to reform a law made to enforce any of its provisions?

The words "treason" and "traitor" are used altogether too lightly and falsely in such connection. The constitution says:

"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

It applies in cases of actual war by exterior enemies. Aaron Burr could not be convicted of treason and Jefferson Davis, president of the so-called southern rebellion, was never tried for his presumed treason.

* * * *

Counsels of the Wise.

Long ago Archbishop Whately warned England that "the best security against revolution is in constant correction of abuses and the introduction of needed improvements. It is the neglect of timely repair that makes rebuilding necessary."

Thomas Jefferson said "the real friends of the constitution in its federal form, if they wish it to be immortal, should be attentive, by amendments, to make it keep pace with the advance of the age in science and experience."

President Jackson, replying to objections to certain proposed constitutional amendments, wrote to the congress that "evils which can be clearly traced to an organic defect in the constitution ought not to be overlooked through a too scrupulous veneration of the work of our ancestors," and that applies equally to the work of our contemporaries.

President Andrew Johnson said to congress in 1868 that "the timely revocation of injurious and oppressive measures is the greatest good that can be conferred upon a nation. The legislator or ruler who has the wisdom and magnanimity to retrace his steps, when convinced of error, will sooner or later be rewarded with the respect and gratitude of an intelligent and patriotic people."

Now, were those great men advising treason?

* * * *

Let Us Go To Bat!

The fact is that the time has come to go to bat over this aggravating condition, and let us go to it!

Let the drys agree to stand pat, or offer any substitute they think they can afford, and challenge the people to confirm their position.

Let the wets get together and agree upon a plain, concrete proposal that will offer a sensible solution of the nation's greatest problem and go to the people for its indorsement.

Only by some such "showdown" can congress and public opinion be informed and guided in the work of restoring law and respect for the constitution.

The Coolidge Enigma

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, July 24.—(Special Correspondence.)—Three important dispatches, all appearing on a single morning last week, composed a sign of reviving interest in national politics appropriate to the beginning of the important campaign for the election of an entire lower house of congress and 33 senators next November.

The first, coming from Des Moines, Iowa, quoted the venerable Senator Albert B. Cummins as saying on his arrival home from his service in the senate:

"One doesn't know that President Coolidge will be a candidate or that he wants to be a candidate. My own prediction is that he will not be a candidate. I think he will have had enough of it by that time. It is an immense task and few men last through it. I think Mr. Coolidge has been a very successful president in all but one thing, and that is his policy toward agriculture."

Washington took notice of that dispatch; interpreted it as meaning what is implied by the familiar witticism, "Here's your hat; must you go?" In some quarters, at least, the startling pointedness of the sentiment was minimized by recalling that Senator Cummins has recently been defeated for renomination.

Incidentally, this latter view of Senator Cummin's remark was the one reflected in the comment that came from President Coolidge's summer home in the Adirondacks, where the newspaper men sent out dispatches saying that Senator Cummins' mood was to be interpreted as the natural pessimism of a venerable senator recently retired by an ungrateful constituency. This comment did not come from President Coolidge himself, nor did any other comment. The Adirondack angle of the episode illustrated, however, a disadvantage that goes with the usefulness of President Coolidge's institution, known as "the official spokesman." President Coolidge, both in Washington and in the Adirondacks, sees the newspaper men twice a week, on Tuesday and Friday, with the stipulation that he is not to be quoted and that whatever he says, if used, is to be given out in the words of the correspondents themselves as being, without quotation marks, the views of the president. The newspapermen, to bridge over the stipulation, occasionally mention a "spokesman for the president" as the source of their authority. The situation is well understood by the public, has frequently been described in detail and in many respects is definitely useful to the public, to the newspapermen and to President Coolidge. Nevertheless, it can sometimes lead to a confusion which may occasionally embarrass the president. There are times, like the occasion of Senator Cummins' interview, when the president has said nothing and has not seen the newspapermen, but when somebody else in the president's entourage says a thing which the newspapermen attribute to "a high authority." On such occasions it is possible for the public to confuse "a high authority" with the "spokesman for the president," and consequently with the president himself. In the present case the fact is, of course, that President Coolidge made no comment on Senator Cummins' utterance, and would not be likely to.

All this, however, is incidental to the main theme of the present article.

The second of the three dispatches whose coincidence had importance came from C. Bascom Slemp. Mr. Slemp formerly was secretary to President Coolidge. Before that he was for many years that unique thing, a republican congressman from Virginia able to hold his seat steadily year after year in one district of that democratic stronghold. Before that, and since that and at all times, Mr. Slemp was and is a principal wheel in the inner mechanism of the republican party, able, shrewd, urbane; with a sharp perception of that valuable political quality, knowledge of when to fight and when to compromise, and instant capacity to do either with equal grace; with fine understanding of both branches of political psychology, that of the populace and that of the convention room, and endowed, also, with the important political quality of forehandedness—the type of leader who brings his delegates to a national convention with the necessary understandings arranged in advance and knowing pretty well what is going to happen. (In fact, things don't often "happen" in politics. As Will Hays used to put it: "Things don't happen; they are brought about.")

Mr. Slemp's utterance, as befits the man, was carefully phrased. He said:

"It is, of course, well known that there will be a demand that President Coolidge accept another term, and only if the president declines to respond to this demand will the field be open to others. I should say that these others, besides Speaker Longworth, are Lowden, Dawes, Hoover and Watson. Mr. Longworth is in a good position, from many points of view—his achievements as speaker, his many years of efficient service in congress, his geographical position are all points in his favor."

The public, quite justly, expects the newspaper correspondents to know what these episodes mean and to explain the significance of them. Most of us know what they mean, but to explain the significance of them to the public is difficult because the public thinks such utterances and such positions taken by political leaders mean something concrete and final, whereas the fact is, these gestures, nearly two years in advance of a presidential nomination, are the tentative opening moves in a most intricate game, during the course of which leaders may change their position, may even pass from one side of the board to the other; or other elements in the situation, the attitude of other leaders—and, most of all, the attitude of the public—may cause the result to seem very different from what would be forecast if these opening gestures determine the outcome.

It is a fact that many leaders and workers, big and little, within the republican party want the next republican candidate for the presidency to be someone other than Mr. Coolidge. Considerably more than half the leaders in Washington want this; and presumably the wishes of the workers throughout the country are in about the same proportion as the wishes of the leaders in Washington. The leaders and workers never were for Coolidge. He is not in the presidency as the result of their efforts nor as the normal outcome of the way things work within the republican oganization.

Mr. Coolidge in his present position is an accident wholly; his position as president is the result of an accident, Harding's death; and before that his position as vice president was the result of an accident. The accident that gave Mr. Coolidge his nomination for vice president, that lifted him from the merely local status of governor of Massachusetts, to the national status of republican candidate for vice president, consisted partly of the fact that a delegate from Oregon named McCamant happened to have a quicker mind and a more commanding tone of voice than another delegate to whom had been committed the task of putting forward Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, for the vice presidential nomination.

At least McCamant's superior mental agility and more penetrating voice was the final step in a series of accidents. To tell fully the story of the 1920 vice presidential nomination which resulted in Coolidge being president today would include not only the fact that Senator Lenroot was the candidate intended by the leaders, but also the incident preceding that, when the late President Harding, having got his own nomination wanted Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, to take the vice presidential nomination, which, if he had accepted it, would have made him president today.

This last detail, by the way, illustrates how fluid a thing is national politics, and even our national government—how difficult it is to predict at any time what kind of administration we shall have two or three years ahead. If Hiram Johnson had accepted either one of two proffers of the vice presidential nomination that were made to him during a single week in June, 1920—one from the friends of the late Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, and one from Mr. and Mrs. Harding—in that event, Hiram Johnson instead of Calvin Coolidge would have been president today. The difference would seem material to persons who think of national administrations in terms of conservative or something other than conservative.

Mr. Coolidge, having got his elevation through means other than the ordinary wishes of party leaders and party workers, has never since had from them the kind of loyalty that leaders and workers give to men who have long been one of themselves. Mr. Coolidge, for example, has not the touch, the feeling, the emotional relation to party leaders and workers that men like Lowden, Dawes and Longworth have. More than half the leaders, big and little, in the republican party, would let out a yell of delight and joyously join a stampede to nominate Lowden for the presidency in the same headlong spirit with which, for example, they actually did nominate Lowden, even against his will, for vice president in 1920.

Many of the same leaders would join with equal delight in a stampede to nominate Dawes for the presidency. In 1924, after Lowden had been nominated and had declined, the convention nominated Dawes for vice president against the preference of Coolidge, and Coolidge's representatives at the convention for other candidates.

With equal delight more than half the leaders and workers would yell with joyous frenzy over nominating another whom they regard as one of themselves, Speaker Longworth. In all these cases it is the friendly touch that weighs, the long association, the remembrance of shoulder-to-shoulder comradeship in past conventions and other past political intimacies. In this respect Longworth has larger assets than any of the others. He has been in congress 20 years. Spread throughout the country, in every one of the 435 congressional districts, are ex-congressmen to the aggregate number of several hundreds who have held the office at one time or another, who have stood days and weeks and months in the same room with Longworth, who regard him as a personal friend or a personal acquaintance. These ex-congressmen are likely to be party leaders in their respective communities. The combination of them, working together all over the country, would make a most effective phalanx for any candidate. The mere fact that a local leader or worker can look forward to the chance to say that the president of the United States is an old-time friend or acquaintance of his weighs much.

It is not merely these particular workers and leaders who would prefer another rather than Coolidge as the next republican candidate for the presidency. In the senate and in republican public life generally there are many groups who have distaste for Coolidge as president because of definite reasons. The western farm representatives in the senate and house are opposed to Coolidge for obvious reasons. It is their sentiment partly that Senator Cummins expresses, although Cummins is less typical than some of the other farm leaders. All the progressives in the house and senate—they are a formidable group—are opposed to Coolidge because they think of him, from their point of view, as an arch-conservative.

If the preference that Coolidge should retire were confined to the progressives and radicals it would not be formidable, but more than half—one might say almost all—the conservative leaders would prefer to have another rather than Coolidge. Senator Watson, of Indiana, is himself named among the rivals of Coolidge. Many of the conservatives in the senate and house are for somebody else rather than Coolidge through the operation of the same psychology already described. Most of the republican congressmen and senators are a part of the fraternity of leaders and workers that makes up the republican organization, and share the fraternity's emotions already described. Quite a considerable number of party leaders and workers who have friendly relations with the old Daugherty-Harding group must feel deep grief over the Coolidge administration's indictment of Harding's friend, Daugherty. (Incidentally, Daugherty's trial is set for September 17. If it comes off on that date, in the midst of a campaign, it may have some picturesque effects on the election and on the whole republican organization. It is possible for that trial to be extremely spectacular.)

Some other republican leaders and workers don't like Coolidge because he does not act to clean up scandals that have risen in the local republican organizations of some southern states. Yet other republican leaders are against Coolidge for reasons no more weighty than the fact they do not find his personality sympathetic to their personalities.

All in all, if there were a secret poll of the republicans in the house and senate, especially in the senate, on the question, "Do you want Coolidge renominated, or do you prefer an open field?" the result probably would not give Coolidge as many as ten out of the fifty-five republican senators.

Nevertheless, the first law of the republican organization is self-preservation—self-preservation, that is, in the organization sense, which means party success. The first wish of the organization, above all individual preferences and individual prejudices and individual emotions, is the wish to keep the republican party in power. On that most of the jobs depend.

One need not express it so narrowly or synically. The wish for party success may be described as partly, indeed, as mainly, a loyalty to the organization and loyalty to the ideas which in the minds of republicans are

Hundred Year War for Legal Reform

English Lawyers Fought Against Changes in System.

(This is the second installment of an article by Professor Edson R. Sunderland, of the law school of the University of Michigan, in which he portrays the century of struggle through which the English public obtained their present system for the administration of justice, and describes the remarkable efficiency of that system. In today's installment he shows how the legal journals at first opposed all reform in the law, but finally became convinced that the legal profession would be crushed if it did not surrender to the demands of the public.)

From the side of the legal profession the struggle may be followed through the pages of the law journals. The Law Magazine was founded in 1828, as a defensive measure for rallying the bar against the impending storm. The leading article in its first number was a brazen and undiscriminating panegyric of common law pleading, in which the criticisms of James Mill and the Westminster reviewers were referred to as "such ribaldry" that there was "no manner of reply which well-bred persons can employ." (1 Law Mag. 2.) The Legal Observer, established in 1830, and the Jurist, in 1837, joined forces with the Law Magazine in defense of the traditional privileges of the bar. None of them at first realized the extent of the popular revolt nor the intensity of public feeling and were inclined to treat the matter rather cavalierly. Annoyance over the impudence of lay criticism gradually changed to resentment as the attacks on the profession increased in frequency and bitterness, and this in turn gave place to serious apprehension and alarm. Even the lord chancellor seemed to have deserted the profession and gone over to the enemy. (7 Leg. Obs. 321.)

The War Against Lawyers.

In 1843 the Law Times was organized as a new ally of the hard-pressed forces of the bar. Its first editorial revealed the situation and defined the issue. It was entitled "The War Against the Lawyers," and was a rallying cry to the profession to awake to the dangers which pressed on every hand. The emoluments of the bar were seriously threatened, and energetic means of resistance must be promptly devised. (1 Law Times, 15.) Other appeals followed, in which the two branches of the profession were besought to forget their fancied differences, for, says the Law Times, "Surely lawyers have enough to do to repel the attacks of the common enemy, without turning their fratricidal hands against each other." (Same, 65.)

The defensive campaign was not an impressive exhibition of good strategy. But the position occupied by the profession was intrinsically very weak—much weaker, indeed, than most of its members were possibly able to understand. Many of the arguments advanced to meet the broad grounds of public complaint were striking instances of the unintelligent rationalizing by which instinctive or inherited prejudices are given a formal justification.

Defends Dilatory Procedure.

Perhaps the greatest scandal in the whole judicial system was the dilatory procedure of the court of chancery, yet the Legal Observer disposed of it with a wave of its wand. "For the last 250 years," it said, "the complaints against the present system have been continual and unvaried," yet "the court of chancery and its machinery . . . has remained nearly the same in every particular. It is obvious, therefore, that . . . the supposed evils . . . cannot, after all, have been very enormous, or they would not have been thus endured." (2 Leg. Obs., 401.) The delays in the queen's bench were shown to be a blessing in disguise. "What an incalculable benefit it is," says the Jurist, "that in the length of time which must elapse before a cause can be decided in that court, passions have time to cool, the angry feeling that prompts to litigation may subside, and if there are some obstinate spirits who are disposed to fight to the last, their ability to carry on the warfare is put an end to by the ruinous expense of the long protracted contest." (2 Jurist, 73.)

More Judges, Usual Remedy.

Such reasoning was worse than useless, and only demonstrated the bankrupt state of the profession as a social force. Hardly less pathetic was the argument for more judges. This was the standard solution for every judicial emergency, and was one which lawyers could always suggest with sincerity and contemplate with equanimity, for it required no change whatever in familiar practices and offered the additional attraction of more judicial appointments. But the British public, with its strong business sense, refused to believe the true remedy for defective machinery was the employment of more engineers to keep it going.

Reforms came gradually, by means of an incredible number of small bills and amendments, which not only familiarized the profession with new ideas during the slow course of the debates, but introduced actual changes at so moderate a rate that the bar became reconciled to one reform before the next was forced upon it.

County Courts Extension Bill Passes.

As demands for reform spread and their ultimate success became clear to the profession, self-interest urged participation in framing the rules for their operation. After all, the lawyers would have to use them, and no one would suffer so much as they from a crude and unworkable procedure. The line of resistance, therefore, varied. A few reforms, which might be defeated, were to be fought to a finish; those which were inevitable were to be brought under professional direction and control. Cooperation thus became a more effective method of self-protection than opposition. In 1850 the house of commons passed the second reading of the county courts extension bill with a staggering majority. It was an unexpected blow to the bar. But the jurist said: "What is it that . . . the lawyers are afraid of? . . . We will answer for them. They are afraid of a legal revolution, and, without power to avert it, they are letting the conduct of it slip from theirs into other hands. . . . To sustain the actual (present) system . . . is impossible. To remodel it . . . may be possible, if the profession will stand forward to lead, not to obstruct, the reform." (14 Jurist, pt., 117.)

Lawyers Forced to Take Lead.

The advice that it was better to lead than to obstruct the popular movement for reform represented the best opinion of a profession which had known nothing but defeat for a generation. In following it the lawyers were only submitting to the fundamental laws of social adjustment. As a result they presently found themselves enlisted with the reformers, presenting conservative views with which to temper the enthusiasm of the public, and supplying the technical skill necessary for the design of suitable remedial processes. It therefore happened that when the final major campaign opened over the judicature acts, the belligerent parties discovered that the war was really over. The issues had been fought out, and a sound basis for a mutual understanding was already at hand. The judicature acts and the rules prepared under their authority codified the results achieved through the years of struggle for reform, and gave the administration of the law a new status and a new spirit. The people had taught the profession that its primary duty was public service, and the profession had convinced the people that it could meet the public demands.

There were three elements in the English situation which determined the course of the reform movement. They were the centralized bar, the centralized courts, and the centralized press.

Center on Inns of Court.

The bar was not only concentrated in London, but was further localized in the inns of court. It was a definite, tangible institution, heir of ancient tradition and tenant of vast estates. Its members were not a mere aggregate of individuals, but an organized group, with a well defined social and political status. The administration of justice had for generations been committed to its care, and every one knew it. All the conditions therefore existed for focusing public attention upon the bar as the visible cause of the abuses in legal procedure.

But the abuses themselves required the emphasis of centralized aggregation to make them appeal to the imagination of the lay public. Popular opinion does not search far and generalize easily. Widely scattered courts might exhibit many judicial shortcomings without attracting public attention, but if all the defects were concentrated in one court or one closely affiliated group of courts, so that they could be seen and felt in all their cumulative magnitude, the situation would present dramatic possibilities. So it was with the superior courts of law and chancery in London. They were collectively chargeable with all the judicial mismanagement of the kingdom, and the aggregate of instances, when marshaled against them, made a most formidable indictment.

London Press Enters Fight.

There still remained the problem of publicity, and this was met by the centralized London press. The journalistic activity of England was concentrated in London and, with a few conspicuous exceptions, like the Edinburgh Review, English public opinion found its entire expression in the London newspapers and magazines. There was no other bar but the London bar to compete for the public attention; there were no other courts but the London courts to share the public interest, and there was no other press but the London press to discuss and criticize and condemn the administration of justice.

The striking feature of English reform was not the results accomplished, wonderful as they were, but the fact that legal procedure was brought under public, not professional, regulation. A definite and intelligent public opinion was developed as to the means and methods of judicial administration. Early in the struggle it became perfectly clear that delegation of the control of procedural technique to the legal profession was a policy which was socially unsound. "Improvements in it (procedure)," says a writer in 1843, "never can by possibility be effected till definite opinions as to its real defects and the true modes of cure shall prevail among those not in the profession of the law. As a science it is nearly where it was in the dark ages . . . The mental accumulations which are the skill of the judge and the lawyer in their art, are heaps of prejudices, things prejudged and stumbling blocks, when they begin to investigate procedure as a science. . . . We want, therefore, men of business, men of the world and men accustomed to broad scientific researches, associated with lawyers in this work." (38 Westminster Rev. 107-120.)

The Times Assails Legal Profession.

The Times repeatedly pointed out the same limitation as a fact to be constantly remembered by the public. Thus in 1851, it wrote: "There would seem to be something in the profession of the law which blinds its votaries to the defects of any system which they are called upon to administer. . . . The example of their fathers, the tone of the treatises from which their knowledge is derived, the authority of the judges, the very atmosphere in which they practice—all are calculated to withdraw the minds of lawyers from any endeavor to reform the law." (London Times, editorial, July 19, 1851.)

And the Edinburgh Review reminded its readers that the unanimous disapproval of the judges of proposed measures for reform should not be taken too seriously, because of "the direct interest which each of them must have in preserving the law . . . in its present state," an interest which inevitably blinded them to the needs of the public, for "there is no task so repulsive as that of unlearning in old age the lessons of our youth." (99 Edinburgh Rev., 574.)

Mistrust of Lawyers Grows.

Such views, which were widely held and frequently expressed, particularly exasperated the profession, and called forth the most sarcastic and cynical replies. (1 Law Mag., 349.) But the course of events indicated that the public was serious in its belief that reform of the law could not be safely left to lawyers. The numerous professional committees and commissions which were charged from time to time with the duty of investigating and reporting upon various aspects of administration of justice were soon appraised by public opinion as mere political pretenses.

As early as 1842 the Legal Observer was noting with alarm the growing tendency to exclude lawyers from parliament, saying that there were at that time only one prominent chancery lawyer and only one leading common law lawyer in the house of commons. (23 Leg. Obs., 354.)

Professor Sunderland will continue his discussion in The Constitution next Sunday.

Mountain Minister Expresses Appreciation

Editor The Constitution: It is not possible for us here to express our gratitude for the presence in our audience from Sunday to Sunday of so many "vacationists" who are spending their summer vacation in this section of the mountains of northeast Georgia. We are grateful for their presence because we feel that it shows their loyalty to the church and the principles for which it stands; and also, that they are in sympathy with our efforts to further the kingdom of our Father. Unquestionably these people are representative of the best who come to our mountain section. We do not say that some of the best do not attend our services. But a handshake with these who do attend the services of our churches and a look into their sincere faces reveal in them sterling characters who have heartfelt human sympathy and a desire to promote God's love and righteousness in the communities to which they may go.

And we are thankful that they choose to exert their influence in such a way, and especially do we appreciate it in them as visitors to our community. And we appeal to the sense of justice, the true, edifying, brotherly love on the part of all who come to our section, and entreat the active cooperation of all our visitors in making our mountain sections a better place for men to live, rather than places for physical, moral and spiritual relapse.

LIGHTS OF PARIS

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

This year there will be 500,000 tourists in Paris and 250,000 of them will be Americans. Most of them will not stay any longer than a week, two weeks at the utmost. A good many see Paris in a day, Holland in an afternoon, Germany in 24 hours, and Italy by night. This would not be so bad if they, upon their return, did not set themselves up as authorities on the habits, customs, religion, morals, art, literature, status of midwifery and the comparative merits of orangeade and native German, Italian, French or Spanish wines.

The day is long gone when the French stared in curious amazement at the horde of strangers. As a matter of fact nobody is much interested. Hotel keepers and ladies of the evening excepted, of course, and others who are benefiting directly by the invasion.

Still this change is something that came during the last 20 years or so. When this writer was a little boy roaming these neighborhoods and the advent of an Englishman or American was heralded, half the population got excited and took pains to have a look at him and make the best impression possible on His Majesty, the Tourist. This is all changed now. The French shrug their shoulders. They are not less hospitable than in the old days, but they are not interested in the old way.

There are many reasons for this coolness. In the first place there is the exchange. The French are a proud people. Now with their little franc matched against the big dollar and the bigger yet pound sterling and the mighty Dutch gulden and Swiss franc, they feel they are at a disadvantage. They are not meeting the stranger on an equal footing. Often the stranger also makes them feel their poverty.

Then there are other reasons, of course. I seem to detect a similar spirit to that encountered in some places in America. This contempt for foreigners, this spirit that calls other people wops, bohunks, frogs, hunkies, etc. It's not a generous spirit and not a liberal one, but it's here as well as in America. A sort of perverted patriotism.

To the average tourist Paris is nothing but the boulevards, the Moulin Rouge, the Apollo, Harry's American Bar and some hotel. They judge the whole of France by that. At its best it's a poor advertisement. For these places deliberately exaggerate the worst sins of the French, their craziest perversions and the habits of their most decayed and rotten citizenry. This is held up as a mirror of French life. And as such your average tourist accepts it.

As a matter of fact is has nothing to do with French life. For the same thing can be seen and heard in the night joints of Berlin, Bucharest and Bruxelles, Alexandria and Port Said, Beyrouth and Damascus can stage worse orgies than the wildest night haunt on the Butte Montmartre and for lewdness the German capital by far surpasses the city on the Seine.

The element that benefits by tourist trade poses as the genuine representatives of the French nation. The genuine French people pay no attention to tourists and keep themselves aloof. The result is that the Americans and French don't know each other at all.

And the real French people refuse to be known and seen in the same manner as one sees a museum or a monument, that is to say for the payment of a certain amount of money. And every self-respecting American will sympathize with this sentiment.

GLIMPSES OF HOLLYWOOD

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Hollywood, Cal., July 10.—(Special Correspondence.)—Many and lively were the goings-on Friday afternoon on the "Annie Laurie" set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's. Lillian Gish and Norman Kerry were enacting a scene in the huge hall of the Castle of Glencoe wherein Lillian as Annie Laurie comes to warn Norman Kerry, as Ferguson, that he must sign the treaty of the clans or Scotland will be lost. It was a very serious moment, Ferguson in love with Annie, but nettled with her and she trying to talk above the din of the bagpipes. A large Scottish stag hound raised in America was lying at Kerry's side and the pipers proved too much for him. That stag hound lifted his muzzle and told high heaven what he thought of the pipers. Lillian giggled, Kerry grinned and the hound finally had to be led out and calmed.

Scotch jokes seemed to be the order of the day and Holbrook Blinn, a Scotchman himself who is playing the Laird of Glencoe, was recounting several. One that raised a general laugh was that of the two Scotchmen, one of whom complained of a large sliver in his tongue. "Mon," said Angus, "how come ye to get a sliver in the tongue?" "Weel," said Sandy, "Ah was joist aboot to take a drink when Ah dropped the bottle." "Wood alcohol," remarked a bystander.

Lillian Gish was an enchanting picture as Annie Laurie in a black velvet dress with tiny fitted bodice and huge hoop skirts and white lace collar. A cape long with tiny shoulder capes bound in mink was accompanied by a bonnet of brown, shaped much like a sun bonnet, with loose hanging cloth to protect the curls of the wearer against the inclement weather of the highlands. Many long blonde curls were bunched on each side of her face which increased the fragile ethereal look of her in the old-fashioned garments.

Norman Kerry, wearing bobbed hair and with his six feet something, clad in the swaying, pleated kilt, was no less striking. Norman proudly displayed some antique Scottish cutlery he was wearing in the form of a long horn-knife case trimmed with silver and jeweled and engraved. The case carried the short sword which served as a weapon and also a knife and fork and spoon, each with a large jewel in the end of the handle that made a perfect camper's kit for a highlander of wealth in those days. In Castle or on the heath each man had his own cutlery which helped make up for lack of toothbrushes in those times.

Patricia Avery, the stenographer who pounded her keys unnoticed in the offices of the studio for several years and who was selected to go higher and become a film actress recently, is playing Lillian Gish's sister, Enid. She, too, had her hair dressed in the short curls worn at that time, but when she went to the wardrobe to have another dress selected for her she pulled her curls back straight from her face and said, laughingly: "Here, pull my hair back tight. I'm going to give Lillian all the breaks."

A few minutes later Norman Kerry came up to admire the large and very thick wedding ring she was wearing as the wife of James Striker, in the picture. "My gosh, you are married, with that ring, aren't you?" asked Kerry. "Oh, that's not a wedding ring," she came back, "that's the band off a peanut butter jar."

Incidentally, Hollywood dope says that Anita Loos had Lillian Gish in mind when she wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," getting an unholy kick out of the thought of Lillian speaking the lines of the heroine. Peg Talmadge, mother of Constance and Norma, is also supposed to be represented as the Dorothy in the book. Miss Loos once took a sea trip with Peg, who is a very interesting character, and used a lot of the lines Peg spoke in real life.

At a recent party of girls in Hollywood, which included some women writers and picture actresses, the conversation began to drift towards slightly naughty stories. Lillian Gish is said to have been present, and when the party had begun to get interesting Lillian said: "Oh, let's talk about birds; I just adore wild life."

Hollywood gave an enthusiastic audience to Valentino's new picture, "Son of the Sheik," at its premiere on Thursday. Valentino himself was present to receive the applause in person and many celebrities were scattered through the audience. In Rudy's own party were Mae Murray and her new husband, David Divani, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Chaplin, Marion Davies, Pola Negri, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eyton (Kathleen Williams), Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook Blinn and Jack Gilbert, Edmund Goulding, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Reachi (Agnes Ayres) and Claire Windsor and Bert Lytell.

Mae Murray wore a chiffon gown of different shades of apricot with an ostrich collar and apricot scarf. Pola appeared in a simple white crepe gown with plainly cut coat to match and a small white hat and a corsage of pink roses. Kathlyn Williams was dressed in a blue crepe dress done in sequins, accompanied by a plain pink crepe shawl heavily fringed. Madame Elinor Glyn appeared quite the grand dame in blue and cream and silver brocade gown with a silver brocaded scarf wrap. Claire Windsor was smartly attired in black velvet trimmed in ermine, with which she wore a broad, floppy hat. Agnes Ayres chose shades of jade green for her costume, which consisted of a simply made crepe gown and an elaborately embroidered Spanish shawl of green. Lita Grey Chaplin contrasted her black hair and eyes with gray georgette made with many pleatings and trimmed with a fluttery scarf. A small grey chapeau accompanied her costume.

Several marriages of interest took place during the last week. First of these in the attention attracted was that of Ben Turpin to Babette Elizabeth Dietz, of Bismarck, N. D. The Rev. Father Michael J. Mullins of the "movie church," the Church of the Good Shepherd, in Beverly Hills, officiated and the bride made a sight for sore eyes in an afternoon dress of gray chiffon trimmed in silver lace wearing a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley and a large satin picture hat. While Babette was giving Ben an eyeful in this stunning costume Ben gave Babette a platinum bracelet encrusted with diamonds for a wedding present and the couple departed for San Francisco on a honeymoon tour that will continue through Yosemite National park in Ben's own car. Ben will not drive it, though his type of optic might be helpful to see around the curves ahead. Ben proved an intrepid and whirlwind wooer as he had only known his bride a few months when he proposed to her. Babette confesses she was not aware of his admiring glances for some time, but on his proposing she accepted him at once as she feared his eyes might wander further. All good wishes go with Ben for he proved himself a devoted husband during the long illness of his wife who died last year, giving up picture work and all outside interests to be at home with her.

Ralph Ince, screen actor whose career dates back to the early days of pictures at the old Vitagraph studios in Flatbush and brother of the late Thomas Ince, professor, was married to Lucilla Mendez, dancer and screen actress. A honeymoon to Hawaii will follow.

Josef von Sternburg, born Joe Stern, was married to Risa Royce, actress and assistant director with Sternburg on Edna Purviance's new picture, "A Woman of the Street," on Tuesday afternoon by a justice of the peace in Sherman. Miss Royce played the starring role in the stage play, "Dancing Mothers," in New York, according to local reports.

Mary Astor has just announced her engagement to Irving Asher, who is one of the business managers at Warner Brothers. They are to be married within the year and the romance dates from their association when Asher was business manager on Barrymore's "Don Juan," in which Mary plays the heroine. Mary's own name is Lucille Langhanke.

The recent tragedy of the explosion of the Chaffee yacht at Catalina had several picture people figuring as heroes. Tom Mix's yacht, the "Miss Mixit," was first to the rescue, and Jim Lowshe, a nephew of Jean Straton Porter, was a close second, using his yacht to aid in the rescue. Lou Tellegen was on the deck of his yacht smoking when the Chaffee yacht blew up not more than 50 feet away. Lou dived into the water and took out a woman whose feet had been blown off. Not all bravery is performed for the camera.

Hollywood, the city of rumors, has another one. Charlie Chaplin will not play Napoleon to Raquel Meller's Josephine. In spite of Charlie's published announcement to that effect, skeptics here say that party will never come off for several reasons. One is that Raquel is slated to make a picture for Sam Goldwyn with Ronald Colman in support in the fall on her return from abroad. Rumor has it that Charlie's first fine fire of enthusiasm has been cooled by more mature reflection and that as he has never attempted drama before, he realizes he would be foolish to make his first attempt opposite such a highly dramatic person as Meller. Everyone knows that Charlie has a "yen" for playing Napoleon, but is willing to bet that it won't be with Meller as Josephine. It is considered probable that Charlie may direct her, however, in a picture.

There has always been a lot of argument about "what is a typical New Yorker?" One famous man said that a typical New Yorker was always raised in a small town. A bunch of extras who answered an ad for the aforesaid typical New Yorkers appeared to about the number of 20. Each one had a different sort of foreign accent, yet on being asked, each knew his New York from the Bronx to the Battery. They settled the difficulty at the studio by hiring 'em all, as accents won't photograph anyway.

An Appealing Picture Of What Georgia Offers Her Boys

Editor The Constitution: There are Georgians, landowners, living out of tin cans today, and of the plug in the left hind hip pocket, whose life business is to tell you of the hard times on the farm.

Young men are going without an education for lack of cash, with opportunity rotting at their front doors. . . .

The soil of Georgia is no different from that of other states in demanding faith and persistence of a man who likes to reap a harvest. . . . though the heavens and the seasons are gracious in Georgia.

With an adventurous curiosity as to just what could be done, Georgia boys can yet be explorers and discoverers.

When roasting ears are 60 cents per dozen, eggs never below 25 cents, cantaloupes 15 cents, strawberries 40 cents per quart, chickens 60 cents per pound, tomatoes 20 cents per pound . . . one can but wonder at the complaint raised by landowners in Georgia.

What farmer's son has curiority to know what can be done with watercress in the stream that runs by the old swimming hole?

Figs are dear in price beyond the purse of the ordinary food consumer. They grow fine in Georgia, are a most luscious fruit and are easily gathered.

There are mysteries yet unsolved in Georgia mud and untouched acreage by motor power . . . resources unearthed.

What boy is friend to the store of free plants in Washington, D. C., in the United States department of agriculture, bureau of plant industry? Why not try them out in real patriotism on dad's grounds?

How about digging a mushroom cave with the help of the gang when time hangs heavy? How about nuts—pecans, walnuts—and what about trying others on the soil?

What about establishing a self-sustaining summer camp on the old broom sage field, with baseball field, tennis court, a swimming pool and a garden and a cow . . . young man! Put up a sign. The world follows signs these days.

Start something on the old farm—a lima bean farm, with green beans at 25 cents a gallon and dry beans at 10 cents a pound. Dream the whole thing out under your own vine and fig tree, or do young men dream dreams—of flower fields and beehives and a land of peace and plenty?

There seems no better place on earth for our youth to dream dreams and make them come true than right here.

There is an old adage that runs: "If the young only knew and the old only could, there is nought that would be left undone."

Suttler Discusses School Situation, Urging Board Reform

Editor Constitution: Practically disabled for 18 months I have not been keen to get into print, but in view of the fact that our leading and prominent citizens seem indifferent to conditions which are not healthful I feel like I must attack Goliath even though I have no weapons beyond a sling and a little stone.

Mr. Sutton, head of the school system, is a capable man in some directions, but obsessed with the idea of making great speed in what he believes to be educational progress, and which if carried out along his lines would subordinate all and every other interest to the educational program.

But there are some other interests which cannot be overlooked. Street building, sewers, parks, police, firemen, waterworks, etc., involving large expenditures cannot be set aside if the city's growth is to be maintained.

Mr. Sutton comes into print with a program for turning the Girls' High school into a co-ed school which is to be made into a junior college, which in a short time is to give us a free municipal university, and new bond issues.

The new Girls' High school, in its present location, is a standing monument to the hopeless incompetency of the school board. Now, to escape from the egregious blunder made when the Girls' High school was built in a far suburb of the city proper, Mr. Sutton proposes to convert that into a co-ed junior college, and build a new Girls' High school at a proper location. This would probably involve a million dollars for the new girls' high, but that is a small matter in the minds of the gentlemen and ladies, who think that the commission of a million-dollar blunder is only a passing error, and easily remedied by putting into effect Mr. Sutton's grandiose ideas.

Having no ax to grind I can afford to speak plainly.

I have lived here 24 years and during that entire period the school board has not been chosen with the view of efficiency or business ability.

Only today one strong man on the board has resigned. I do not know his reason but I suspect that he grew weary of mismanagement.

I had some hopes of betterment when women were put on the board. I have been disappointed. Atlanta is neither strongly nor well-governed, but the school department is far below the standard of the city, of the other departments of the city's government.

There are plenty of capable men in this city and the city government is greatly at fault that it does not press into service some of these capable men and construct a capable school board.

Capable men are not going to "run" for a place on the school board, they must be conscripted. Until we do that we cannot have real betterment.

Here in Georgia are some folks who have gone daffy on the subject of education. They believe, I suppose honestly, that it is the duty of the state to give every boy and girl a free college education. I do not so believe. From my standpoint when the state has given its children free grammar schools and free high schools, it has discharged its full duty and certainly this is true in those states which, year after year, have a desperate struggle to make both ends meet.

There is a wide gap between true progress and the ideas of many people who conceive it the duty of the state to do everything for everybody. That is not progress but a sort of folly which results in bankruptcy.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

WARMING UP AND SECOND WIND.

In the days of real sport before the pneumatic-tired safety bicycle, it was customary, indeed de rigueur, for regular fellers to get up when the triangle rang at night and run to the fire, alongside the No. 3 hose cart, if possible, with a hand on the rope. The fire was generally away down in the flats, about a mile or so from the Butt End. The pace was fast. Sideache developed about half a mile from No. 3 station, say along between the Presbyterian and Congregational churches. Second wind arrived along between Ted Touhey's barber shop and Herb Ellis' sporting goods emporium. Second wind is a grand and glorious feeling. It comes when a feller needs a friend.

I've tried many a time in the past year or two to get second wind. It is just 1.8 miles around the park meadow drive, or about nine miles when you count in the tacking you have to do to dodge automobiles. I can develop the old sideache as well as ever, but second wind just won't come, at least not within the first mile, and after that I'm through.

Second wind does come or should come to a runner in good condition in the third quarter mile. If it doesn't come then, it probably won't come at all. You're out of training, stale, or maybe all through. For an individual not over 50 a mile run, at his own pace, should be at least a possibility, and if you find it isn't you should consult a physician about yourself. Although I do not know whether second wind should still be possible for one of that age.

Queer phenomenon, this second wind. The movements of chest and belly (abdominal walls) are amplified; the diaphragm makes greater excursions for each breath. Ventilation of the lungs is increased. The heart dilates and steadies. I wonder if the sideache was associated with the dilation of the heart? It felt more like the cramping of muscle.

The very facial expression of the runner tells the story. Distress plainly manifests itself in the breathless stage, the wrinkled forehead, updrawn contracted brows, drooping eyelids, dilated nostrils, gaping mouth. With the coming of the second wind this picture of pain or anxiety disappears from the runner's face.

Dr. R. Tait McKenzie describes and pictures these charactertistic expressions in his classical work on "Exercise in Education and Medicine."

Some studies recenty made by Berner and associates in the physiological department of the University of Pennsylvania indicate that second wind comes earlier when the room or air is warm than it does in cool or cold environment. This seems strange, for one would naturally imagine the condensed air of colder weather would aid a breathless individual in his effort to get more of it. These studies seem to show that the effect of warmth on second wind is not due to increased temperature in the trunk. But the temperature of the voluntary muscles is considerably below the deep body temperature as measured by rectal thermometer, and the assumption is that the voluntary muscles develop their fullest power to dispose of the lactic acid and other products of increased oxidation, combustion or metabolism, when their temperature is slightly increased by work plus external warmth.

According to these studies, heavier clothing in the earlier part of a race might help a man to get second wind earlier. Maybe that was my mistake—I stripped down when I tried for second wind last summer.

Wonderful X-Ray.

I have just taken a thorough X-ray examination and the specialist claims I have gastrology. He says a month of treatment will cure it, three visits a week and some electrical treatments. . . . What I want to know is the cause and prevention of this condition. (J. T. F.)

Answer—The quack is spoofing you. Gastrology means study of the stomach. But no matter what the quack said or what you thought he said, if he were a reputable or reliable physician he would not promise a cure under any circumstances. Don't be buncoed by such fakers.

The Heating of a House.

I would appreciate greatly if you will tell me whether hot air or hot water heating plant is the more healthful for a five-room house. (J. T.)

Answer—If there is any choice from the hygienic viewpoint, it is in favor of the air furnace, because that method of heating functions best when there is fairly good ventilation provided. The radiator, on the other hand, may function satisfactorily when there is little or no ventilation. So far as accurate tests indicate, there is no choice between them in respect to humidity. I cannot advise about the economical aspect. I should say warm air furnace, rather than hot air furnace. The difference is that the warm air furnace circulates a relatively large volume of air moderately warmed; the hot air furnace circulates a relatively small amount of air overheated. A single hot spot should be enough in a five-room house—one place where occupants can go to toast. The rest of the house should be kept at 64 to 67 degrees as constantly as possible, never higher.

Albumin.

Please give a list of foods containing albumin. The urine analysis made by the ——— institute showed a small amount of albumin. The institute merely included a paragraph saying that one with albumin should live moderately in all things. (E. L.)

Answer—Eggs, milk, meats contain albumin, though there is no particular reason why one with kidney disease should not take such foods. Instead of monkeying with the mail-order doctors, why not go to your physician at home and find out whether there is really anything the matter?

Coolidge Enigma

associated with republican control of the government. If the leaders and workers think Coolidge is the only republican that can win, they will be for him. If they think he is the candidate who can more surely win than any other, they will make a smooth face of it and support him. Only if they think that someone else has an equal chance to win against the democrats will they turn him down.

Moreover, the republican leaders and workers still have a sense of discipline, although party discipline has grown weak in late years. They have a sense of the need of party solidarity and are willing within limits, to subordinate their personal preferences. Above all things, they shrink from a party cleavage which might lay them open to defeat by the democrats. Consequently, however much they might prefer some other candidate than Coolidge, they will never fight him openly. The great majority of them, though not all, will refrain from putting forward oppositon to Coolidge so long as Coolidge is himself a candidate, whether openly or by implication. I think it is safe to say—though there may be doubt about this—that if Coolidge announces publicly, or lets the leaders understand privately, that he wants another term, a majority of the leaders will salute obediently and thereafter with a straight face tell the world that Mr. Coolidge is so great a president that of course he must be kept in office.

What they will earnestly hope, however, is that Coolidge will say, or let it be known, that he does not want another term. They will hope either that he will retire because he is tired and prefers private life; that is the hint in Senator Cummins' statement. Or they will hope that it will become so apparent to Mr. Coolidge that he would have difficulty in being re-elected as to cause him to retire. For this reason, many a republican leader will see a silver lining in the situation if the republicans lose the senate this fall. Loss of the senate to the democrats would be unwelcome to the republicans, of course, but it would have compensations. It would be interpreted as a sign that Coolidge, in the political phrase heard with increasing frequency, "is slipping" in his position as party leader, and consequently, would be a hint to Mr. Coolidge to let someone else take the reins. Also, if a democratic senate should be elected this fall, it would result that President Coolidge during his last two years would have a pretty unhappy time and might, therefore, be stimulated to reflect on the greater attractiveness of private life.

One of several factors relied upon by those who feel that way as a leverage to get Mr. Coolidge to retire and create an open field, is the "third-term argument." Without much doubt, the time will come when a certain scene will take place. A group of republican leaders will get together in the senate cloakroom or elsewhere; they will spend an adequate amount of time in composing their features into the desirable degree of unctuous sincerity; they will then take themselves to the white house and will address Mr. Coolidge substantially as follows: "Of course, you understand, Mr. President, that we love you with our whole souls. We love every hair of your New England head. When we wake up in the night, we thrill to think how great a president you are, how prosperous the country under your guidance, how happy the republican party to have you as its leader. We think that no president since Washington has been so great as you. For ourselves, Mr. President, we are devoted to you, as you must know from the way we have supported you in congress and always voted for your measures and followed your leadership. So far as we are concerned, Mr. President, our wish is that you should be president for the next hundred years, and then some. But you know, Mr. President, we are practical men. We must put party above persons. We must plan for party success regardless of individuals. And you know, Mr. President, this matter of a third term is serious. The prejudice against a third term is deep in the hearts of the American people. You understand, of course, it weighs nothing with us, personally. But we must consider the masses of the voters. If the democrats put up a strong candidate, this matter of the third term, unreasonable though it is, may be enough to throw the balance against us. We hesitate to mention it, Mr. President, but you understand the spirit in which we come to you."

Quite likely this little address will peter out into fragmentary silences and embarrassed coughs. Through it all Mr. Coolidge will have been silent, immobile. But five or six pairs of eyes will have been watching his features as the prizefighter watches his adversary's arm.

What Mr. Coolidge says will determine some history. What he doesn't say may be equally potent. He may say: "Thanks! Good day!" He has been known to bow delegations out that way. If he is feeling particularly loquacious he may say: "I'll think about it and let you know."

Probably the public thinks the correspondents, if they live up to the obligations of their occupations adequately, ought to know what is in Mr. Coolidge's mind. But it involves no humiliating confession of incompetence for any one to admit he does not know what is under that reddish-thatched New England skull.

The elements that will help determine whether Mr. Coolidge will again be a candidate include the point raised in the third of the dispatches mentioned at the beginning of this article. Franklin Roosevelt, one of the best democratic leaders, put out a statement saying his party is going to capture the senate this fall. If the democrats do that it will be a sign that the democrats are going to capture the presidency in 1928, because the capture of either house of congress by the opposition is interpreted as the beginning of a trend that will go further two years later. Capture of the senate by the democrats would, under the ordinary presumption, cause President Coolidge to be less covetous of another nomination, if he is covetous of one at all.

Yet another item of information, if we could ascertain it, which would help us survey the future, would be to know whether Iowa is going to support Lowden, and whether Lowden knows Iowa is going to support him.

Yet another item that would help prophecy would be to know whether Vice President Dawes knows that the official leader of the corn belt committee for farm relief is openly talking Dawes as an opponent of Coolidge.

HANCOCK COUNTY BANK IN FINE CONDITION

Sparta, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—According to the last statement of the Hancock National bank, the only banking institution in Hancock county, published last week, it was shown to be in excellent condition with a large surplus account and "no bills payable."

This state of affairs is very gratifying, knowing what the county has passed through since the advent of the boll weevil and business men here are being commended from outside sources as well as at home.

'The Widow of Ephesus, New Novel By Mary L. Granger, Ready for Press

A new star appeared in the constellation of Georgia's literary geniuses in Miss Mary Granger, daughter of Harvey L. Granger, prominent business man of Savannah. Her first novel has been accepted by G. P. Putnam company and will be published next October. Miss Granger's photograph appears in today's rotogravure section of The Constitution.

Miss Granger is one of the most charming young women of Savannah. She possesses a brilliant intellect, and while having written several short stories, "The Widow of Ephesus" is her first venture in writing a novel.

The Savannah Press reviewing the work says:

"The cry has gone up for many years that there is nothing new under the sun, especially in the literary field. It may be that a Savannah author will have the distinction of exploding this theory. Miss Mary Granger, who has had her first novel accepted has certainly hit upon something distinctly out of the ordinary. The very name of the book compels interest. 'The Widow of Ephesus' deals with the old legend and uses the theme in a modern setting. 'The Widow of Ephesus,' as the legend goes, loved with a devotion of rare quality and when the object of her love was torn from her by death, she lamented with such fervent grief that she became a sort of personification of sorrow. Later, however, she was given to love again, and when in the course of the story her last love steals the robber from the cross, she gives the body of her first love in substitution.

"The legend is followed in Miss Granger's novel only is so far as it deals with the psychological treatment of the widow's emotional reaction to love and grief in similar circumstances. The setting is a modern one, and while there is plot, the story is secondary to the psychological analysis. The woman loves a second time, but the love is empty in itself, only being vital in the reiteration of the former love, whereby the anguish of her soul is increased.

"With this theme it is fitting that the text is in semi-rythmical prose. There is a cadence in the beat of the phrases that suggests the essence of emotion itself. The quotation from the Satyricon of Petronius is inscribed in the fore leaf as follows: 'May,' she cried, 'Heaven forbid that at the same time I should watch the bodies of the two dearest men in the world! Rather would I that the dead should hang than send a living man to his death.'

"The book is in cloth binding of black with white paper label bearing the title on the back. The cover is of a neutral gray with an artistic drawing of the widow lamenting before the mausoleum, done in black on a light-toned amber background.

"The book will be published by G. P. Putnam in October."

The Edgeworth

—a very beautiful pattern in Sterling Silver

In selecting one's very own silver which is to be used every day for years and years, it is well to choose carefully and buy a pattern which in some way expresses your individuality. Then you are sure to find increasing pleasure in its possession as the years go by.

The Edgeworth is a very beautiful pattern in Sterling Silver . . . the details and principal members compare with the Corinthian Order of Architecture, which was used so extensively in the Colonial period. The outline is purely classic in form, and the ornamentation of the water leaf and bead which form the outer moulding, is rendered after Colonial examples. The acanthus leaf, which terminates the lower part of the handles, is an exact reproduction of the capital of the Corinthian column.

The Edgeworth is one of the number of interesting patterns now on display.

Rich Official Returns From European Journey

Rubin Visits Foremost World Markets Seeking Finest Merchandise for Atlanta's Great Store.

Many interesting spots in Europe, including some of the foremost markets of the world and some of the chief points of historical interest, were visited recently by Sol Rubin, merchandise and basement manager of M. Rich & Bros., who has just returned to Atlanta after a trip of several weeks.

Mr. Rubin first visited England on his tour and was in that country during the height of the interest which centered on the achievement of "Bobby" Jones in winning the open golf championship.

"In England I found wonderful enthusiasm among the American visitors over the big victory scored by the Atlanta boy," Mr. Rubin said.

Purchases in England.

In England Mr. Rubin made many purchases of woolen goods, golf sweaters and stockings, and after visiting the specialty shops in Piccadilly, made some purchases of men's neckwear.

From England Mr. Rubin went to Brussels, where he visited Rich's Belgian offices; motored through Holland and into Germany to Berlin, where he visited Rich's Berlin offices. He also visited Chemnitz, Germany, one of the noted textile cities of that country, famous also for its hosiery, where he made many varied purchases. In the foreign offices of Rich's all the latest styles in women's wear, shawls and laces, were displayed and Mr. Rubin made a great selection for Atlanta.

After his hard work in the markets Mr. Rubin visited beautiful Venice, Florence and Coma and also paid a visit to Rich's Italian headquarters, where he selected hundreds of patterns of gorgeous silks.

Fourth in Switzerland.

Mr. Rubin spent the Fourth of July in Switzerland and was much pleased to see that this American anniversary was celebrated in that country with a display of fireworks. While in Switzerland he made a trip to the famous Jungfrau.

Mr. Rubin rounded out his European tour with a visit to Paris, the style center of the world, and spent more than a week in that city making selections for the Atlanta store. He returned to this country on the Mauratania, the world's fastest ship, and is now back at his desk at M. Rich & Bros.

JURY DELAYS ACTION ON 'BUCKET SHOP' BILLS

No action was taken Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on bills presented by Solicitor John A. Boykin, who requested indictments charging a misdemeanor be returned against 13 operators of five Atlanta brokerage concerns charging they operated their establishments as "bucket shops," it was learned Saturday.

Because of pressure of business in the extensive and involved probe into the affairs of the Bankers' Trust company, fiscal agents for approximately 120 small banks in Georgia and Florida, the body deemed it advisable to postpone action until the next meeting which will be held Wednesday, it is stated.

Names submitted in the bills were of brokers who had not been indicted previously when the campaign was inaugurated, and other operators, who, according to Solicitor Boykin, "had taken advantage of an injunction to prevent prosecution which was taken to the supreme court." The supreme court held that prosecution was legal and denied the injunction.

ETHERIDGE NAMED BIBLE CLASS HEAD AT SECOND BAPTIST

F. S. Etheridge was elected president of the men's Bible class of the Second Baptist church at the meeting last week. This class is one of the largest and most outstanding men's religious organizations in Atlanta. Dr. M. L. Brittain and Dr. Gordon G. Singleton have charge of the programs. Other officers elected include T. J. Day, first vice president; J. G. Dodson, second vice president; S. E. Dellinger, third vice president; C. W. Hall, secretary; John E. Vogel, treasurer; S. M. White, chorister; Mrs. Gordon Singleton, sponsor, and Mrs. A. D. Brunson, pianist.

JOHN M. HAY GIVEN VAIL HEROISM MEDAL

Featuring the annual barbecue of Western Electric employees Saturday at Grant park was the presentation of a Theodore Newton Vail medal to John M. Hay, stock maintenance price clerk of the Atlanta office. The medal was awarded him for "initiative and courage, believed to have resulted in the saving of two human lives."

The presentation was made by F. B. Gleason, of New York, general manager of the telephone sales department. Hay is the first man in this department of the Western Electric company organization to be so honored.

The Vail medals are presented each year to those employees of the Bell system who have performed noteworthy public services, following in the footsteps of Theodore N. Vail, whose high ideals of service the Bell system is striving to perpetuate.

The story of Hay's courage and unselfishness is tersely set forth in the following citation:

"On June 5, 1926, John M. Hay and several of his fellow employees were swimming in the public pool at Oakland City. One of them became tired and, finding he was beyond his depth, became confused and sank. He called to another employee, who went to his aid, but was pulled under in attempting rescue. Mr. Hay heard a call for help and saw one of the men sink the second time. He swam to him, pulled him to the surface and started for a nearby raft, when the man cried that another man was under the water. Hay dived and brought this man to the surface, and, although he was almost pulled under and forced to break the man's hold, he succeeded in bringing him to the raft, while the other man reached safety without further aid."

Students Barred From Using Cars At Florida College

Georgia college students, especially those who have automobiles at their disposal while in college, and those wanting machines to use in going to and from class, will be interested in an announcement received here to the effect that at Rollins college, Winter Park, Fla., action has been taken by college officials prohibiting the use of automobiles.

The following notice was said to have been posted on the campus recently:

"All automobiles except service cars in the performance of essential duty are excluded from the campus."

While no statement regarding the use of automobiles by students had been posted at Rollins college, it was indicated at the college offices that the faculty "looks with disfavor" on the bringing of cars to the college by students.

Te posting of this notice was one of the preparations for the opening of the forty-second academic year of the college on September 17, next, it was stated at the offices of officials. It is known that classes in the past have been greatly disturbed by automobiles passing through the campus. It was announced by officials that repeated disregard of the new rule would lead to prosecution for trespass.

FRUIT SHIPMENTS GAIN 10,000 CARS OVER 1924 RECORD

Shipments of 38 fruits and vegetables in the United States last year filled 978,927 cars, an increase of about 10,000 cars over 1924, the U. S. department of commerce has announced.

White potatoes alone filled 241,528 cars, apples 118,036 cars, grapes 81,865, oranges 57,035, watermelons 44,184, and peaches 40,829 cars.

Other products shipped in 1925, and in the number of cars in each case follow, though the figures do not include shipments by small boat lines and by wagons and trucks:

Asparagus, 1,906; cabbage, 39,956; cantaloupes, 30,168; carrots, 3,488; cauliflower, 5,288; celery, 21,108; cherries, 2,304; cranberries, 2,014; cucumbers, 8,492; dried apples, 1,338; dried peaches, 624; dried prunes, 7,927; dry beans, 77,540; eggplant, 867; grapefruit, 19,933; green peas, 2,707; lemons, 11,590; lettuce, 37,270; melons, 3,654; mixed citrus fruit, 4,860; mixed deciduos, 7,118; mixed vegetables, 32,211; onions, 31,073; pears, 21,015; peppers, 2,372; plums and prunes, 5,195; spinach, 7,955; strawberries, 12,246; string beans, 5,224; sweet potatoes, 18,571; tomatoes, 28,233; turnips and rutabagas, 1,709.

MEREDITH EXTRADITION ACTION IS POSTPONED

Extradition proceedings in which the governor of Florida is seeking custody of R. E. Meredith, now in Atlanta, were heard Saturday by John Wilson, personal secretary to Governor Clifford Walker. Meredith is wanted in Florida to answer a charge of disposing of an automobile against which a lien had been filed.

In his defense he stated that the papers in the case were not signed by him, but by his brother. Mr. Wilson reserved decision in the case until he can make a further investigation.

WORK TO START ON $60,000 STORE

Plans for the construction of a $50,000 to $60,000 three-story building on the corners of Peachtree, Poplar and Broad streets have just been completed, according to an announcement Saturday by Richard Long, of Kibler & Long, men's furnishings company. Work will begin on the tearing down of the old building Monday, and the new structure is expected to be completed about October 1, Mr. Long stated.

Architectural plans and specifications for the building are in the hands of A. Ten Eyck Brown, prominent Atlanta architect. V. P. Francis, building contractor, is handling the construction work. With the exception of the third floor, which will be occupied by the F. & L. Photo Service company, the men's furnishings company of Kibler & Long, which has been on this same location for 12 years, will occupy the entire building, being constructed for its use.

The property on which the new structure is to be erected is owned by Kibler & Long. This firm operates 33 men's clothing stores in eastern and southeastern states and has two in Atlanta, the second being located at 5 Decatur street. Mr. Long said that during the construction of the Peachtree street building the Peachtree branch will occupy temporary quarters at the corner of Auburn avenue and Pryor street, formerly the Haverty Furniture company building.

ELEVENTH WARD PLANS DEMOCRATIC RALLY

On August 6, from 4 to 10 o'clock a fish fry will be given at Faith's crossing in the eleventh ward for the benefit of the East Side Tabernacle. A special program, consisting of music and addresses by state, county and city candidates, has been arranged. This is expected to be the largest political rally to be held in the city before the election in September.

Atlanta Wins Fourth Time In Better Homes Campaign

Atlanta for the fourth consecutive time has been adjudged a winner in the Better Homes in America campaign, this year receiving third prize, according to a letter received Saturday by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, Atlanta chairman, from Herbert Hoover, national president of the movement. The prize is $100 cash.

In receiving this award Atlanta has scored a series of unparalleled victories and has attracted nation-wide attention, according to Mrs. Wing. Santa Barbara tied with Atlanta for first prize last year, and this year the former won first prize. Greenville, S. C., won second.

The local leaders won the prize for building a demonstration house of excellent plan at low cost and by furnishing it tastefuly on a limited budget. The national committee decided local enthusiasts demonstrated the possibility of providing excellent conditions of housing and home life at low cost. The remodeling of an old house on East Fair street with the help of school children was convincing proof to parents and children alike that good living conditions can be brought within reach of families of small income, Mr. Hoover stated.

Prince George county, Maryland, won first prize of $200 in the rural communities division; Montgomery county, Tennessee, second prize of $150, and third prizes of $50 each went to Prince Edward county, Virginia; Pulaski county, Arkansas; Bovine, Miss., and Murray, Utah.

A notable feature, according to Mrs. Wing, referring to the local campaign, was the increase in scope of the educational side of the activity in Atlanta. Practically all committees held extensive lectures and sponsored discussion programs on home building and home life, she continued. Schools cooperated in furnishing demonstration homes and in writing school essays.

Better Home No. 1 was built in Boulevard Park at a cost of $6,438, and the rehabilitated project, known as No. 22, cost only $400 with installation of plumbing, electric lighting, carpentry work, repainting and the like.

Atlanta and Port Huron, both winners of prizes in 1925, were considered by the 1926 committee to have programs of equal merit. Mrs. Wing has headed the local committee each year during which Atlanta has won third prizes twice and first and third prizes. Mrs. Wing believes lack of a school practice house, built on schoolgrounds and kept as a permanent school project, as was the case in many communities demonstrating this year, was the chief reason Atlanta did not win first place.

"With the object lesson of what was done in 1926 in tying up the work of the schools with the campaign, I hope in 1927 Atlanta again can lead the nation," she said.

The annual banquet will be held in September, this event having taken place each time Atlanta has won a prize. Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, local treasurer, will have charge of the program, which will be rendered in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club.

FUNERAL SERVICE HELD FOR MRS. MARIA HOLDEN

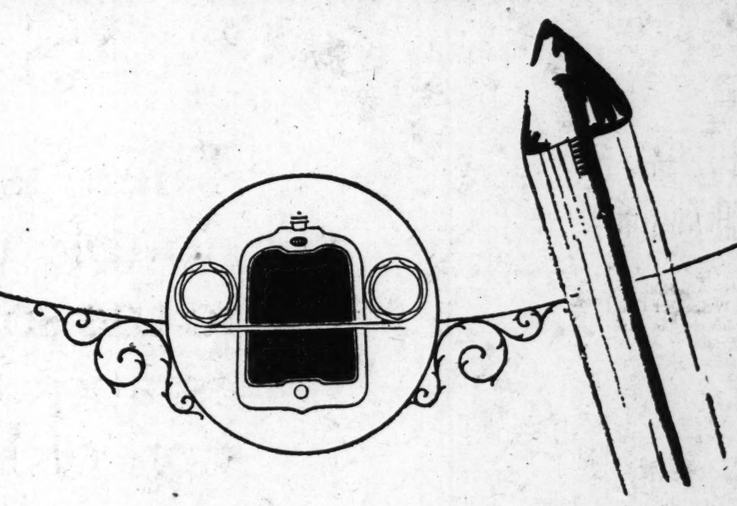

Funeral services for Mrs. Maria E. Holden, 92, were conducted Saturday morning from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. M. Willingham, of 534 Woodward avenue. The Rev. H. T. Brookshire, pastor of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church, and the Rev. George D. Adams, of New York, officiated. Interment will be in Yonkers, N. Y., where the body was taken.

Mrs. Holden was the widow of J. G. P. Holden, a former journalist of Yonkers. In addition to her daughter, she is survived by two sons, E. R. Holden, of New York, and Dr. G. P. Holden, of Yonkers.

John A. Leach Buried.

Funeral services for John A. Leach, 88, of 126 Confederate avenue, were held Saturday from the residence. The Revs. J. E. Mize and E. L. Barlow officiated and interment was in Sylvester cemetery.

Georgia's Greatest Tobacco Year Is Seen as Markets Prepare for Opening Date

Report on Condition of New Georgia Crop Indicates Big Yield; Markets Open August 3.

In less than two weeks the tobacco markets of Georgia will be opening, warehousemen will be announcing "tobacco breaks" which are to start Georgia off on what is conceded to be the biggest and best season in the history of tobacco production in the state. Tobacco will go on sale at the Georgia warehouses on Tuesday, August 3.

Quoting J. E. Webb, of Hahira, representative of the tobacco growers of the lower part of the tobacco belt: "If prices hold up to anything like what the prospects offer, Georgia tobacco producers will be sitting on top of the world' this year.

"Messrs. Satterfield and Stone have just come into this territory from North Carolina. J. M. Hurd'e has been here a couple of weeks. These men, operators of some of the largest warehouses, have been around among some of the largest farms and have looked over some of the heaviest barns in our territory, and they report the finest crop and curing out of tobacco this year they have ever seen in Georgia and some of the best tobacco they have seen in any of the tobacco producing states.

"I have, of course, kept very closely in touch with the crop from its earliest stages. It seems to me at this time that, with the shortage in the Carolinas and the almost wonderful quality we have produced in Georgia this year, good prices should prevail, and if that is true this one crop will do wonders in the whole state.

Profit Since 1916.

"This is one of the oldest tobacco-producing sections in the state. Perhaps Charlie Thomas was the first man who ever grew and flue-cured cigarette tobacco in Georgia. C. E. Sandsbury was probably the second man to try it, in 1916, and these gentlemen have been getting profit out of their crops ever since, but this year they are agreed that quality has produced far superior to what the farmers were able to get heretofore.

"Heretofore Mr. Sandsbury sold $1,530 worth off of four acres; Jodie Hall off of seven acres got $3,100 worth; E. L. Ring produced and sold $1,800 worth on four acres; G. K. Johnson on his four acres realized $2,400; Bob Gordon got $1,800 off of his four acres. These are just a few of the growers who have made good, and prospects for this year are even better than they were when those prices were gotten. They serve to illustrate something of what the prospect will be, even on an average, when the improved or bettered quality is taken into consideration."

George W. Lankford, of Lyons, the largest planter of tobacco in Toombs county the past two or three years, says:

"The tobacco acreage in the whole belt is perhaps less this year than it was last, but the yield has been Letter and the quality is far above anything we have had before. In fact, I expect this year's tobacco crop to do a great deal for the state not only financially, but in advancing us as a high-grade producing section.

"I have planted 80 acres this year—somewhat less acreage than I had last year—but I expect to more than make up the difference on the quality and yield. Taking our tobacco around Toombs county generally I expect we are going to get around a thousand pounds, and some places upward of that figure, to the acre. I think this will pretty generally apply to approximately 2,000 acres our county has in tobacco."

Diversified Crop Seen.

The outstanding point illustrated by these gentlemen, and others from Georgia's tobacco belt, is that farming in Georgia has already gotten away from the old idea of planting excessively large tracts of land in order to make a profit through the volume of acreage. As Mr. Lankford put it, in discussing the tobacco prospects: "The south Georgia farmer is beginning to show by results that he can make more profit and do a better business on 40 to 50 acres of good Georgia land than we used to do digging and scratching on two or three hundred acres."

All through the tobacco belt the warehouses are ready to receive the miracle weed of south Georgia which has come to rank next to cotton in importance as a money crop in this section.

Bright leaf tobacco has been grown in Georgia for nine years, but this is the third year that it has passed the experimental stage and reached the proportions of a money crop.

In 1925 the acreage was estimated at 70,000, which yielded 49,300,000 pounds which sold at an average price of 14.50 cents per pound, bringing into the state something over $7,000,000.

Acreage Cut.

This year the acreage has been cut down to about 50,000 acres, and a finer quality of the weed has been grown and it is estimated that the price for 1926 will average 20 cents per pound on a yield of 50,000,000 pounds from which the farmers expect to receive from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000.

Forty-three warehouses are expected to be operated in 21 cities this year as follows: Alma 1; Baxley 2; Bainbridge 1; Blackshear 4; Cairo 1; Camilla 2; Douglas 4; Fitzgerald 2; Hahira 3; Hazelhurst 2; Lyons 2; Metter 1; Moultrie 1; Nashville 4; Pelham 1; Oldham 1; Thomasville 1; Tifton 3; Valdosta 3; Vidalia 2; Waycross 2.

Georgia bright leaf tobacco is used mostly in the manufacture of cigarettes, the bulk of the crop being shipped abroad for manufacture. Foreign tobacco firms all have buyers here who remain throughout the season, which usually lasts about two months. Cash is paid for the tobacco by the buyers.

Old Guard To Leave Tuesday for Cruise In Caribbean Waters

Preparations for the annual trip of the Old Guard, which this year will make the Caribbean cruise outlined by the United Fruit company, have been completed.

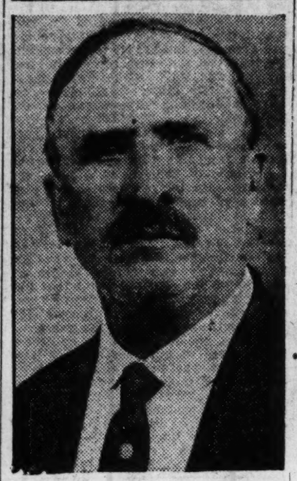

Approximately 80 members of the Old Guard, which was organized during the Civil war, and is the oldest of the Gate City guard, and their friends will leave Atlanta Tuesday at 4:20 o'clock over the Atlanta and West Point railroad for New Orleans from where they sail Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock on the S. S. Turrialba.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD TODAY FOR MRS. MOTE

Funeral services for Mrs. J. C. Mote, 66, formerly of Columbus, Ga., who died Thursday in Knoxville, Tenn., will be held today at Columbus. In addition to her husband, she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. A. Godfrey, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Alfred Noyes, of Birmingham, and Mrs. J. W. Cranshaw, of Omaha, Neb.

Cooper Announces Entry Into Race For Reelection

W. Garland Cooper, councilman from the tenth ward, Saturday made formal announcement of his candidacy for reelection from that ward subject to the democratic primary, September 22.

W. GARLAND COOPER.

Mr. Cooper has been a member of a number of important committees during his term of office and offers his record while in office for support in the primaries. He advocates a "clean city, better schools and better streets" as the principal points in his platform.

"If elected," he said, "I promise to continue my efforts to make Atlanta a cleaner and better city. I have at all times endeavored to lend my best efforts to this end, and it will be my policy to continue this.

"I feel that the Atlanta school system is on the threshold of a great improvement and it is the duty of every public official as well as every private citizen to give full support to our schools."

Mr. Cooper has been prominent in fraternal circles of Atlanta for many years. He also is a member of the Baptist church in his ward and has taken a leading part in civic endeavors. He will be opposed by J. D. Wootan, whose entrance fee was paid Saturday.

DROWNING VICTIM SENT TO COVINGTON

Covington, July 24.—(Special.)—The body of Hugh E. Wright, of Covington, who lost his life in the surf at St. Simons island Friday afternoon while trying to rescue Miss Mary Louise Trotti, of Decatur, will not reach Covington until 9:55 o'clock Saturday night, over the Central of Georgia. Funeral arrangements will not be completed until members of his family can be reached.

Mr. Wright was one of Covington's most prominent citizens, was a trustee of the First Methodist church and a member of the firm of Fouler Brothers & Co, Inc., one of the largest mercantile firms here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright and young son, Hugh E., Jr., left here a week ago to join Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Henderson and family and Hugh Trotti and family, of Decatur, for an outing at St. Simons.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Frances Henderson, of Covington, twin sister of R. C. Henderon, of Decatur; one son, Hugh E., Jr.; his mother, Mrs. Allhea Wright, of Covington; seven sisters, Mrs. W. B. Smith and Mrs. Robert H. Trippe, of Covington; Mrs. W. R. Roberts, of Atlanta; Mrs. G. W. Golden, of Miami; Mrs. W. H. Corley, of Starrsville; Mrs. J. D. Smith, of Bartow, Ga.; Mrs. E. B. Ellington, of Charleston, S. C., and two brothers, C. W. Wright and F. H. Wright, both of Covington.

THEOSOPHISTS READY FOR BIG CONFERENCE

Ommen, Holland, July 24.—(AP)—About 2,000 theosophists have arrived here and at the township of Overijsel in preparation for the opening of the international congress of the Star of the East, scheduled for Tuesday. The congress camp lies some distance from here at Besthnerberg, which forms a part of the beautiful Eerde estate which, together with a fine castle, was presented to the order a few years ago by Baron von Pallandt.

The executive committee and members of various national committees who come from all parts of the world have been accommodated at the Chateau Eerde, where young Krishnamurti, the Indian "world teacher," has been residing for the past 10 days. The only hotel at Ommen is filled to capacity.

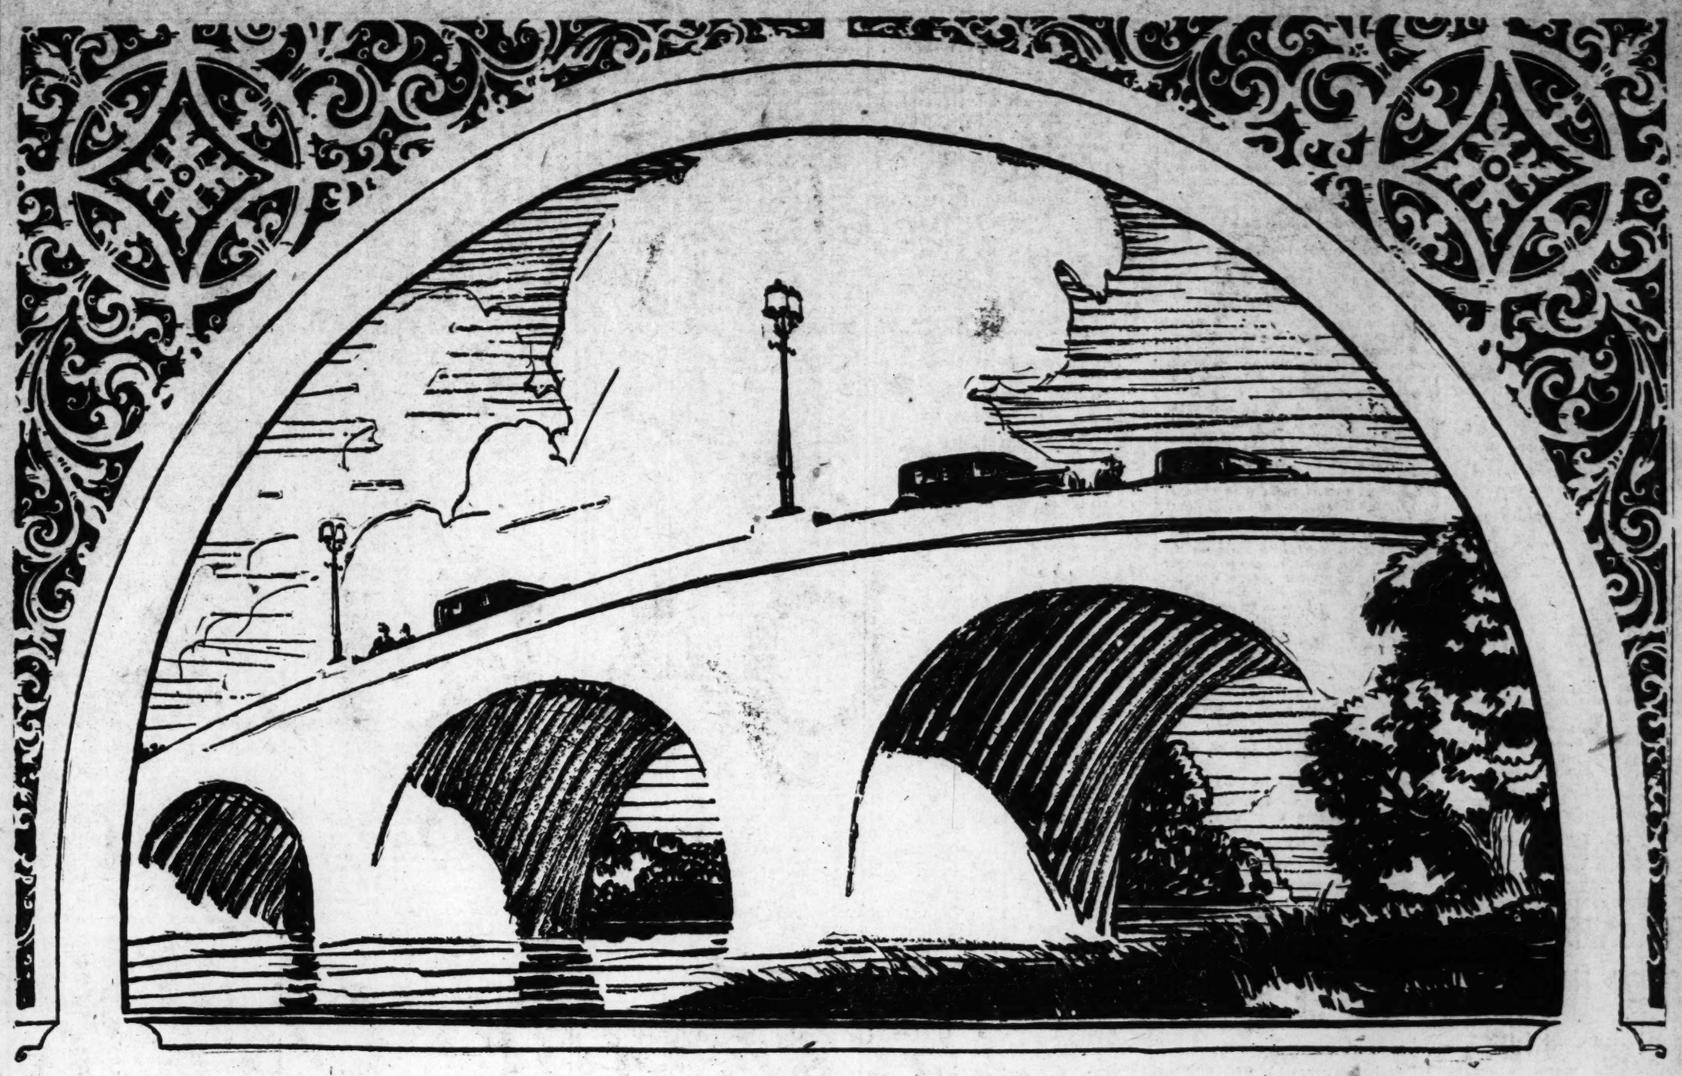

The congress is expected to have special importance this year as both Dr. Annie Bestant, leader of the theosophists movement and her protege, Krishnamurti, are to speak on subjects of exceptional modernity.

GUARD EXONERATED IN PRISONER'S DEATH

In an attempt to escape from the Walker county chaingang Friday Willie Pierce, a 20-year-old convict serving a four-year sentence for burglary, was killed by one of the camp guards, according to notice received Saturday by the state prison commission. A coroner's jury exonerated Aubrey Evans, the guard who shot the convict. Pierce made a break for liberty and when he failed to stop at the command of the guard he was shot.

JORDAN TO ADDRESS ROTARIANS TUESDAY

"Rotary Legislation" will be the subject of Lee Jordan, prominent attorney, whose address will feature this week's session of Atlanta Rotarians Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Capital City club.

SAFETY

There is no factor of safety, from double thick genuine plate glass to the solidarity of the roof, which escapes the painstaking investigation of Fisher inspectors. Quality above all else, is the creed of Fisher craftsmanship. And Fisher has always regarded the safety and comfort of those who ride in Fisher Bodies the surest proof of Fisher quality.

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Rain reports caused another big upturn in the cotton market today. Some of the latter deliveries reached new high prices for the same in the first hour, with October up to 17.84, January 17.78 and May 18.13. At the best level, the market was 32 to 36 points over the previous close, so that final prices were 14 to 32 points net higher.

The effect of yesterday's rather bearish government report seemed to have disappeared today in view of the further rain news from the southwest and the market, after opening 6 to 13 points higher, continued its advance until almost $2 a bale had been added to the levels prevailing at the close on Friday.

Besides showers and heavy rains reported at many places in Texas, with indications that there might be further precipitation over the week-end, the tropical storm in the West Indies, gave bear traders a good deal of concern as it was impossible to judge how it might develop over Sunday. Equally potent as a bull factor, was the increase of activity in cotton goods circles with large sales reported at Fall River for the week, indicating that the uneasiness about crop conditions as a result of insects and persistent rains, has extended to the buyers of cotton goods.

Improvement in the French political situation was not lost sight of and part of the buying during the forenoon was attributed to big Wall street interests, who had not heretofore been prominently identified with the market.

A Dallas wire called attention to the spread of thurberia weevil from Arizona, causing uneasiness in west Texas, west New Mexico and Oklahoma.

PRICES UPWARD AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., July 24.—(AP)—The cotton market developed a fair degree of activity for a short Saturday session and the trend of prices was upward due to the continued showery weather in the belt and the rapid progress of the tropical storm in the West Indies said to be now central near San Domingo and growing in intensity.

After opening 11 to 15 points higher in sympathy with good Liverpool cables and early reports of numerous showers in the belt the market continued on the upgrade most of the session until net gains of 31 to 34 points were shown. Prices eased off from the highs in the late trading on week-end realizing, losing about 10 points but there was a tendency to rally shown at the end.

The close showed net gains for the day of 15 to 30 points, the highest gain being shown by July, at present an almost inactive month.

At the start as Liverpool came in better than due first trades showed gains of 11 to 15 points with October at 17.50, December at 17.37 and January at 17.39. These proved to be the low points of the day.

Prices soon started to rally on the prospects for more showery weather and when a further storm warning was issued showing that the tropical storm was moving steadily northwestward with increasing intensity prices made further gains, October finally trading as high as 17.73, December at 17.58 and January at 17.56, or 31 to 34 points above the close of yesterday. Prices eased off about 10 points in the last hour on week-end realizing but rallied somewhat at the end and closed steady.

Exports for the day totaled 4,241 bales.

UNMASKED NEGRO HOLDS UP STORE

An unidentified negro, unmasked and armed with an automatic pistol, entered the store of A. Helpern and I. Greenberg at 187 North Ashby street Saturday night, held up the proprietors and escaped after rifling the cash register of $30.

Policemen W. D. McGee and L. H. Satterfield hurried to the scene and conducted a vain search of the surrounding vicinity. The negro wore overalls and was described as being about five feet, 10 inches tall and weight about 160 pounds.

122nd Regiment Entrains at Tybee After Encampment

Savannah, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—With the cars decked with palmetto leaves and all men hanging out of the windows cheering and singing at the tops of their lungs, the 122d infantry of the Georgia national guard closed the two weeks' encampment at Camp Hammond today. The train carrying the soldiers of the regiment was composed of four sections.

No task was too hard for any man in the encampment as the time for entraining drew near, and a spirit of cooperation was evident throughout the camp area.

Loading for the departure began at an early hour, and little confusion was experienced in completing it. All regular exercises of the encampment other than the maintenance of the campground were suspended to permit this.

The camp site was left in excellent condition by the departing regiment, and the whole camp area thoroughly policed and the refuse burned. Entraining was carried out in a most systematic manner. As the time for the train to leave the island drew near, the commanding officers of the companies marched their commands to the side of the train, and at the command the men boarded the cars.

PASTOR CLEARED BY CHURCH COURT TO PREACH TODAY

Asheville, N. C., July 24.—(AP)—Freed from grave accusations, the Rev. Ashley Chappell, pastor of the Central Methodist church here, will return to his pulpit tomorrow after a suspension of two months.

Dr. Chappell, whose congregation is the largest in western North Carolina, announced today that he would preach his "home coming sermon" on the subject "The Old Rugged Cross."

A court of 13 pastors of the Western North Carolina conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acquitted the popular Asheville minister at Statesville Tuesday of charges of immorality, falsehood and attempted bribery. Dr. Chappell has referred to this experience as "my Gethsemane." The stewards of the fashionable Central church tonight were planning a quiet demonstration for the service tomorrow morning as visible proof of their love for their pastor and their confidence in his personal integrity. Active support of the accused minister by his stewards and congregation has been evidenced throughout the period of suspension.

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH ATTRACTS RAILROADMEN

Nashville, July 24.—Thirty or 40 railroad attorneys and claim agents who attended the annual convention of Southeastern Association of Claim Agents held at Wrightsville Beach Friday and Saturday, devoted several days to the pleasures peculiar to the seaside. The surf was popular with all, and the dance at Lumina and the hotel concerts were features which made it pleasant for the railroad men. Some took their departure but others were so enamored of the delights of the seaside that they remained over the week end.

F. R. Yarborough, of Atlanta, chief law and special claim agent for the Georgia Railroad, the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, the Western Railroad of Alabama, and the Atlanta Joint Terminal, remained at the Oceanic hotel as a guest and. He is so pleased with the beach and its enjoyments that he proposes to stay 'til he has to go back to his duties. He is accompanied by his lovely daughter, Miss Martha Yarborough, and she is delighted with the beach.

Mr. Yarborough declared that Wrightsville Beach has gotten to be immense as a southern resort. He has come to the resort off and on for 10 years but he says he was utterly amazed at the development that the resort has undergone in a few years. He says he was surprised to observe what a vast improvement has been made in the hotels. The causeway over the mile and an eighth stretch of Wrightsville sound is a great engineering feat, but it will be worth all it cost as a further development of the south's ocean playground.

CALLOWAY IN RACE FOR REELECTION

Pointing out that his efforts to lessen crime in Atlanta have been in keeping with strict adherence to the written law tempered with mercy and sympathy commensurate with the facts in each particular case, A. W Calloway, judge of the first division of recorder's court, Saturday announced his candidacy for reelection subject to the democratic primary on September 22.

In making his announcement and paying his entrance fee, Judge Calloway stated that since this was his first race before the people for any public office, he was somewhat at a loss to know how to present himself.

"I was elected clerk of recorder's court on January 4, 1922, by general council, and upon the death of the lamented Judge George E. Johnson, I was entrusted by that council, with but one dissenting vote, with the office of recorder to fill out the remainder of his term, which has yet another year to run," he said.

"I sincerely hope that if the citizens feel that my administration had been fair and honorable, and that according to the fair rule of events I am entitled to an enforcement for a full term, they will so express it by favoring me with their support.

"I have tried to do the right, square thing in every case. Taking the facts in every case and applying the law and common sense, I have endeavored to render a correct and merciful judgment. I have probably made many mistakes. As long as courts are run by human beings this is to be expected, but my intentions have been good and I have profited by these mistakes which will be beneficial in the future.

"A person seeking a judgship should make no promises, but I am compelled to say that if reelected I shall continue to enforce the law fearlessly and impartially, letting every case be determined solely upon the facts, without regard for a person's station in life or political preferment.

"I was raised in Atlanta. I have grown up with our wonderful city. I am proud of the progress made; seeing a small town grow to a metropolis I am keenly interested in all good things for the betterment of society, looking toward a clear, moral and lawabiding community, which will make it safe and worth while for your family and my family to follow orderly and daily pursuits of life.

"I have made a most earnest effort to administer the law properly, and if I am entrusted again with your commission as recorder I will be true to the trust reposed in me, and at the end of my term I will return to the people my commission just as spotless as it was the day it was handed me."

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

H. & B. BEER.

New York, July 24.—The week's trend in stock market and the reflex action to important news developments combined to substantiate previous indications that some conservative bulls have taken profits. People of the type who bought the more prosperous industrials and motor stocks when they were under pressure at the low prices of three months ago have seen their expectations realized with respect to trade and business conditions and for profits there has rarely been a time in stock market history when people who were long of the right issues saw profits mount up so quickly. Our views on business outlook are the same as we have steadily entertained. Country is now well along into the third quarter of an unusually prosperous year. None of the dire predictions which were circulating in April as to sudden curtailment in many lines have been realized. Stock market, however, has had tremendous rise and people who had courage to buy good stocks when they were under fire have been well rewarded.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, July 24.—As a result of overnight buying orders there was a show of strength in some of the leading issues around the opening. As this demand had been filled, the market again turned downward, in the course of which several issues reached new lows for the week. Trading was again mostly of a professional character, and these interests being bearish, efforts towards lower levels were made with the idea of dislodging stop-loss orders. While Steel lost ground the trading in this issue was not heavy and no doubt curtailed the view on the fact that the directors meet next Tuesday. It is not likely that anything will be done then regarding the company's surplus. The mere possibility of some action being taken in this regard is restricting trading in this issue. The railroad equipment industry received encouragement by the inquiry by Seaboard Air Line for 36 engines, representing one of the largest calls for motive power in some time and may be the start of a general revival of buying by the rails. Covering short commitments over the holiday caused recoveries from the lows of the day, with the buying in General Motors outstanding.

Cotton Letters.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, July 24.—The continuance of rather unsettled weather inland, with more rain reported in nearly all sections of the belt overnight and the uncertainty attending the movement of the tropical storm, influenced cotton market to a new high level for this upward movement. As yet the weather outlook inland remains rather unsettled but somewhat better than of late, but will likely depend on movement of the tropical storm, which was apparently south of Porto Rico last night, where wind velocity of 64 miles an hour was reported and apparently moving in the direction of the Gulf of Mexico. Washington wired, "Advisory 10 a. m. report from Santo Domingo missing but tropical disturbance apparently central a short distance south of that city moving west, northwestward. Caution advised . . . vessels bound for Cuba, Jamaica, the Bahama islands and neighboring waters."

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, July 24.—It appears that there is some feeling among the trade that the government figures slightly overestimate the crop. As a consequence, there was a certain amount of replacement of long cotton which caused a brisk upturn in our market this morning. The news from dry goods centers has improved tremendously in the last two weeks. It is reported that some of the country's largest buyers of cloth were in the New England markets last week and bought up considerable narrow cloths that had been held by the mills for some time. It is understood that they placed business that will run up to October 1. Should there be any crop scare it will be a good test of the hand-to-mouth policy that has been in vogue in the textile trade ever since the war. Previous to the war there was always a reserve supply carried by the textile people.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, July 24.—Cotton sold nearly $2 a bale higher today as a result of scattered rains over the belt, expectation of rains over Sunday and developments of the tropical storm. The official forecast of fair weather for the northwest took the edge off the buying side after the forecast was issued and caused a moderate reaction. Most private map readers look for unsettled weather to develop from the northwest by Monday, and it is generally believed that storm developments will play an important part in shaping prices next week. The storm appears to be moving in the direction of many others which have struck the gulf coast and cotton states.

Grain Letters.

H. & B. BEER.

Chicago, July 24.—Wheat was easy early on persistent commission house selling and local pressure, but an oversold condition developed later and a bulge of around 3c from the inside figures followed the low point showed 8¢ under high on Monday, and while expectations were for bearish statistics on Monday, routine news had little effect after values started upward. Strength in Minneapolis and prospects for a warm wave in Canada, with complaints of dry weather there had considerable influence and more than offset liberal winter wheat movement. Kansas City receipts of 1,109 cars set new record for one day. Hedging impressive in wheat. Trade looks for larger primary arrivals Monday and also good increase in visible. Domestic exports for the crop year were 106,000,000 vs. 224,000,000 bushels last year.

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Trading in today's bond market was restricted by the absence of many traders for an extended week-end holiday and the disposition of some large buyers to await further developments in the money market before extending their commitments, but prices held relatively steady.

French issues advanced, though slightly, in reflection of the general restoration of confidence following the announcement of the new Poincare ministry. Cabled reports of anti-American demonstrations in Paris were disregarded. Other foreign issues showed narrow and irregular changes.

Publication of excellent June earnings reports imparted a firm undertone to railroad liens, but only a few issues were at all active. New Haven 3 1-2s of 1954 advanced over a point to a new 1926 high at 67 1-2 and Great Northern 7s improved fractionally on a large turnover. Industrial liens moved within extremely narrow and irregular limits, and U. S. government issues showed practically no change.

With most of the mid-year reinvestment funds having found employment, listed securities are meeting with increasing competition from new offerings, which have been coming out at the rate of about $100,000,000 a week. The prospect of stiffer money rates, which invariably is accompanied by lowering bond prices, also has had a dampening influence on bullish enthusiasm in the bond market.

MOODY'S REVIEW

Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions in its current issue says, in part:

"The sensational drop in the French franc to approximately one-tenth of its gold parity may be regarded as an important factor in precipitating Tuesday's reaction in the stock market.

"August is the only remaining month this year wherein there is any real chance of falling interest rates, but even in August the chance is not large. Indications are that the hardening of rates may run pretty nearly through the year or even into next year.

"The northwestern depression, which is now attracting attention, is mostly due to too much agriculture. Others sections have prospered by virtue of their manufacturing and commercial industries. This depression in the northwest is more important than realized in the east, and is likely to be a

Announcing Oil-O-Matic Demonstration Week
AT 429 PEACHTREE ST.

Open Every Night Until 10 O'Clock
Beginning Tuesday, July 27th

The real worth of any appliance is measured by the importance of its duty and the reliability of its service. In order that we may thoroughly demonstrate Oil-O-Matic service to the Atlanta Public, beginning Tuesday, July 27th, our salesoffice will be open until 10 p. m.

Our force of salesmen and heating engineers will be on hand to explain Oil-O-Matic convenience, comfort and cleanliness.

Souvenirs for the Ladies Attending

Why Oil-O-Matic Is Better

IT BURNS FUEL OIL, kerosene, distillate or gas oil without change or adjustment. FUEL OIL is best because it is more efficient, safer and more economical.

Oil-O-Matic can be installed where there is no city gas as an electric ignition is far more desirable and less expensive.

The METERING PUMP accurately measures and controls the supply of oil to the atomizing chamber, handling the heavy, as well as the lighter oils, without needle valves or small openings.

The ATOMIZING PUMP combines the air and mechanical methods of atomization. It gives an almost perfect atomization without pre-heating the oil. Any grade of oil is so finely atomized that it will float in the air.

The ELECTRIC SAFETY SWITCH cares for every emergency.

The moving parts run in a continuous bath of fresh oil, reducing friction and wear to the minimum.

OIL-O-MATIC is built to give maximum service, not to meet competition.

The OIL-O-MATIC dealer will give you a list of users and complete information, or if you prefer, write direct to factory.

CONVENIENCE

No more running up and down the basement stairs to shovel coal and ashes. No more regulating drafts and dampers. No more chilly morning trips to rouse a dormant fire to duty.

OIL-O-MATIC takes complete charge of your heating plant. It never loafs—never sleeps. It automatically starts the instant heat is needed and automatically stops the instant the desired temperature is reached. You can literally forget your heating plant after OIL-O-MATIC is installed.

HEALTH

It is the duty of every one to promote and protect health for "health is greater than wealth."

Who does not know of the dangers of sudden changes from suffocating heat to shivering cold? The even temperature, faithfully maintained by OIL-O-MATIC is a preventative of colds and sickness. It promotes health and strength, and is especially beneficial to growing children.

COMFORT

OIL-O-MATIC in your home assures maximum comfort of both body and mind.

The even, healthful temperature, automatically maintained, means the highest degree of bodily comfort.

The absolute freedom of thot or worry of the care and regulation of the heating plant, and the positive assurance of unvarying warmth at all times means mental comfort that is sublime.

CLEANLINESS

The old saying "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" can be truthfully applied to OIL-O-MATIC.

Doing away with coal removes the greatest cause of dirt and dust in the home. After installing OIL-O-MATIC, your basement can be as clean as your living room and your home will be easier to keep clean in winter than in summer.

Petrel Eleven Books Ten Games for 1926 Season

Oglethorpe Facing Strong S.I.A.A. Teams In Grid Title Race

BY LAMAR JACKSON.

Although baseball is occupying the principal talks of the sporting world today, football is not far around the corner—only 62 days distant—and Oglethorpe, known all over the south for their championship football and baseball teams that reign supreme in the S. I. A. A. circles, comes to bat with an announcement that 10 football games have already been booked. The announcement was made Saturday afternoon by Frank Anderson, athletic director of Oglethorpe, who further stated that one open date remains to be filled, which will give the Peachtree road institution 11 games for the season.

Atlantans will have an opportunity of witnessing four of the Oglethorpe games, three at Spiller field and one—the biggest of the Oglethorpe schedule—on Grant field with Georgia Tech on September 26.

Opens With Tech.

Tech and Oglethorpe always open the football season in Atlanta and the game this year above all others should be the greatest in the history of the two institutions. Oglethorpe first started its engagements with Tech with a decisive defeat but each year since, the Petrels have slowly cut the margin of the Tech victory down and only last year Tech won by a closer margin than seven points.

Only one change has been made in the schedule of the past year. The Arkansas Polytechnical Institute will be played this year instead of Loyola college. The Petrels have not only the most important members of the S. I. A. A. teams on the schedule but they will take on the Tech Yellow Jackets, one of the strongest elevens in the south.

The season will open on September 26, when the Petrels will encounter the Tech eleven at Grant field. A week later the Petrels will journey to Birmingham where they will play Howard college. The next three games, one with Centre college in Danville on October 9, the University of Chattanooga in Chattanooga on October 16, and on October 22 will travel to Russellville, Ark., and grapple with the Arkansas Polytechnical Institute for the first time in the history of the Peachtree road institution.

Rats Facing Busy Time.

Furman university will be played on Spiller field October 30 and will mark the second home game of the season for the Petrels. The third home game will be the annual clash with the Mercer Bears on November 20. The Petrels will give opposition to the Centenary eleven Thanksgiving day and will close the season on November 27 with Presbyterian college eleven at Spiller park.

The Petrel rats will find a busy season this fall. On October 9, they will play the Tech rats and the following week they play Florida in Jacksonville; October 23, Richmond academy, in Augusta; October 30, Auburn rats, in Montgomery; November 19, University of Chattanooga fresh in Chattanooga.

The Schedule.

Schedule of varsity follows:

September 26, Georgia Tech at Grant field.

October 2, Howard college at Birmingham.

October 9, Centre college, at Danville, Ky.

October 16, University of Chattanooga, at Chattanooga.

October 22, Arkansas Polytechnical Institute, at Russellville, Ark.

October 30, Furman at Spiller's field.

November 6, Citadel, at Charleston, S. C.

November 13, open.

November 20, Mercer university, at Spiller's field.

November 25, Centenary, at Shreveport, La.

November 27, Presbyterian college, at Spiller's field.

World Swimming Records Smashed

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Two world swimming records were broken at a meet here today by contestants of the Illinois A. C. in a 100-foot tank. Arne Borg, of Sweden, shattered his own mark for the 400-yard free style by covering the distance in 4:31 against his old time of 4:34 3-5 set at Detroit in March, 1925. Robert D. Skelton bettered his own record for the 400-yard breast stroke with a time of 5:48 4-5 against his former mark of 5:55.

Collins Passes Ruth To Hold Other Yanks

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, July 24.—The roster of athletes playing ball in the American league still can be stated as Babe Ruth and quite a number of other people. The other people include such ball players as Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins, Walter Johnson and Tris Speaker, each of whom might be some one in particular in this league if the Babe were not the Babe.

Collins, himself, was speaking of one thing and another in the American league today, parsing and analyzing ball clubs and the probabilities, and when he said his piece he had said just this—that Babe Ruth has come back this year; that the Yankees came back with him, and that the Babe, therefore, is the pacemaker for the Yankees, who are the pacemakers for all the other people comprising the seven other ball clubs.

And thus the Babe is the one ball player who matters most to all of the others, because without him the Yankees would not have jumped away in front of the league and the competition just now would be a contest rather than a pursuit.

Others Hit With Babe.

Collins spoke more of what the Yankees might not have done without Babe than what they have done with him, which is going around to the side door to get into the same saloon.

"If Ruth doesn't hit there is an effect on the hitting of all the other Yankees," he said. "When they see him whaling the ball over the place they all go up and hit.

"When the Babe is hitting and the others are hitting with him, the other team has to play an entirely different sort of ball game. The Yanks go out behind the Babe and run up a lead of two or three runs and the other team's strategy has to be rearranged with the idea of getting runs wholesale. One run is no good against a team that is hitting and scoring that way. It's suicide to play normal, close baseball then. You have to go out swinging.

"There has been some complaint lately because the pitchers have been passing Ruth and I realize that this is rather rough on the people in the stands. But our object is to win ball games and I would rather put him on base any time than let him hit. It isn't the mere fact that you get rid of Ruth. That isn't the only object, for there are heavy hitters following along behind him. But if the Babe walks, those other hitters coming behind have missed that psychological kick which makes the Yankees hit. They're easier to handle than they would be if the Babe had hit one out of bounds.

"I wish," Mr. Collins said, "that I could get my ball club to believe that it can't be licked. I don't mind admitting that I think highly of my ball club, but they haven't been aroused as the Yankees were when they were getting the jump on the league. Hitting is my idea of a laudable pursuit. I much admire hitting. The Yankees' offensive, I might say, has covered a number of cracks in the defense. We'll be aroused yet this year. These fellows of ours will get mad. Then we'll go out and win those games that we haven't any right to lose.

CRACKERS TAKE FIRST GAME FROM MOBILE BEARS, 8-3

Smith Lowers Course Record To Break Tie

Garden City, N. Y., July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The magic touch in MacDonald Smith's putter today carried the Lakeville professional to a sensational and record-breaking victory over Gene Sarazen, the defending titleholder, in their play-off for the 1926 metropolitan open golf championship.

Shooting a 66, seven under par, that clipped a stroke from his own record for the No. 3 course of the Salisbury Country club, Smith emerged triumphant by a four-stroke margin. Sarazen himself was three under par with a 70, but even such stroking as this was unable to match the uncanny accuracy with which Smith controlled his short game, pitching with deadly precision and sinking putts of four to 40 feet from all corners of the greens.

Spectacular Climax.

It was a spectacular climax to an unprecedented struggle for a major championship of the links, setting a new endurance mark as well as witnessing an unusually high standard of scoring. The battle had been waged over a fortnight's period with the Carnoustie Scott and his stocky Italian rival deadlocked at the end of 72 holes of championship play proper with scores of 286, and tied again at the end of each of two 18-hole play-off rounds last Sunday with 70 and 72 apiece.

Smith, with his record-breaking round today which beat his own tournament round of 67 and finished with a grand total of 494 strokes to his rival's 498 for the seven complete rounds or 126 holes of play. Some idea of the victor's brilliancy is shown by the fact that his total is 17 shots under par or 10 under "even fours." His average for each round was 70 4-7.

Sarazen, in spite of his rival's superb display, made a game bid to keep his crown. He got off to a good start by winning the first hole, when Smith required three putts, but this was Gene's only moment of ascendancy for the day just as it also was his opponent's only lapse. Smith squared the tally on the second hole when he sank a 10-foot putt; took the lead on the fifth, where Sarazen required three putts with a ball half covered with mud; and left the defending champion behind with an astonishing streak of scoring on the homeward nine holes.

Smith was two strokes in the lead at the turn, adding to his margin at the seventh with a fine pitch and 6-foot putt for a birdie. He settled the issue by adding a stroke to his advantage on each of the next three holes, sinking a 15-foot putt for a birdie two on the tenth, getting his par four on the eleventh with a 4-footer, while Sarazen was wasting a shot in the rough, and taking the twelfth with a curling 20-foot putt for another birdie.

Has Hard Luck.

Undismayed, Sarazen himself sank a long putt to win the fourteenth but Smith came back with a birdie two to win the short fifteenth. He saved a half on the next hole with a 40-foot putt uphill and squared the seventeenth with a 6-footer. On the final green Smith's bid for a concluding birdie missed by a fraction of an inch when his putt hung on the lip of the cup, Sarazen taking the hole with a four to reduce the final margin between them to four strokes.

Sarazen had registered four birdies in the closing nine holes for a 33, three under par, yet he lost two strokes to his rival, who bagged five birdies to hang up a record mark of 31. Smith required only one putt on ten greens and six of them came on the last nine holes.

The cards follow:

Par (out)	5	4	4	4	5	3	4	4	3	—37
Smith	5	3	4	4	4	4	3	4	4	—35
Sarazen	4	4	4	4	5	4	3	4	4	—37

Plan Many Tourneys For Atlanta Golfers

BY ROY E. WHITE.

With the southern amateur and the Georgia state golf tournaments out of the way for another year, local golfers are turning to club tournaments that will be played over the various courses of the city. The tournament list is attractive and long.

Only two tournaments of major importance remain for contestants, the annual city championship meet and the junior tourney, which will be played at some later date. A committee composed of representatives from every golf club in the city is at work for the city tournament. The course upon which the tourney will be played has not been determined.

Druid Hills Golf club leads the others in the number of tournaments yet to be played. After completion of the president's cup tournament, now in progress, the club championship, best ball team match, seniors for members of the club 50 years old and over, Labor day, club championship and an annual get-together windup dinner tournaments are to be be played.

Lowry Arnold, well known Atlanta sportsman, will captain one of the teams in the annual dinner tournament to be held on October 6, while Dr. T. P. Hinman, president of the Druid Hills Golf club will captain the other. Following the one-day golf tourney, the annual dinner will be held at the clubhouse, the losing team to pay for the dinner.

The best ball team match will be played on August 7, and players may select their opponents. Handicaps will apply. The senior tournament will be played on August 21.

Labor Day Tournament.

The Labor day tourney has been set for September 6, while the annual club championship will be played on September 11. Handsome trophies will be given to winners and runners-up in each of the tourneys.

Two important tournaments are yet to be played over the Brookhaven Country club course. The junior tournament for the Stewart-Lucien Harris trophy will be played on July 26 and the annual club championship will be played on September 2, 3 and 4. Handicaps will apply in the junior tourney. There will be eight players in each flight of this tournament.

Qualifying rounds in the club championship will be played on Friday and Saturday, September 3 and 4, and the lowest 16 scores will be placed in the championship flight. Handsome trophies will be awarded the winners and runner-up in each of the flights and the medalist in the qualifying round will also receive a handsome trophy.

Five tournaments are yet to be played over the East Lake course, it was announced by members of the golf committee.

The Latham-Atkinson tournament will be played during the latter part of July. The president's cup tournament, and the club championship will be played during August and September. Plans are being worked out by members of the East Lake golf committee for a junior tournament, but the details have not been completed.

A 36-hole medal play tournament will be played on the East Lake course Friday and Saturday, July 23 and 24, it was announced. Players may play the 36 holes the same day or may play one round of 18 holes one day and complete the remaining 18 holes the next day, provided no other golf matches or practice has been engaged in during the intervening time.

Ansley Park Program.

Two tournaments of real importance are yet to be played over the Ansley Park golf course, the club championship and the senior tournament. Match play in the club championship will start Monday afternoon.

The annual senior tournament at Ansley Park will be played early in September. Trophies will be given to winners and runners-up in each of the tournaments, and low medalists in each of the qualifying rounds will receive a trophy.

Several tournaments will be played on the nine-hole West End golf course during the next two months. The club championship will be one of the feature tourneys at West End during the latter part of August or the first of September, it was announced by members of the club.

While many of the individual club tournaments are being played over the various 18-hole courses, other players, not members of any private club, will battle on the two municipal links, the stockade and the Piedmont park courses.

Several feature foursomes have been planned by regular players on the municipal links and plans are under way for great tourneys, open to everyone, on both the stockade and the Piedmont park courses.

During the past month more golfers have played on Atlanta's two municipal courses than ever before over the same length of time. With each report filed with L. L. Wallis, manager of parks, an ever-increasing number of players is recorded.

BACK IN THE GAME

Helen Wills, queen of American tennis courts, is back in America after an extensive trip abroad, where she competed with Mlle. Lenglen in all of the big tournaments except at Wimbledon, when she was forced out of play after an operation. She is getting ready to defend her American title at Forest Hills.

Dolp Defeats Stein To Win Golf Title In Western Tourney

White Bear Lake, St. Paul, Minn., July 24.—(AP)—A slender, unassuming youth from the Pacific northwest—Frank Dolp, of Portland—won the western amateur golf championship here late today.

A golfing machine with a magical putter, he trod the hilly White Bear Yacht club course through the day, persistently winning holes until he had defeated Bronson E. Stein, of Seattle, 6 and 5.

Takes Early Lead.

Silent and without a smile, the 21-year-old Portland star made his way, winning the very first hole, making the morning turn one up and improving his lead on the next two nines.

He was never down. The match terminated a week of wonderful golf for the new champion, who succeeds to the crown worn in the past by Keefe Carter, of Oklahoma City, who was put out this year in the second round by Stein.

Dolp went into the championship rounds with a qualifying score of 77-72—149. His first and second round victories included the elimination of Harrison Johnston, of St. Paul, medalist, and in those two rounds Dolp was never over par of 36-36—72.

He played this quarter and semi-final matches under par, winning yesterday from Kenneth Hisert, Chicago, in 34-35—69, for the first 18 and taking a par 36 on the third nine, the match ending in the last nine.

Today was Dolp's first match over par for 18 holes. He went out this morning in 38 and came home in 35 for 73, while his first afternoon nine was a par 36. He was two over par on the four holes played in the fourth nine.

While Stein could not match this performance, his work was not far below it. Only for the first four holes did the Seattle man seem to have a likelihood of victory, but after the fifth hole Dolp's ultimate success seemed assured.

Started as Caddie.

The new western amateur champion will be 22 years old in two weeks. He stands six feet tall and got the customary successful golfers' start as a caddie. He now is an insurance salesman.

He first came into prominence out in the Pacific northwest five years ago when he won the Portland city championship. That year he participated in the Washington (D. C.) and Dayton (Ohio) public links tournaments with fair success.

Joining the Alderwood Country club of Portland, he won the Oregon state amateur championships in 1925 and 1926. He holds his own course record, as well as the record of five other Portland courses.

Dolp left tonight for Portland with other members of the group of far northwest golfers.

GANZEL HITS HOMER TOBEAT NEW ORLEANS

Ganzel's homer in the final half of the 10th inning gave the Birmingham Barons a 9-to-8 victory over the Southern league leaders Saturday. New Orleans scored twice in their half of the final frame, but failed to put across the tying score.

"Lefty" Brillheart, Memphis portsider, pitched shutout ball against the Nashville Vols and contributed a homer in the seventh inning to help win his own game, 8 to 0. The Chicks touched Frey and Green for 13 safeties.

Bears Outhit Crackers.

Atlanta scored enough runs in one inning to beat Mobile by a final count of 8 to 3. The Crackers tallied five times in the sixth frame. The Bears touched Markle for 10 hits, one more than the visitors were able to garner off two local twirlers, but were unable to bunch their bingles.

Chattanooga took Little Rock into camp, 5 to 1, scoring all their runs in two innings.

Four double-headers were scheduled Saturday in the Sally league. The Greenville Spinners, leading the association teams, split even with Charlotte, dropping the first game to the North Carolinians, 10 to 5, but taking the second, 9 to 5.

The second place Asheville club dropped two games to Knoxville. They were shut out in the opener, 1 to 0, and badly beat in the second game, which ended 10 to 4.

Peaches Break Even.

Macon broke even with Augusta, winning 7-6 and losing 7-5. Winn held Augusta to nine safeties in the opener.

After dropping the opener to Columbia, 2 to 1, in 14 innings, Spartanburg came back strong to win the second game, 14 to 2. It was a six-inning affair halted by darkness.

While Walker held St. Augustine to three hits, the Southeastern league leading Montgomery Lions pounded Whatley hard to beat the Saints, 8 to 1.

The Albany Nuts took Savannah into camp by the same count, 8 to 1. It was their third straight victory over the visitors.

Rain forced postponement of the scheduled Jacksonville at Columbus game.

Yesterday's Homers In Southern League

SUSKO TIES COUNT.

Mobile, Ala., July 24.—(AP)—Susko made a circuit drive for the Bears in the last half of the fifth against the Atlanta Crackers here this afternoon. No one was on base at the time and the homer tied the score at 2-2.

BRILLHEART HITS ONE.

Nashville, Tenn., July 24.—Brillheart, portsider of the Birmingham Barons, hit a homer in the seventh against the Volunteers here today.

GANZEL HITS ANOTHER.

New Orleans, July 24.—(AP)—Ganzel hit a homer for the Barons in the first half of the tenth inning with the Pelicans this afternoon.

Pirates Suspend Hurler Morrison

Pittsburgh, July 24.—(AP)—Pitcher John Morrison, now at his home in Owensforo, Ky., was suspended indefinitely by the Pittsburgh Nationals today. Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss, said Morrison left Pittsburgh several days ago without permission from the club and has disregarded orders to return.

Morrison was recently discharged from a hospital after a tonsil operation. He has also experienced difficulty with his pitching arm.

Atlantans Stage Rally in 6th Frame To Score Five Runs

Mobile, Ala., July 24.—(Special.)—Mobile dropped the first game of the Atlanta series 8-3 here Saturday afternoon, when Oscar Fuhr walked five batters in the first inning and was hit hard in the visitors' sixth and added two more free passes to this string of wild heaves. Cliff Markle, who was the selection of Manager Bert Niehoff for the Atlanta club, was somewhat erratic at times and yielded more hits than Fuhr, but he did not permit the locals to bunch them to any extent and was strong when he was in trouble with runners in scoring position.

Fuhr was through after the Crackers' seventh inning and Howard Merritt worked the eighth, giving way to a pinch hitter, while Dewey McKnelly, a young right-hander, heaved the ninth and was not scored on.

Summary—Two-base hits, Brock, Haas, Durocher, Cueto; home run, Susko; stolen bases, Good, Niehoff, Gilbert, Cueto; sacrifices, Schultz, Markle, Good, Niehaus; double plays, Niehoff, Durocher and Niehaus; left on base, Atlanta 10, Mobile 12; base on balls, off Fuhr 8, off Markle 7, off Merritt 1; struck out, by Fuhr 2, by Markle 3, by McKnelly 1; hits, off Fuhr 9 in 7 innings with 8 runs; Merritt none in 1 inning with no runs; wild pitch, Fuhr; losing pitcher, Fuhr. Umpires, Guthrie and Clark. Time, 2:20.

Works Triple Steal.

Good was responsible for the Crackers' first run in the opening frame, when he designed a triple steal, being on the front end of it after Fuhr had passed him, Niehoff and Gilbert to fill the bases. A fourth walk issued to Haas and the fifth one of the frame dished out to Brock forced home a run.

Mobile tried hard to tie up the session in their part of the first inning, but were just able to score one marker. With two men out, Markle walked Stock, who reached third when Joe Schultz slashed a hard smash through the box. Hood found Markle for a single to right and Stock scored. Schultz reached third on the play due to Good's fumble, but Cueto ended the chance by skying to Good in right.

Markle was in lots of trouble after the Bears' first inning due to his wildness, but he managed to keep the locals away from the plate until their sixth. In this inning the sensational Susko made a tie possible by hitting a home run over the right-field wall.

The Crackers broke up the knotted session in the sixth inning and flashed out in front with a five-run lead before the frame was ended. Brock led off in the winning stanza with a blow to right field that was good for a double when Umpire Clark called him safe at second, when he was plainly out by several feet. Durocher reached first on a walk. Markle drove a hot smash at Hood that he handled perfectly and forced Durocher at second, and Stock trying for a double play, threw bad to first, Brock scoring and the visiting hurler reaching second.

Gets in Bad.

Fuhr got in bad again with another walk, to Good. A wild pitch by Fuhr moved up Markle and Good and when Manager Niehoff shot a single to left field, his second safe blow for the day, Markle came home and Good reached third. Niehaus sent Cueto to far right for his sacrifice fly, on which Good scored and Niehoff went to third. Griffith followed with a single to right to score Niehoff. Gilbert got in the hitting bee with a single to left, moving up Griffith to second, from where he scored when Haas doubled to left and Gilbert reached third. The scoring stopped when Brock on his second visit to the plate fouled out to Hood.

The Crackers continued their scoring in the eighth inning when Durocher's smash to left field hopped over Schultz's head for a double. A sacrifice moved him to third, from where he scored when Uncle Wilbur drove out a long smash to right field that Denny Williams got under after a long sprint.

The Bears had a chance for a bunch of runs in their half of the eighth when the bases were filled, but only one run was put over. Hood singled with one down and Cueto sent him to third with a double to right. Ritchie walked and when Kelly singled to left, Hood scored. Griffith's fast relay checked Cueto from coming home. Markle then stepped on the "fluid" and fanned Settlemire and Williams' best was to roll out from Niehoff to Niehaus.

Continues Hitting.

Susko continued his sensational hitting for the Bears, driving out a home run and a single today, running his total hits for six games in five days to 14, a home run, a triple, two doubles and 10 singles. Stock and Schultz continued their heavy swatting of the week yesterday with two hits each, while Albie Hood and Cueto carried off the fielding honors.

Manager Niehoff, of the visitors, turned in two singles and played hard ball to win, making two nice catches in right field. Gilbert, third station guardsman of the Crackers, pulled two dazzling plays in the contest, by going behind third for drives and making lightning pegs, chopping runners at first and second. Griffith ran some distance from deep left to snare Williams' short fly back of short, while the Mobile center fielder made a real sizzling catch in the seventh of Good's long drive near the far right field fence.

TIGER FLOWERS WINS DECISION OVER HUFFMAN

Los Angeles, July 24.—(AP)—Tiger Flowers, of Georgia, middleweight boxing champion, won the referee's decision over Sailor Eddie Huffman, of Los Angeles, in a 10-round bout at Ascot Park here late today. The negro titleholder's crown was not at stake.

Girl's 3rd Attempt At Channel Fails

Folkestone, England, July 24.—(AP)—Miss Mercedes Gleitze, young London typist, has failed again to swim the English channel. This was her third attempt. She started about noon and was taken out of the water after five hours after she had covered about 19 miles, though not in a direct course.

Miss Gleitze was followed by a motorboat and as the swim proceeded, the wind increased and the sea became very choppy. Waves broke over the head of the girl and drenched all aboard the boat.

Barbee To Join Athletics Today

Durham, N. C., July 24.—(AP)—Dave Barbee, home run king of the Piedmont league, and third baseman for Greensboro, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where he will join the Athletics, it was announced here today.

Barbee was sold to the Philadelphia club early in the season for a price said to have been $10,000.

Umpires Are Ordered To Check Up on Cobb

Washington, D. C., July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Orders have been issued to American league Umpires McGowan and Connolly, now in Washington, to call check on Ty Cobb, fiery manager of the Detroit Tigers, when he indulges in tactics which delay games. The instructions, from Ban Johnson, president of the league, followed a protest telegram from Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, over Cobb's activities of yesterday, which featured the 2 hours and 40 minutes it took to play a nine-inning game.

The umpires did not disclose the exact nature of their orders, but a telegram from Johnson to Griffith assured the club president that the arbiters had been directed to see that Cobb's outbursts were restricted.

Shows Fighting Spirit.

The fighting spirit of the Tigers was in evidence again today, but Cobb's part largely was that of peacemaker. He ended a wordy battle between Pitcher Earl Whitehill and McGowan over ball and strike decisions, and later again ran to the plate from the dugout to seperate Outfielder Fothergill and McGowan. Just before Cobb arrived Fothergill clenched his fist and stepped close to the umpire, but no blows were struck. He was banished from the game, over the protest of Cobb. Umpire Connolly then hastened to the scene and Cobb was waved back to the dugout.

The "Georgia Peach" spent most of the time in the coaching boxes, "riding Alvin Crowder." Washington pitcher making his big league debut, but the rookie settled down after a furious first inning and pitched a good game.

Public Criticism.

Yesterday's game was marked by public criticism by Cobb of two of his own players, Catcher Woodall and First Baseman Blue. Blue was banished by Cobb when he pushed the manager aside to end the argument.

Earlier Cobb had protested that he had been struck by a missle hurled from the stands. Police and Washington club officials investigated but made no arrests. Cobb, however, addressed spirited remarks to that section of the stands, filled with "ladies day" spectators.

Many Famous Ring Champions Found by Accident

Battlers of Past Took Long Chances On Entering Game

By ROBERT EDGREN.

Accident may not have made any world's ring champions, but accident and environment started most of them on the climb to titles and fortunes.

There is the case of Paul Berlenbach. Paul was an amateur wrestler, a very good one, although he had been wrestling only a short time. Paul had astonishing strength. He was built something like a larger Terry McGovern, with a rather long, thick neck and wide, sloping shoulders, good arms and huge forearms, wrists and hands. Paul was a member of the New York Athletic club, won championships and trained in the club's wrestling room. But Paul developed a habit of wandering across the hall and watching the boxers at work with Dan Hickey and Young Mike Donovan, son of the famous Mike, who ws middleweight champion many years ago, and boxed with John L. Sullivan and President Roosevelt.

One day Paul asked Hickey to let him box. Matt Halpin, director of club athletics, objected.

"Let Berlenbach stick to wrestling," he said. "I don't want a good wrestler spoiled."

"Why not knock the boxing idea out of him?" queried Hickey. "If he wants to box let him box. He'll be glad to go back to the mat."

Tried to Discourage Paul.

Hickey told Young Mike Donovan to try Paul out, and cut loose enough to discourage him.

Paul went in and boxed with Young Mike. Later Young Mike went to Hickey and said, "Well, I boxed with him."

"Did you discourage him?" asked Hickey.

"Discourage him!" exclaimed Mike. "Say? I fed him punches that would knock out a cigar store Indian and he never stopped rushing at me. When we stopped I asked him if the punches hurt, and he said: 'Which punch? I didn't feel any of them.'

"That bird's as tough as Bat Nelson," Mike went on. "I think he'll make a fighter."

So it is a question whether Mike Donovan or Dan Hickey really "discovered" Paul Berlenbach. Dan Hickey began teaching Paul how to box and found that Paul had a natural knack of hitting a terrific left hook, as well as ability to take punches without feeling them. Matt Halpin objected to the continued boxing, as there was a big wrestling tournament coming soon, but Paul begged to be allowed to box under club colors, promising faithfully to wrestle too and to give all his time to wrestling if he failed to make good with the gloves. Result, before long Paul entered an amateur championship tournament and knocked out three men in the same night, including the intercollegiate heavyweight champion. He knocked out other amateur heavyweights until there were no more to face him, making a much greater reputation as a boxer than he ever had as a mat artist. The club lost him after all, for he became a professional, established the most sensational string of knockouts on record, and in a very short time won the world's light-heavyweight championship and made fortunes for both himself and Dan Hickey, his coach and manager.

A Blow Started Sullivan.

John L. Sullivan was a ball player in Boston, his home town, and might have gone from a local club to the big leagues if he hadn't had an overwhelming love for fighting. Mike Donovan, world's middleweight champion, was holding a benefit for himself in Boston and local sports suggested getting a youngster named John L. Sullivan to "set to" with him, as John L. had shown some fighting ability of the rough house type. Donovan sent for Sullivan and asked him to box a few rounds.

"I'll go easy with you," said Mike, reassuringly.

"You'll be lucky if I don't break your back," growled Sullivan.

Annoyed, Donovan started after Sullivan at a lively clip, crouching to drive a blow into the youngster's body, and John L. swung his great right arm like a baseball bat and brought it down on Mike's shoulder blades to hard that the famous champion was knocked flat on his face, breaking his nose on the floor. Mike skillfully boxed his way through the four rounds, and afterwards shook hands with John L. and advised him to take up fighting professionally, predicting that he'd be a heavyweight champion. John L., with this encouragement, started with a few small bouts for purses of $50 or so, and within a year was the sensation of the American ring.

George Nixon, one of the greatest bantam and featherweight champions of the past century, was a janitor in a small athletic club in Cambridge, Mass. George used to sweep out the club and the adjoining saloon, and practice boxing. After a while he asked Tom O'Rourke to let him go into some of the amateur bouts, and showed such surprising skill that O'Rourke began to match him with professionals, and brought him up to the world's title he held for many years. Frank Erne, one of the cleverest of all lightweight champions, started in a similar way, sweeping out the athletic club in Buffalo, learning how to box, beating the amateurs easily and then becoming a professional. There never was a faster or more clever boxer among the lightweights.

Quits Job to Fight.

Bat Nelson was a waiter and dish washer in a small restaurant in an Illinois town. He was scrappy, and acted as bouncer when necessary. One night he went into a small club gymnasium and put on the gloves with a heavyweight, who bounced Bat on the floor until he grew arm weary. Bat came up unhurt after every knockdown, and finally forced the big fellow to stop and pull off the gloves. Finding that he liked that kind of milling he quit his job in the restaurant and began fighting for five dollar purses, thinking this a very soft way to earn money, and gradually worked his way up to the title.

Jim Jeffries was working in the Lacy ironworks, in Los Angeles, at 18. He was the biggest and strongest man on the job, and liked to box with the other fellows during the noon hour. One day Hank Griffin, a good colored heavyweight, drifted into town and challenged any man to fight him, slapping down a handful of gold twenties on the bar of the saloon where a few ironworks men were drinking after the day's work. The men sent for Jim, who had gone home, and Jim ran back five miles to fight a real fight. Hank explained that he meant a fight in a ring, with gloves on, and it was arranged. After taking a hard hammering Jeffries wore Griffin down and knocked him out, and a year or so later went out in earnest to become a fighter and get the purses that looked so big compared to his weekly pay check.

Packey McFarland was a boy in the packing house district of Chicago. He was the scrappiest youngster in a scrappy section, was always fighting, and, to this day carries a score of scars on his head where rival scrappers in the streets bounced rocks from his bean. Battling Nelson, then world's lightweight champion, had a week in a local theater, boxing exhibition stuff with a ten-word "monologue" thrown in. Packey McFarland was brought up to box Nelson, and made such a show of the champion with his great speed and uncanny skill that Nelson went to his manager, "Iron-Jawed" Nolan, and advised him to "grab this kid and put him under contract to get him in the stable," because unless that was done McFarland would soon be challenging Bat, and clever enough to be dangerous. Packey showed a wise head by refusing to sign in the Nolan stable, for he had a notion he could beat Nelson. He went on fighting and became the greatest boxer of his time. His natural weight was 135 pounds when trained down to the limit, and 133 weakened him, but Nelson never would give him a bout and he missed getting a title he could take with ease today at the present 135 pound mark.

Wanted Excitement.

Stanley Ketchel, a native of Michigan, later became a cowboy in Montana, with a hankering for excitement. He went into a small town to spend his monthly pay, got into a lot of fights, became a bouncer in a saloon dance hall, and developed such fighting ability that after knocking out three or four trouble makers twice his size, one wild night, he was offered a chance to fight professionally with gloves. He made good from the start and a year or so later knocked out Joe Thomas for the world's middleweight title.

Terrible Terry McGovern, a small boy, worked in a Brooklyn lumber yard. One day he licked a big teamster, and Charlie Mayhood, his boss, told Terry he was better at fighting than working. Mayhood started Terry to boxing among the amateurs, and he knocked out a bunch of them in such sensational style that Sam Harris, who was driving a laundry wagon, gave up his job to manage Terry and sent him after the professionals. In a short time Terry knocked out Pedlar Palmer, of England, and became instantly famous. Later he knocked out the great George Dixon and won the featherweight crown. McGovern was one of the greatest fighters that ever lived.

Benny Leonard was one of the few that ever fell into a championship.

Benny, with a lot of other boys, hung around the Fairmont A. C., run by Billy Gibson in the Bronx. The youngsters used to climb in through windows and hide under the ring until the bouts began. One night Benny fell in through a window with a crash. A vigilant usher seized him and dragged him back to Billy Gibson.

Climbs to Championship.

"Well, what's the idea?" queried Gibson, with a humorous twinkle in his eye. "Did you come in to box, or do you just want to look on?"

Benny's mind functioned with the speed that was afterward to make him famous.

"I came in to box," he said.

"All right," said Gibson. "Get some tights on and go right out to the ring for the first preliminary. I'll pick another boy about your weight for you." Benny made good that night, boxed again next week, and climbed out of the preliminaries into the world's title, under Gibson's direction.

There was accident in that, perhaps. But only the accident that gave Benny his start. No champion ever went all the route by accident. He was one of those who had the goods to deliver.

CRUSADER WINS CONEY ISLAND $30,150 DERBY

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 24.—(AP)—Crusader, brilliant son of Man O'War, exhibiting speed, stamina and ability to carry weight over the gruelling test of a mile and a quarter, won the Cincinnati derby at Coney Island today by three lengths from Display. Boot to Boot, Carlaris and four others.

The winner established himself as one of the greatest thoroughbreds seen in the west in years, with Earl Sande guiding his destinies in the remarkable time of 2:02, a new record for the Coney Island track.

The race was worth $30,150 to the winning trainer, George Conway, who announced after the race that the colt will be a starter in the American derby to be run at Chicago next week.

The race during the first part was one of the fastest run in America this year, the fractions being: Quarter, :22 2-5; three eights, :34 1-5; half, :46 2-5; three quarters, 1:11 1-5; mile, 1:36; mile and eighth, 1:48, and mile and quarter, 2:02.

The starter dispatched the field to a perfect start. Boot to Boot immediately went to the front, closely followed by Carlaris and Crusader.

Crusader moved up on Carlaris at the far turn after Boot to Boot faltered and went into third position. Just before going into the stretch turn Sande urged his colt and he gamely responded.

Crusader and Display represented the east.

The winner paid $3.60 for $2.

American League

ATHLETICS NOSE OUT INDIANS.

Philadelphia, July 24.—The Athletics' losing streak of seven straight games came to an end today when the Mackmen took a 10-inning fray from Cleveland, 6 to 5. Dykes' triple followed by Poole's single with none out in the 10th gave the Athletics the game after Cleveland had tied it up in the seventh.

BOSTON WINS FIRST; TIES SECOND.

Boston, July 24.—Boston defeated and tied St. Louis in their double-header here today. The Red Sox carried the first game, a heavy-slugging contest, 14 to 9, and the second was called by agreement at the end of the ninth to allow St. Louis to catch a train for Cleveland. At that time the score stood 5 to 5.

Home runs by Hargrave and Flagstead, the former bringing in three runs, featured the first game, in which each club used four pitchers. Three hits in the ninth inning of the second game enabled Boston to make two runs and tie the score. An error by Haney in the sixth was responsible for two St. Louis runs. Scores:

YANKS DOWN WHITE SOX.

New York, July 24.—The New York Yankees made it four straight from the Chicago White Sox by winning today's game, 7 to 4. This was the first series the New Yorkers have taken since their present home stand against the western clubs. Koenig's circuit drive with one on in the seventh, served up the game for the Hugmen. The Yankees increased their lead to nine games as a result of the Athletics' victory over Cleveland.

DETROIT WINS, 3 TO 2.

Washington, July 24.—Detroit made enough runs in the first inning of today's game with Washington to win, 3 to 2. Crowder, former Birmingham pitcher, surrendered his first game for the Senators, was touched for eight hits, four of them in the first frame, when the Tigers scored all their runs. Whitehill yielded seven hits.

Before the game the Washington club hoisted the 1925 American league pennant with a ceremony in which Postmaster General New took part.

WILL DELANEY LAST?

Can the slugging Jack Delaney keep the light-heavyweight title long if he defends it? This query is raised as his victory over Paul Berlenbach, which won Delaney the title, is discussed. Berlenbach beat him last December. Jimmy Slattery outboxed him last year. Tommy Loughran held him to a draw in 15 rounds. Has Delaney improved enough to hold off these men in return bouts? Photos are of Delaney close up and in the ring.

MANY UPSETS IN BASEBALL IN BIG LEAGUES

New York, July 24.—The baseball season has been preeminently one of marked upsets.

The National league race has been a merry scramble while in the junior circuit the Yankees bid fair, before injuries crippled the team, to run right out of the league.

McGraw took his band of Giants north from Sarasota in the spring confident he had welded together one of his mightiest combinations, superior even to the aggregations which won three straight pennants in 1911, 1912 and 1913, and the outfits which won four flags in succession from 1921 to 1925. As soon as the baseball curtain parted, however, his team flopped badly and it has been floundering in the second division for two months.

Likewise with Cincinnati and the world's champion Pirates. Jack Hendricks thought he was sitting pretty with an incomparable pitching staff and an array of sluggers. It took the Reds a long time to get into their stride but now they seem to be hitting the pennant trail. If the team can maintain a winning gait on the road—it is a notoriously weak road club—the prospects for a championship are bright. Bill McKechnie has had his troubles with Pittsburgh. Injuries have handicapped the team but the Pirates, strong finishers, still believe they will cop the flag. Hornsby's Cardinals are also making a determined bid. Unless the dope is wrong this trio should finish one-two-three.

The Athletics and Senators have not lost hope despite the Yankee marauders. They feel that Huggins' infield will crack, if it has not already done so, around the keystone sack.

Bucky Harris has contended all along that his bunch needs hot weather.

Connie Mack, the taciturn, has smiled more than once because the Athletics have consistently trimmed the Yanks. Eddie Collins, brainy White Sox manager, is playing the game of his life and inspiring his fellow players to greater heights. The White Sox are a real menace.

Glenna Collett Enters Meet

Eastern Point, Conn., July 24.—(AP) Miss Glenna Collett, national open women's champion, will play in the eighth annual women's invitation golf tournament at Shenecossett next week, and try for a second leg in the Griswold trophy. Last year she defeated Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, of Hutchinson, Kan., in the final round.

The tournament opening Monday will last until Friday. Already there are 225 entries.

Among theme are Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Merion, and Mrs. R. H. Barlow, of Philadelphia.

PEBBLES LOSE AGAIN.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 24.—Chattanooga took the third game of the series from the Little Rock Travelers here this afternoon when Rube McKenty bested Southpaw Burke in a sensational exhibition of pitching. Hardford's triple in the fifth gave the Lookouts a one-run lead, which was never overtaken.

Babe Ruth Regains Bat Leadership in American League

Grantham, Herman Among Others Losing Ground in National

Manush, Tiger Batter, Proves Feature of Week With Willow, Going From Tenth To Fifth Place in Stick Race.

Chicago, July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—The league-leading Yankees in the Johnson circuit for the first time this season have fallen as a team below the .300 mark in hitting, but their stellar performer, Babe Ruth, did not share in the slump. Ousted for a week from leadership of the batters, the Babe jumped back to the top in official averages issued today for the week ended Wednesday, gaining six points.

Bib Falk, of the Chicago White Sox, who displaced him temporarily, dropped back a bit, and is now second. Fothergill, Detroit outfielder, has become a regular and has the remarkable percentage of .416, but has played in only two-thirds as many games as the Bambino.

Manush, of Detroit, made the week's best showing with the willow, going from tenth to fifth place among the 10 leading hitters, while most of the others in the first 10 fell back. Detroit and St. Louis were the only American league teams to improve their batting percentages this week.

Gehrig Leads in Runs.

Gehrig, of New York, maintains his lead in runs over Ruth, probably by reason of his high total of 14 three-baggers. Falk holds both the doubles and the total hits leadership, but Ruth, as usual, is far in front in home runs, now having 29.

A newcomer in the majors, Hennefield, of the Chicago White Sox, has taken the lead in base stealing with 16, Meusel, of New York, and E. Rice, of Washington, having failed to pilfer any this week.

Pate, of the Athletics, is now credited with eight straight victories in the box, but Herb Pennock, of the Yankees, is the real leader of the pitchers, with 15 victories to 6 defeats. His teammate, Shocker, is just a step behind, with Zachary, of St. Louis, close up. Dutch Reuther, of Washington, ranks them slightly in percentage among the regulars, but has won but 10 games to 3 defeats.

The Leaders.

Leading American league hitters: Fothergill, Detroit, .416; Ruth, New York, .373; Falk, Chicago, .370; Meusel, New York, .366; Manush, Detroit, .364; Heilmann, Detroit, .358; Burns, Cleveland, .354; Goslin, Washington, .351; Mostil, Chicago, .350; McNeely, Washington, .341.

The St. Louis Cardinals took the hitting honors of the week in the National league, with Lester Bell, third baseman, making the best showing of the squad and going into the first 10 in the official averages issued today. Stephenson, new Chicago outfielder, also has made an impressive gain in percentage, but has played in less than half the season's games.

Christensen, of Cincinnati, was the only one of last week's batting leaders to add much to his rating. Grantham, of the Pirates, and Babe Herman, of Brooklyn, suffering a considerably slump.

Hack Wilson, of the Chicago Cubs, hit his 14th home run of the season, but so did Bottomley, of St. Louis. Fournier, of Brooklyn, crossed into double figures with his circuit drives.

Kiki Cuyler regained his traditional leadership of the base stealers, after a period of obscurity due to the speed of Frank Frisch and Young of New York. Cuyler now has 19, two more than his contenders.

Jones, of Chicago, became the leading pitcher of the league this week, with 7 victories to 1 defeat, but Rhem, of St. Louis, leads the stalwarts with 12 victories and Pete Donohue, of Cincinnati, has 14, though charged with 8 losses.

Leading hitters in the National league: Hargrave, Cincinnati, .378; Bressler, Cincinnati, .372; Herman, Brooklyn, .355; Grantham, Pittsburgh, .351; Christensen, Cincinnati, .348; L. Bell, St. Louis, .341; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .341; Hornsby, St. Louis, .341; E. Smith, Pittsburgh, .347; Cuyler, Pittsburgh, .336.

SEEKS CROWN

Harry Persson, Swedish heavy champ who knocked out Phil Scott, Britisher, recently, is now in the U. S. and wants to tackle Jack Dempsey. Can't blame him for being ambitious. He's shown here limbering up by chopping wood.

HAHN LOOMS HEIR TO RAY'S TRACK CROWN

BY MAURICE MERMEY.

New York, July 24.—Lloyd Hahn, the fleet Nebraskan who represents the Boston A. A., looms as the heir to Joie Ray's middle distance crown by virtue of his remarkable performances at the National A. A. U. championships in Philadelphia.

The cornhusker startled the track world by doing the mile in 4:16 on a muddy track. The next day he negotiated the half-mile, in relay, in 1.51 1-5.

That's a sufficient statement of fact, but it doesn't begin to tell the graphic story. To be sure, Hahn gained about a second in the 880-yard distance by getting a running start, yet with conditions as they were, with a track still soggy from continued rains, the time stands as the finest bit of running in the history of track athletics.

In the peak of his career the doughty Ray could figuratively throw his spiked shoes on the starting line and they would walk off with the race. Hahn seems to be the logical successor to Joie's crown.

The Nebraskan is not new to track competition. He has been pacing the boards and cinderpaths for several years. When Paavo Nurmi was making his record-breaking tour of this country Lloyd took a few beatings from him.

Now Hahn seriously threatens Nurmi's mile mark. None other than Lawson Robertson, the Penn mentor and coach of two American Olympic teams, says that the cornhusker could have done the mile in 4:10 in Philadelphia on a dry track. If he keeps up this pace he should become one of the greatest middle distance men who ever toed the mark.

New Professional At Americus Club

Americus, Ga., July 24.—(Special) Charles B. Ridley, well-known golfer, has accepted the position of golf "pro" at the Americus Golf club, succeeding Charlie Byles, who resigned recently to go to Black Mountain, N. C., where he will have in charge the fashionable new Gold club just organized there. Ridley is a native of Scotland, having been reared at Prestwick, near where many important golf championships have been decided during recent years, and is a golfer of wide experience. He has been a resident of America during the past 12 years, and was employed by a number of golf clubs before coming to Americus. Byles, since coming to Americus, has made a wide circle of friends here.

Cub's Young Hurlers Pushing Club to Top

Chicago, July 24.—(Special.)—The terrific outcry from the baseball world when Joe McCarthy, the rookie Cub pilot, sent Grover Cleveland Alexander to St. Louis, has subsided into a whisper as the Wrigley entry in the National league race continues to crowd the leaders in the back stretch.

McCarthy's team didn't fall apart as many of the partisan Alexander fans predicted. In fact, the position of the Bruins has been strengthened since Alex departed. They are now tied for third place, only three and one-half games from top position.

The amazing feature of the whole thing is that Joe has kept his team within striking distance of the top with a bunch of young pitchers. Early in the season his veterans went stale. Alexander broke training rules and was sent to the Cardinals, Wilbur Cooper, veteran left-hander acquired in a trade with Pittsburgh two years ago, simply couldn't get started and was turned over to Detroit. Once again McCarthy's judgment was vindicated, for Cooper hasn't won a game for his new boss and is being used as a relief pitcher, with no success to date.

Kaufman Only Veteran.

Release of these old-timers left Tony Kaufman the veterant of the Cubs' hurling corps. Kaufmann was pitching fine ball when his salary arm acquired a kink which simply would not permit him to locate the plate. This let-down by his ancient flingers compelled McCarthy to turn to his youngsters.

Charlie Root, acquired from the Coast league, proceeded to set the league afire with his speed ball. Percy Lee Jones, a left-hander of ordinary ability, suddenly blossomed into an iron-man shut-out pitcher. "Sheriff" John Blake, who had toiled for two or three years as a secondstring heaver, bloomed almost overnight as an effective workman. Bill Pierce, "Cowboy" Milstead and "Mississippi Ace" Bush are doing their share of relief work.

McCarthy will take his team on an eastern jaunt the early part of next week. He propheseies a Chicago entry in the fall classic if he can win 50 per cent of his road games.

Soldier Creates New Rifle Record

Private Russell F. Seitzinger, of the marine corps rifle team, created a new record over the national match course at Wakefield, Mass., with a score of 296 out of a possible 300 while competing in the shoot there.

Private Seitzinger enlisted in the marine corps at Atlanta in 1922. His home is in Tennessee. He was a member of the 1924 marine corps rifle team and was a principal figure in that team's success.

Many Fast Colts In Ohio Derby

Cleveland, Ohio, July 24.—(AP)—Some of the best 3-year-olds in training are entered in the Ohio derby, $10,000 added, at Maple Heights, July 28. Two handicaps also are on the getaway card.

Those named to start in the derby, over a mile and a quarter, include Boot to Boot, Carlaris, Display, Cartoon and Brazen. More than 60 were nominated.

At the conclusion of the Maple Heights meeting many of the stables will move to the Thistledown track here, where a 15-day meeting opens July 29. The Flint Stone memorial handicap for 3-year-olds at a mile and a sixteenth with $15,000 added money, is the big race on that program. It will be run August 7.

Dempsey Declares He Will Not Fight for Clements

'Chicago Promoter Holds No Contract With Me,' Says Champ

Colorado Springs, Col., July 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, declared today he would not fight for B. C. Clements, Chicago promoter, "if he had $25,000,000."

"This man has no contract," said Dempsey, attacking Clements' action in attempting to halt fight operations already set in motion by Tex Rickard. "It is true a $10 bill figured in a supplementary agreement but this was invalidated when the Fitzsimmons contract became void upon the non-payment of funds.

"If Clements has contract I don't know where he got it. I do know this, I wouldn't fight for the man under any circumstances. Why, I fooled around with those fellows for eight months without anything happening. Then Rickard came through and Fitzsimmons, like the gentleman he is, got out of the way. And now comes Clements trying to get some money out of it. The whole thing makes me sore."

Politics Responsible.

That politics is chiefly responsible for the present situation is the belief of the champion, following a long-distance telephone conversation last night with Gene Normile, his personal representative.)

"Chicago seems to be a unit against Rickard," Dempsey said, "and he is having difficulty getting the necessary papers with a clique favoring a home-town promoter."

The heavyweight king also said he had heard from his attorney and that he had been assured Clements held nothing in the form of contract. When told that Normile planned to hold Clements to his word and force him to pay $300,000 by August 5 to bind whatever agreement he has, else declare the agreement void, Dempsey exclaimed: "I wouldn't fight for Clements if he had $25,000,000, although it doesn't matter to me whether Wills or Tunney climbs into the ring."

RICKARD'S RIVAL STANDS STEADY.

Chicago, July 24.—(AP)—The mathematical genius of Tex Rickard, New York promoter, ordinarily exercised in such simple arithmetic as computation of gate receipts, guarantees and percentages, was focused today upon the geometrical aspects of a Dempsey-Tunney-Wills heavyweight triangle.

The trick was to project "X," equalling Dempsey, into the squared circle opposite "Y," representing Tunney, without bringing him into proximity with "Z," representing Harry Wills. And while Mr. Rickard agitated his slate pencil into a white heat without arriving at a solution, B. C. Clements, his rival promoter and himself a mathematician of parts, suppressed what amounted to a sly snicker and remarked that he had been trying to tell Mr. Rickard all week that it couldn't be done.

Expecting Mullins.

So saying, Clements set the table for an extra guest, expecting the arrival from New York tomorrow of Paddy Mullins, the manager of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight. Nor was he chagrined by the statement of Dempsey, emanating from the champion's training camp at Colorado Springs, that the heavyweight champion wouldn't fight for Clements now if he had $25,000,000.

Rickard's rival stood firm in his position that he held a contract calling for a Dempsey-Wills match in Chicago, a contract made binding by the payment to Dempsey of $10 spot cash for his signature and calling for $300,000 on August 5 and $500,000 more the day Dempsey steps into the ring against the negro challenger. The $300,000, said Clements, will be proffered to Dempsey on the specified date about a fortnight hence.

Meanwhile, Mullins will be asked, upon his arrival here, to register Wills with the lately-created Illinois boxing commission, to have the negro licensed as a boxer and to make ready otherwise for a projected Dempsey-Wills combat here at Soldiers' field between September 16 and 20.

Clements Notifies Champ.

Dempsey has been notified, said Clements, to take similar steps, and to appear here for training not later than August 6. If he fails to comply, the promoter declared, coercion will be brought to bear in the nature of court action preventing the champion from appearing under the Rickard banner until he has fulfilled his obligations to Clements and the Chicago Coliseum club, which he represents.

Rickard has become aware of Clements' claims to the extent that he has asked his lawyers here for an opinion on the validity of the Clements contracts. This opinion was not forthcoming today and Rickard marked time.

Gene Tunney, in training at White Sulphur Springs, N. Y., for the Dempsey-Tunney bout, which Rickard announced and now is in doubt about, expressed confidence that Rickard would iron out the controversy and stage the match.

A comparatively minor figure in the situation is Jack Kearns, Dempsey's deposed manager. Kearns' contract does not expire until August 3. Kearns is here and is understood to have conferred informally with Rickard.

TUNNEY CONFIDENT OF TEX RICKARD.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 24.—(AP)—Confidence that Tex Rickard will succeed in his plans to stage the fight in Chicago was expressed today by Gene Tunney, who arrived at White Sulphur Springs, Saratoga Lake, to engage in two weeks of training preliminary to going west.

Tunney said he had no doubt of beating Dempsey.

"He has been idle too long," said Tunney, "and has developed a set of nerves that will prove his Waterloo."

'IT WAS A GOOD FIGHT,' SAYS 'PA' UPON RETURN

:: WILL PUT SON AGAINST CHAMP AGAIN ::

Savannah, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—"Pa" Stribling, father of the Georgia Peach, returned to Georgia today after viewing the Delaney-Berlenbach titular match.

"As a whole, it was a right good fight, but I don't believe the people were as pleased with it from an entertaining standpoint as they expected to be," remarked "Pa" this morning.

"Berlenbach, I understand, was weakened because of having to take off so much poundage on the day before the fight. Whether this had anything to do with his defeat, I don't know. I do not believe he will again attempt to make the light-heavyweight limit—it was too much of a struggle for him to make it this time.

"Certainly we expect to meet them again. W. L. is resting now—and when he's had sufficient rest, we'll start back after Berlenbach and Delaney."

"Pa" was in Savannah visiting Orrin Meade, a close friend here. He leaves tonight for Thomasville, where he will join the Stribling family.

PERRIN LEAGUE.

Southern Railway pulls one of the biggest upsets of the season by downing the league-leading Terra Cotta team, 6 to 5, in a hard-fought battle. Hipps, on the mound for the winners, hurled a nice game, allowing only seven hits and striking out ten men. Terra Cotta was leading by two runs until the fifth inning when the Railroaders rallied. With two men out, Hipps starts the fireworks by beating out a roller and he scored when Thurmond tripled to center field. Bushee doubled, scoring Thurmond and he rode home on Carroll's one-timer. Terra Cotta tied it in the sixth and went ahead by scoring a run in the eighth and ninth innings. Hipps started the final rally in the ninth by doubling. He rode home on Thurmond's two-cracker and when Carroll singled, Thurmond trotted home with the winning run.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

St. Mark Methodist split a double-header with Gordon Street Presbyterian in winning the first, 8 to 6, and losing the second, 4 to 3. Still weakened in the ninth and the winners pushed four runs across. Carter and Royston hit well in the first melee in getting two hits, K. Campbell, Bynum, Carter 2, Jones, Taylor and Forster all hit for doubles. Thornburg walloped one for a sure homer in the ninth inning, scoring one ahead of him, but Nutty Campbell noticed he did not touch second and he was called out. The winners started off scoring early and made three runs in the first inning. M. Johnson with a triple and Woodall and Forster with a double made the only extra base hits. Woodall made three hits out of five attempts. Each team pulled a double play in both games.

The Buick Motor company won a well-played game yesterday from the Citizens' and Southern bank with a score of 4 to 1. Cliff Rucker, pitched for Buick Motor company, who fanned eleven men, and Conkle second baseman for the same team, deserve mention for their good games of yesterday. H. Rucker and Walker tied for honors in knocking home runs, each having one to his credit. The hits and errors chalked up for both clubs were few, the general tight playing being an interesting feature.

Exposition won a hard-fought game this afternoon from Whittier Mills, 4 to 0. The game was strictly a pitchers' battle until the fifth inning, when Exposition drove Thompson from the mound, scoring four runs. Woodrum was the star of the day with the stick, getting a triple with the bases loaded. Pugh pitched air-tight ball all through the game, giving up three hits, while his teammates were touching the Whittier Mill twirlers for 10.

Beck and Gregg won a fast game from Atlanta-Lowry by the score of 10 to 1, Saturday afternoon. Cole, on the mound for the winners, was in great form, allowing the Bankers only two hits and sending 10 back to the bench on three strikes. Only 30 men faced him during the nine innings. Cole also helped to win his own game by slamming out two doubles and a single in four trips to the plate. Simmon and McConnell showed up best for the losers.

MOVE FLINT FACTORY TO NEW JERSEY PLANT

The past week marked one of the most important manufacturing events in the industry when Flint Motor Car company definitely closed the transaction of disposing of its Flint Michigan factory and started immediately to effect the removal of the big company's effects to its huge new and modern factories in Elizabeth, N. J.

The transaction has been one of vast importance not only from a production standpoint but from the financial angle as well. In both of these vital factors the Flint organization finds itself now in a stronger position than ever before in its history.

It is reported by officials that approximately $4,000,000 profit has been netted from the disposal of the Flint plant in Michigan and that on the manufacturing side the company will be enabled to proceed making more cars than ever before under the most ideal manufacturing conditions in a plant where no compromises have to be made with quality workmanship or efficient methods.

The profits accruing from the sale are said to be already accredited to the company's reserve funds and will be devoted exclusively to demands of large scale operations in the production and distribution of Flint automobiles from the new Elizabeth plants.

The geographic location of the new factories has occasioned great interest in that it takes this old line firm from the Detroit region into the east, a move that transportation experts of the company claim will suit well the requirements of the shipping department and will mean materially lowered freight charges, especially to such points as Atlanta and the southeast.

In Atlanta the move has been received by W. B. Snyder, branch manager, with a great deal of enthusiasm. This branch has of late been making an enviable record in the sale of Flint cars and according to Mr. Snyder will now be enabled to proceed toward new high marks in this market due to the factory's increased resources and strong position.

DETROIT POLICE USE JEWETT SEDAN TO TELL THE WORLD HOW TO DRIVE

Here's the latest terror for the traffic law violator—the traveling traffic tower, or "caution car," used by the Detroit police. Hundreds of drivers have enjoyed (?) having the caution car roll alongside them while the traffic sergeant inside courteously called attention to errors in driving, in tones heard over the whole block. The amplifying apparatus is mounted on a New-Day Jewett sedan, a car most suitable because of the facility with which it can weave its way through traffic. Sergeant Herbert O. Rounds, of the public safety bureau, shown in the photo on the curb, has "broadcast" scores of safety talks, addressing thousands at important street intersections; has cautioned hundreds of jay-walkers, and called attention to unnumbered motor law violations.

Windmill turbines are being perfected in Germany for obtaining a large part of its electrical energy from the air by harnessing the wind for cheap electric current. A windmill with a diameter of 45 feet has been developed to generate 21 kilowatts of electricity per hour. A wind velocity of eight miles an hour is sufficient to turn the windmill, a six-bladed device.

The NEW MARMON

Drive Up to Our New Marmon Service Department—

Inspect the New Marmon

Atlanta motorists are demonstrating keen interest in the Marmon these days.

Our new organization, and our new Maintenance Department, and our plans for future development seem to have impressed the buyers of quality cars, who have made our salesrooms a mecca during the last week.

Our display of New Marmons is more than worth while inspecting if you are considering a quality car.

Never before has Marmon been in a more fortunate position. Its sales gains during recent months for the country at large have been remarkable. Complete reports show that May of this year was best retail sales month Marmon ever experienced. June surpassed May by a good margin.

We feel particularly fortunate in acquiring the Marmon distributing account right in the midst of its greatest sales success.

Credit Plan Reduces Cost of Automobiles

Even Flow of Production and Other Economic Advantages Accrue With Budget Buying Under Established System.

The following statement with reference to the pay-as-you-use plan was made by H. L. Purdy, vice president of the Marmon Motor Car company.

"A stranger to America—perhaps a man from Mars—standing, on a Sunday afternoon, beside one of our city boulevards and watching the cars stream by in an endless procession, a small fortune represented every minute, might well concede that the Americans are the wealthiest people in the world, but, at the same time, wonder how they accumulated all that money.

"The answer is in budget or installment buying. Powerful finance companies, underwriting the earning capacity of the American citizen, have authorized popular bond issues, running into the hundreds of millions, which not only enable the masses to own and enjoy cars, but which actually lower production costs, hold production steady, and keep a vast army of people profitably employed.

"As vice president of the Marmon company, I have often marveled at this extraordinary credit system by means of which cheap and luxurious transportation, coupled with the delights of country and suburban life, have been placed within reach of practically all the people.

Everyone Can Own a Car.

"There is no such thing today as the 'automobile classes.' We have no modern 'men on horseback.' Almost anybody, if he is reasonably ambitious and productive, may own a car, and without mortgaging himself up to the neck, either.

"It is this installment system that is helping to maintain the present high standards of American living. Never before in history has the working man been able to earn a decent living with less drudgery than today. Economists have figured out that the average worker requires only six hours a day to provide himself with the necessities of life. It is the extra two or four hours he puts in that buys his luxuries, such as automobiles—if motor cars can be so classed.

"The pessimist—the alarmist, will ask: 'When will the bubble burst?' 'Surely,' the crepe-hangers argue, 'such inflated prosperity cannot go on forever. This house of cards must come fluttering down sometime.'

Federal Reserve Aids.

"It is well to remember in this connection that since the inauguration of the federal reserve banking system there have been no financial panics in this country.

"Stricter immigration laws have kept from our gates the horde of undesirables, recruits for an army of the unemployed. It has been many years since we have seen a 'Coxey's army.' Every willing, ablebodied man has work of some kind to perform, and wages have more than doubled since the war and everybody seems to be riding on the tide of prosperity.

"We have, moreover, highly specialized agencies that can forecast with a great degree of accuracy, business conditions for some months to come. Should clouds hover about the horizon, the finance companies which 'stake' His Majesty, the American citizen, to his car, would draw into their shells like snails, and credit would be judiciously curtailed. But thus far, everything is rosy.

Installment Buying.

"The people are enjoying their income as they make it. One no longer has to save up for the day when he can pay cash for a car. On a capital of $500 one can pay the first installment on a $1,500 car. Seven per cent is added to the balance, making the total $1,070, payable in 12 equal installments, covering all charges including fire and theft insurance. And from my own experience with production, I am safe in stating that, without such an arrangement the cost of the car would be at least $200 more.

"Installment buying, by eliminating peak periods, and keeping the plant busy at all seasons of the year, makes for lower prices. A lowered factory production means high prices.

"Installment buying, which has reached such a stage that outstanding paper in the industry fluctuates around the $1,500,000,000 mark, has capitalized consumption, whereas in former days, only production was capitalized.

Purchases Budgeted.

"We are told that more than 70 per cent of the cars turned out by the factories are sold on the new budget plan. This plan has the additional advantages of encouraging thrift and productiveness. The average man will save and economize to meet certain payments due, and with a definite end in view, when he might not find it so easy to save for mere accumulation.

"Having an extra responsibility placed upon him, he becomes more reliable and a better workman than if he were drifting aimlessly. Nor is his car a foolish buy, but a tangible asset, a means of increasing his efficiency and earning capacity, and a means of adding to his enjoyment of life."

STUPENDOUS CHANGE PREDICTED BY WILLYS

Predicting an immediate and revolutionary change in motoring throughout the entire world, due to the appearance of a new Europeanized type of American light car, while others may follow shortly from some of our greatest automobile factories, John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., sailed Saturday on the Majestic for Europe.

The purpose of his trip is to attend the introduction of the Overland Whippet in Europe and to go further into the newer automobile developments on which the foreign engineers have been working.

"There is every reason to believe," he said, "that a spectacular change is about to take place in motoring throughout the world and in the attitude of motorists of every class toward light cars. It is being shown by American manufacturers that the highly efficient, well-built, attractive-looking light car of high speed and great operating economy can be adapted by the use of our standard tread, an adequate wheelbase and a clever use of inside rooms to the motoring needs of people in every country on earth. The European type of light car, as excellent as it is, has been restricted by extremely low power, low hill climbing ability, narrow tread and general diminutiveness to the smooth flat roads of Europe. That is why, I believe, they have not made good progress in this country.

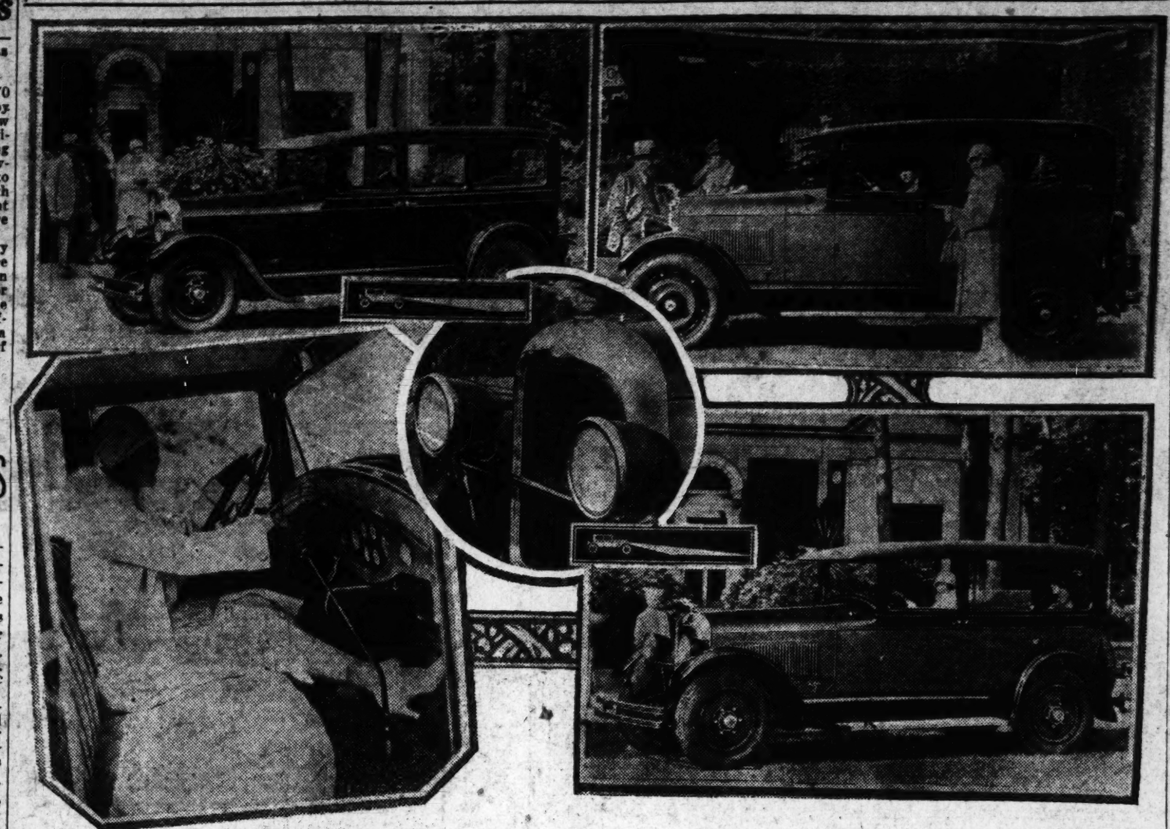

"I do not claim that they will take the place of larger cars but this new American light car, such as our Whippet, will change people's opinions concerning the type of small cars known hitherto, both in the United States and Europe. They will be real automobiles with great speed, ample power, wonderful hill-climbing ability and a gasoline economy entirely new to the American public. In addition, they will have the infinitely greater room than a majority of the European light cars, splendid riding qualities and can be built at less than half the price for which their European prototype can be sold here, at the same time competing favorably with those cars in the export field.

"The interest that the American public feels in small cars which promise to reduce many of the present problems of motorizing has been astonishingly evidenced by the fact that the first of the American light cars, the Overland Whippet, has been inspected by 14,000,000 people in the three weeks since its introduction to the public in every part of the United States.

"The time has come when European and American engineers will cooperate and exchange ideas on the betterment of motor cars. Hitherto, some of us in America have been rather concentrating on production of standard models than keeping abreast of engineering development in other parts of the world. We have much to learn from European engineers; we are learning it rapidly. The result is going to be an entirely new type of American car emanating from several of our biggest factories and destined for world's use—not by thousands, but by millions."

Dublin.—(AP)—Dublin has had four women barristers who plead in court in the same kind of wigs and gowns as the men. Belfast has now a bar separate from Dublin and calls its own barristers. Women are admitted as in Dublin, and the latest is Miss Mary Ann Moclair, who comes from Cashel.

'The President' Studebakers Custom Sedan

The beauty of the custom-designed sedans announced by the Studebaker Corporation of America as additions to its line is strikingly exemplified in these new models. Flowing lines and the graceful contour of body, swung low on the chassis, impart a suggestion of fleetness matching the spirit of Atalanta, whose silvered figure adorns the radiator.

The entire atmosphere is one of smartness and the two-tone body coloring with black moulding and delicate apple green striping contributes appreciably to that motif.

The interior provides all the custom luxuries which the first glance at the car suggests. Seats are wide and deep with form-fitting upholstery of fine chase mohair with broadlace trim. Appointments include Butler-finished hardware, dome light, toggle grips, and silken draw curtains at the wide rear windows.

These new models are on display in the showrooms of the Yarbrough Motor company, local distributors, where they will remain all of the coming week.

New Studebaker Closed Car

Distinctive Color Schemes and Artistic Upholstery

Designed for Luxurious Ease

The "President" is the name of a Studebaker Big Six custom sedan for seven passengers, one of the line of custom designed motor cars recently announced, and it is interesting to note how truly the character of the car proves worthy of its name.

Designed to do justice to the men identified with successful business achievement and symbolize the leadership of its owners, the President is a study in reserved dignity.

The full-vision steel body is finished in lustrous black with a belt of thistle green, pin striped in Siskiyou yellow. Disc wheels are banded in harmony. The interior is replete with custom luxury, upholstered in deep gray broadcloth and broadlace trim. A color scheme of croatan green with black belt and pin striping in ivory and upholstery in mohair is optional. Butler finish hardware, silk curtains, toggle grips and opal iridescent corner and dome lights, the latter lighting when the rear door is opened, complete the effect of custom refinement.

Both front and rear seats are deep and wide and form-fashioned to assure maximum riding ease. Even the auxiliary seats for the sixth and seventh passengers are designed and dimensioned to give full comfort.

On the instrument board, which is finished in a duotone lacquer, the instruments, speedometer, ammeter, gasoline gauge, engine heat indicator, oil pressure gauge and clock, are artistically grouped under glass and illuminated by indirect lighting. Ventilation, without draft, is obtained by an exclusively designed windshield, controlled by turning a convenient handle on the dash. The double-beam headlights are operated by a lever on the steering column.

Custom design has given the car low-swung, graceful lines, and the rich coloring of the lacquer finish is given a dash of brightness by the nickeled radiator surmounted by the silvered figure of Atalanta racing the wind, and nickeled acorn headlights. Four-wheel brakes, balloon tires and Watson stabilators insure comfort and safety on every type of road.

CADILLAC PROMOTES WILLIAM W. LEWIS

William W. Lewis, advertising manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company, has been promoted to the newly created position of assistant general sales manager and director of advertising, according to an announcement just authorized by H. M. Stephens, Cadillac general sales manager. In his new position Mr. Lewis will assist Mr. Stephens in the conduct of all activities in the sales division of the company's organization, which includes the sales, advertising, parts and technical departments. The new position has been created as a result of the rapid increase in Cadillac sales during the past 12 months, requiring an enlarged sales organization.

The newly-appointed sales executive joined the Cadillac organization as district sales manager in August, 1922, and advanced to advertising manager in November of the following year. In his former automobile connection, with the Peerless Motor Car company, he spent six years as district manager, studying conditions and developing markets in each of the company's districts throughout the United States and Canada. He was then advanced to the assistant general sales managership, with which he combined advisory duties on the company's advertising campaigns.

Prior to entering the automobile field, Mr. Lewis for three years was engaged in the business of interior decorating in Chicago and Cleveland. For two years he was with the Cleveland branch of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company, and just prior to becoming an automobile district manager, he traveled for two years as representative of a middle west manufacturer.

GRAHAM BROTHERS' BUSINESS DOUBLES

Graham Brothers in their four plants in United States and Canada have built 19,666 trucks and motor coaches during the first half of 1926, or nearly double their record of 10,447 units for the first six months of last year.

Production of 11,645 units the second quarter this year compared with 8,021 the first quarter this year establishes a gain of 45.2 per cent. Compared with the second quarter last year, when 5,671 trucks were built, the gain for the second quarter this year is 105.3 per cent.

"Graham Brothers, the truck division of Dodge Brothers, Inc., in the short period of five years have risen to first rank in the industry in manufacturer of 1 1-2-ton trucks and second in the 1 and 1 1-2-ton field combined," said F. E. Maffett, of the F. E. Maffett, Inc.

"Comparison of Graham Brothers growth with that of the industry shows clearly the profound respect with which the public regards these sturdy trucks. Total production of American trucks of all makes in 1921, when Graham Brothers entered the field, was 54.2 per cent less than in 1920. In 1922 it was 21.5 per cent less than in 1920. In 1923 the industry ran 21.9 per cent ahead of its 1920 figures. In 1924 it was 16.2 per cent ahead of 1920. The 1925 production was 55.5 per cent ahead of 1920 or 33 per cent ahead of 1924. The average annual increase in Graham Brothers sales has been over 100 per cent. Their 1922 sales exceeded their 1921 by 213 per cent; 1923 exceeded 1922 by 105 per cent; 1924 exceeded 1923 by 54 per cent; 1925 sales exceeded 1924 by 123 per cent. Now sales this year are nearly double those of last.

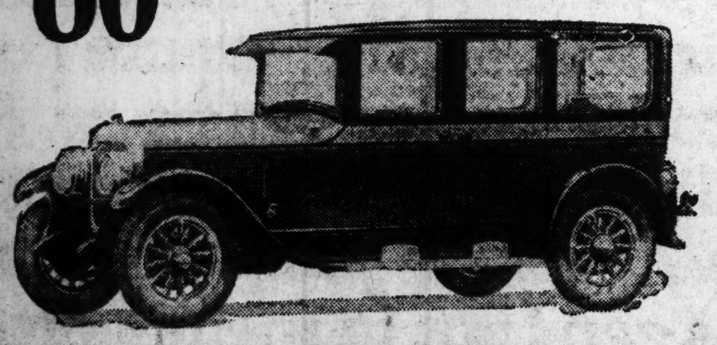

"Figures released by the United States department of commerce, the latest available, show a production in the United States and Canada of 226,997 trucks during the first five months this year, a gain of 25,434 or 12.6 per cent over the output during the first five months last year. This percentage should be little changed by the addition of the figures for June. Against the industry's gain of 12.6 per cent over last year Grahain Brothers' gain of 105.3 per cent for the second quarter this year compared with the second quarter last year stands out prominently."

This New Engineering Idea

has revolutionized America's performance standards

THE day of the slow, cumbersome, bulky automobile has gone. A safer . . . more active . . . more powerful type of car has come to take its place.

The old school of engineering practice is rapidly passing out of existence. A new regime of scientific thought has started in America.

The change began 18 months ago.

When the Overland Six was first introduced it marked a revolutionary departure from all former standards of design.

This new car embodies the most advanced . . . the most efficient engineering . . . from both sides of the world.

It is a complete new car . . . brilliantly engineered as a unit. Not a modern body on a chassis that is 5 or 10 years old.

It is a car built to meet present-day performance standards.

You can drive it at an average road speed of 40 to 55 miles an hour without excessive strain on the engine.

Its "high-torque" power plant has ample power to master the steepest hills. Gear shifting has been reduced to a minimum.

It has a low gravity center. An outstanding engineering feature due to these modern principles of design. This means greater safety at all speeds. It means protection against sidesway and skidding.

And it means comfort such as you've never known before.

Buy a modern car if you want flashing, brilliant performance. Be sure you have these modern principles of design if you seek the utmost resale value.

Don't buy blindfolded. See the Overland Six and find out how modern engineering science has contributed to the safety, security and comfort of motoring.

NOTE: 4-wheel brakes are furnished at slight extra cost.

14,580,000 People welcome Whippet with greatest ovation ever given new automobile

In 3 dramatic weeks, this revolutionary European-type, high-speed light car has become the most talked about automobile in America. Millions welcomed it. Thousands bought it.

ON Saturday, June 26th, America witnessed the greatest ovation ever given any new automobile.

Here are the high spots . . . facts and figures of vital interest to everyone considering the purchase of a car this year.

In New York City, 57,452 people in two days thronged the streets and showrooms to see this amazing new-type car.

In Wayne County, Detroit, 213,000 people saw the Whippet in its first 3 days.

In Chicago, 62,176 in four days. In Milwaukee, 27,122. In Boston, 30,000. In Elmira, 15,000. From all over America come reports of overwhelming interest.

In many showrooms people were turned away at midnight. Thousands of orders were placed without even a demonstration.

The whole country was electrified by this new-type car that offered such amazing economy . . . such revolutionary performance.

Dramatically . . . the Whippet has become the topic of conversation everywhere. Overnight it took the spotlight of success.

Warning to light car buyers

Spurred on by this great success of the Whippet, other manufacturers will doubtless attempt to come out with Whippet-type cars.

But remember the facts we told you in our first announcement.

It took Overland engineers, in Europe and America, three years to design and build the Overland Whippet.

A big car with little wheels is still a big car. It lacks those things which make the Whippet the most economical of all cars to own . . . the most thrilling of all light cars to drive.

It will take other manufacturers a year or more to create such a car.

So do not expect Whippet advantages in any other light car. Today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

The Overland Whippet is different from anything you have ever known before. A car that challenges all former engineering practice. It casts aside every old tradition. And marks the most important light car engineering improvement in America during the last 16 years.

Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the Whippet's practical advantages before it was released for production

This new car has a low, European-type body. With height and length in true symmetrical proportion.

It is 5 feet 8 inches high . . . not as tall as the average man. Yet it provides more room and comfort than you've ever found in any automobile of this class before.

It has a high-torque, 31-horsepower motor of small bore and long stroke—the same engineering principle used in the fastest racing cars of America and Europe.

4-wheel brakes are an integral part of this new car's chassis design . . . a necessity which light car owners have not heretofore enjoyed. Measured tests show that it will stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Its center of gravity is extremely low, with ample road clearance . . . thus giving a sense of security you have never found in any light car before.

Two engineering ideals combined

The Overland Whippet represents a combination of the most advanced European and American engineering thought.

It is a complete new car . . . designed and built as a unit . . . not an old-fashioned reconstructed chassis.

Here's a car that will do 55 miles an hour in the hands of the average owner . . . with all the reserve power that this implies.

You can drive this car as fast as you like with the utmost ease of control . . . for no light car ever hugged the road like this before.

In traffic it gets away with lightning pickup . . . stop-watch tests show that it accelerates up to 40 miles an hour—18% faster than other light 4-cylinder cars. It runs like a "six" and pulls like a tractor.

The Overland Whippet will climb the gruelling grades of the Cove Mountains of Pennsylvania, in high.

In all your life you've never driven any car like this before. Its wonderful activity . . . its flashing bursts of speed . . . and quick acceleration . . . have never been available in any car of this type.

Smart European-type body design

The distinctive body lines of the Overland Whippet frankly resemble the smartest automobiles of America and Continental Europe. Stand in front of this car and you can imagine yourself on the Boulevards of France.

The radiator is typically foreign . . . every line, curve and contour of the body is the result of painstaking craftsmanship and study.

Low-swung . . . rakish . . . graceful as a Whippet . . . that's the only way to describe it.

Complete symmetry of design has been achieved with compact external dimensions.

Compared with contemporary, big, bulky cars the Overland Whippet appears smarter and much more graceful. That's because height and length are in true artistic proportion. In the Overland Whippet you have the feeling of riding closer to the ground . . . with the resultant sense of solidity and absence of that sidesway so noticeable in the conventional type of car. That high-up-in-the-air feeling is gone . . . here is a new kind of riding comfort. Step in to this car and you will be surprised to find so much spacious room.

Due to its unique body and dash construction there is actually more head room and leg room than in any other car of this price class.

All seats are placed in a naturally restful position so that you have complete relaxation as you ride. No more sitting bolt-upright . . . you ride in this car, not on it.

30 miles on the gallon of gasoline

Here at last is an automobile that will run 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline . . . well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil . . . with extraordinary mileage on tires . . . and the smallest tax rating of any car in America today.

Tests so far indicate that an Overland Whippet will save you $75 to $150 a year on gas, oil, tires and upkeep

Imagine if you can what this saving will mean to the average owner in a single year. It cuts present operating costs just about in half. Doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

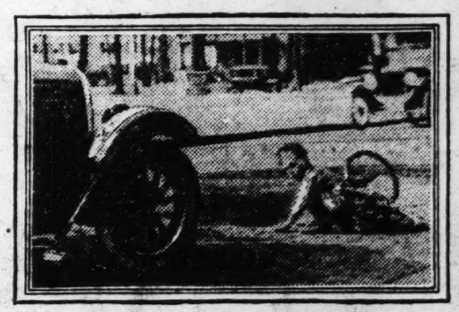

Exhaustive tests so far indicate that the average year's operating cost of the Overland Whippet should save you from $75 to $150 in gas, oil, tires and mechanical upkeep.

Money that goes back into your pocket. Money you must add to the list price of any less economical car you consider.

Based on these figures, it is easy to see how standards of automobile value must change in the next 30 days.

With this new factor of economical operation, list prices do not mean the same today.

Resale values of less modern and less efficient cars are bound to suffer.

11-inch 4-wheel brakes enable this car to stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles per hour

New standards of mechanical design

The new principles . . . the new ideas . . . the new standards of design in the Overland Whippet are bound to change your whole conception of light car mechanical features.

Its high-torque motor of 3¼-inch bore by 4¾-inch stroke, is by far the most efficient light car engine made in America . . .

It actually develops more horsepower per cubic inch of piston displacement and pound of car weight than any other light 4-cylinder engine.

It has an 80-lb. torque . . . this means greater pulling power . . . the ability to master hills without shifting gears.

Because of this greater efficiency, the motor of the Overland Whippet costs more to build yet less to maintain than any other light car engine made today.

The Overland Whippet is the only light car that has the modern force-feed oiling system throughout the engine, instead of the old-fashioned splash.

It is the only 4-cylinder light car that combines genuine Chrome silicon steel valves with silent chain front-end drive and pump water circulation.

New chassis features

Horn, spark and throttle control are on the steering wheel as is standard practice on the highest price cars.

The position of the steering wheel is adjustable to fit the requirements of the individual driver.

The worm and gear irreversible steering mechanism is typical of this car's quality and is especially designed for full balloon tires and 4-wheel brakes.

Timken bearings are used throughout the front and rear axles.

The rear axle housing is banjo-type pressed steel.

All 4-wheel brakes are 11 inches in diameter, of the mechanical internal type. They provide 192 square inches of braking surface—far more per pound of car weight than any other American light car built today. Each is completely encased, thus not susceptible to weather conditions.

Brake and clutch pedal pressure has been developed so that a child could drive this car with ease and safety. Gear shift and emergency brake are right at your finger tips. Remarkable ease of gear shifting has been perfected in this new-type car. Underslung semi-elliptic Vanadium steel springs add immeasurably to its riding and driving ease.

Designed and built without restrictions

The engineers who designed this car . . . and the men who built it . . . have worked without restrictions.

Nothing has been spared that would improve its engineering or its quality.

The Overland Whippet is not a 1 or 2 year car.

Instead, it has been honestly built to give years and years of satisfactory service . . . to deliver thrilling and trouble-free performance for thousands and thousands of miles.

To millions of American women this car will bring an entirely new pride of ownership—a new delight in its comfort and refinements.

The car is beautifully finished with durable triple-coated lacquer that will retain its lustrous beauty for years and years.

The Overland Whippet is a quality car through and through. Your first inspection will tell you that.

You can compare the Overland Whippet with all other American light cars on the basis of price alone. But from the standpoint of engineering, performance, comfort and quality, it has established an entirely new criterion by which all other light cars must be judged.

The Overland Whippet is furnished in three body styles . . . Sedan, Touring and Coupe.

Come, see this car. Take this advertisement with you and check the things we say here against what you find. We have purposely understated every fact. We have told you the story of the Overland Whippet without exaggeration.

You have never seen a car like this before.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet, it is not sound judgment today to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

A new trend of automobile design is dawning in America. Other light cars of similar design will follow this one.

But today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

In fairness to yourself, see this car.

The Overland Whippet is now being displayed by dealers in this territory.

NEW OAKLANDS BEING DISPLAYED

The newest engineering feature and what now is believed to be the most satisfactory road illumination for night driving, is the depressible beam head-lamps of the greater Oakland six, operated by a foot control on the floor board which raises or lowers the light beams.

This new light not only affords oncoming motorists the courtesy of no glare or blinding lights, but also provides the driver the greatest convenience because it can be operated without shifting one's position or taking the hands from the wheel.

This latest contribution to convenience, courtesy and safety is accomplished by the use of a special type lens and a special type reflector used in combination with a double filament lamp.

The special lens used provides a wide diffusion of beams for illuminating the sides of the road, turns, ditches and sign posts, while the special reflector provides for the raising or lowering of the main driving beam. The lamps, bulbs and other parts are stationary. The change in the raising or lowering of the beams is made entirely by shifting the current from one filament to the other in the bulb. This is operated from a conveniently placed foot button on the toe-board near the clutch pedal. The beams of light are controlled by simply pressing the foot button which operates a rotary switch. Thus the driver may depress the beams and by again pressing the control raise the beams to a driving position.

For city driving or for long cross country touring, the new control feature gives the driver road illumination a great distance in front of the car as well as a spread to illuminate the sides of the road.

As there is no change in the strength of the main driving beams, there is the same full flood of light that makes driving in traffic or when other cars are met much safer and affords greater mental comfort to the driver.

For added convenience a new lamp door of the hook-on type is used, affording easy access to the bulb, lens and reflector for cleaning or replacing.

The new Oakland lights meet the regular specifications of all states with regard to maximum and minimum candle power at various angles, but the feature which is winning the heartiest praise from owners is the foot control which is the first of its kind introduced to the general public. In fact, this feature is attracting almost as much attention and interest as the Oakland rubber-silenced chassis.

FIRESTONE PREDICTS NEW RUBBER MOVE

BY HARVEY S. FIRESTONE.

On August 1 the British government will unquestionably adopt a new and more drastic restriction of the production and exportation of rubber, and I feel I should bring to the attention of the American car owner the full import of what this means.

The minimum price of rubber under the new restriction is to be set at 42 cents per pound. The Stevenson restriction act as originally adopted November 1, 1922, fixed the minimum price at 25 cents per pound. One of the arguments for the adoption of this act by the promoters of the scheme was to stabilize the price of rubber between 25 and 30 cents per pound, but instead of fulfilling this function, it not only increased the price beyond all reasonable limits but also through resulting wide fluctuations made a very unstable, speculative and hazardous condition for the rubber manufacturers.

Rubber was selling around 14 cents per pound when the Stevenson restriction act became effective. The act allowed 60 per cent of normal production to be exported and called for quarterly revisions according to the price of rubber. That is if the price of rubber fell below an average of 25 cents per pound for any quarter an additional 5 per cent restriction would be placed, and if the price of rubber for any quarter averaged above 30 cents an additional 5 per cent would be released. In this way, it was claimed, the price of rubber would be stabilized between 25 and 30 cents per pound.

Immediately upon the adoption of the restriction act the price of rubber advanced. The first quarter's average was above 25 cents per pound and sold as high as 38 cents per pound with practically the same available rubber stock in the world as existed in the previous quarter when rubber was 14 cents per pound. It was not until the second quarter of 1924 that the average price of rubber fell below 25 cents, at which time the additional 5 per cent was restricted. Next quarter rubber was still below 25 cents and a further 5 per cent was restricted, thus allowing only 50 per cent of normal production to be shipped from the British colonies.

These additional restrictions advanced the price; in the last quarter of 1924 the price of rubber averaged above 30 cents per pound and 5 per cent was released. The price continued above 30 cents—in fact sold as high as $1.23 per pound in 1925—and according to the provision of the act, 100 per cent of standard production was released on February 1, 1926. These additional releases of rubber brought the price of rubber down from over $1 per pound during the last quarter of 1925 to an average of 60 cents per pound in April, 1926.

On April 26 of this year the British colonial office announced that if the price of rubber for the next quarter beginning May 1, did not remain above 42 cents per pound for the quarter, it would place a new restriction on rubber allowing only 80 per cent of normal production to be exported in the following quarter, starting August 1, 1926. Rubber continued to decline rapidly until it reached 42 cents, and now the average price for the quarter is around 42 cents. As there are over 26,000 tons of rubber in London under the control of powerful interests whose purposes are best served by having this new restriction, and as the act calls for the price to be fixed for each day by the last sale at 3 o'clock, it should be very plain to Americans that this quarter's average is more likely to be a little under 42 cents than a little over, and that on August 1, we will again have British rubber production and exportation restricted to only 80 per cent of normal production.

This being so, I want to call particular attention to the fact that the minimum price of rubber fixed by the new restriction is 42 cents instead of a minimum price of 25 cents fixed in the Stevenson rubber restriction act of November 1, 1922, or 17 cents a pound higher. One cent a pound advance on rubber imported into the United States in one year means over $8,000,000. It is very easy to figure that American automobilists have an additional minimum fixed charge on their transportation of $136,000,000 per year.

It is unthinkable that Americans will sit idly by and allow a commodity so vital to our welfare, transportation and commerce, to be held in the tight grip of a foreign monopoly that tells us how much rubber we may receive and how much we are to pay for it. In January, 1923—two months after the Stevenson rubber restriction act was announced—I presented figures and statements to officials in Washington showing them the seriousness of the situation and succeeded in April of the same year in having congress appropriate $500,000 to investigate new sources of rubber supply. This investigation and personal investigations that I have made, show there are many tropical countries where rubber can be grown profitably.

On account of the enormous capital required for the growing of rubber, and as investments are without return for several years, Americans are not keen to make these investments unless they are in countries under the control of or protected by our own government, no matter how large the returns on the investments may be. The Philippine islands hold out great opportunities for America and also for the Philippines islands itself if proper legislation is enacted to encourage capital to invest there in rubber growing on a substantial scale. Soil and climatic conditions are ideal, and rubber in a small way is being grown on the islands of Mindanao and Basilan. These islands could be made the richest and most prosperous country in the Far East. It is estimated that Great Britain now has over $600,000,000 invested in the growing of rubber which gives big returns. There can be no question that today its rubber growing industry is one of the most valuable possessions the British Empire has. This fact is borne out by the significant statement of Winston Churchill in referring to the Stevenson restriction legislation that "one of the principal means of paying the debt to America is in the provision of rubber."

The following statistics show the number of pounds and invoice value of rubber received in the United States from 1920 to June 1, 1926:

1920	$242,795,773	42.85	48.85	55.00	15.50
1921	73,752,067	17.76	21.76	21.00	12.00
1922	101,843,188	15.10	19.10	29.00	12.00
1923	185,057,739	26.72	30.72	38.00	25.00
1924	174,361,427	23.82	27.82	40.00	17.50
1925	429,705,014	48.36	53.36	123.00	34.00
1926 (5 months.)	287,489,720	67.32	73.72	89.00	44.00

A—All grades, value.
B—Import value per pound, all grades.
C—Estimated value per pound, standard ribbed smoked sheets.
D—New York market price per pound, standard ribbed smoked sheets, high.
E—Low.

These importation figures include wild and plantation rubber of all grades. You will note that the first year after restriction we only received 8,000 tons additional rubber and America's rubber bill was $84,000,000 more in 1923 than in 1922, and by 1925 our rubber bill had increased $328,000,000, with only 95,000 additional tons.

Hon. Fort E. Land, state superintendent of schools, left Atlanta Saturday for Savannah, where he is to address the Rural Letter Carriers' association of Georgia at their annual meeting which convenes Monday. His subject will be "Rural Free Delivery and Education." Mr. Land is a candidate to succeed himself as state superintendent of schools, subject to the democratic primary September 8.

AUTO MANUFACTURERS CATER TO WOMEN

Among the many things for which man can give thanks to the fair sex are the many notable improvements in recent years on what was originally man's own plaything—the motor car. It is not because she took an active part in devising the improved car that gratitude is due her, but the equally important fact that she demonstrated the need and thereby mothered the inventions which brought the better car we have today.

"When formerly masculine drivers were in the majority the car maker did not need to extend himself to the limit to eliminate the labor of gear shifting, difficult steering and the like, for the ordinary male had the strength necessary to cope with any inconveniences," says T. E. Cauthorn, of the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, Hupmobile dealers. "If the engine gave satisfaction and service the man was content, so engineers directed their attention to the perfection of that mechanism.

"Then friend wife graduated from a rear seat driver and in a short time mastered the operator's task. But it was not as simple as it appeared—she soon found that she could not handle the car, talk to her passengers, powder her nose, and obey all traffic laws at the same time, while the car still retained its originality as a man's vehicle.

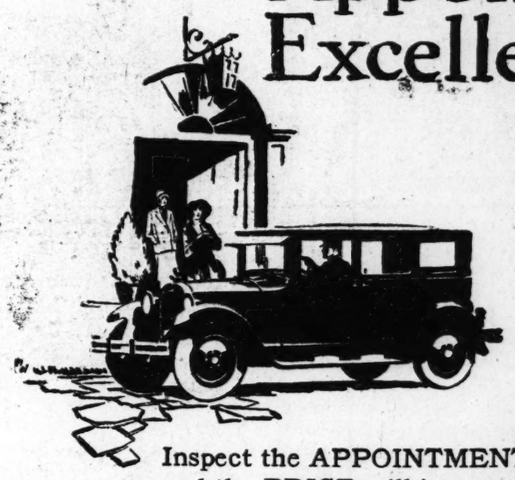

"Maximum comfort and safety for milady were not to be had unless the manufacturer changed some of the fundamental features. And so, answering the feminine call, man's ingenuity quickly provided the improvements to keep the dainty feminine hand from extra exertion so that her days of driving would be a new recreation and one that she would enjoy. The Hupmobile Eight was one of the first cars to include newer features to facilitate operation of the car for the feminine driver. The progress accompanying the woman's active entry into motordom is not solely limited to the details which lead to a better appearing car. It was, of course, expected that better upholstery and interior fittings with more graceful lines would be first to gain attention, but their demands were far more reaching than that—and meant changing the fundamentals.

"At first improvement was directed toward an easier gear shift," Mr. Cauthorn continued. "As an instance, take the new Hupmobile Eight. The clutch and transmission controls may be operated with the slightest effort. A light pedal pressure disengages the clutch and the gears slide into mesh softly and quietly and without any knowledge on the part of the driver as to what mechanical action is taking place. And the necessity of frequent change of gears is removed since the motor is more powerful and accelerates easily from low speeds.

"These changes were made mainly to conform to the desire of this new class of drivers. To increase the range of vision, windshield pillars have been reduced in size and vision is improved 40 per cent over less modern construction. Other safety features are the four-wheel brakes, by which the car is kept under positive control at all times and the danger of skidding likewise reduced to a minimum; the new cam and lever steering gear which makes it easy for women to steer a car equipped with balloon tires; the more convenient arrangement of levers and switch controls. All these have followed woman's desire to drive as men do."

NEW ESSEX MODELS RADICALLY IMPROVED

A new all-steel body of radically improved design is the feature of the Essex coach, announced and placed on display today by J. W. Goldsmith, of the Goldsmith-Becker Co., Hudson-Essex distributors and associate dealers. The real story of this new car is said to be the story of a $10,000,000 plant which the Hudson Motor Car Co. erected especially for the building of these bodies. High spots of this new plant are:

1. In it body building has become for the first time in the industry primarily a steel-stamping process.
2. For the first time, also, bodies are manufactured on the 100 per cent progressive-assembly system which has previously effected such remarkable savings in motors, chassis and other automobile units.
3. The plant is said by Hudson officials to be the largest single body-building unit in the world.
4. It has the largest battery of steel-stamping presses and the largest enamel-baking ovens in the world by far.

"The Hudson organization a year ago completed the design of this new body and laid out a program for a building to construct it," said Mr. Goldsmith. In this general expansion program $10,000,000 has been invested in the body plant, and $5,000,000 additional in other manufacturing departments to bring them up to the capacity which it is expected this new car will call for. On the very day determined on a year ago, the plant was complete and a schedule of 150 new all-steel bodies was put through as against a task of 100 bodies which had been originally laid out.

"While the new bodies are radically different in construction from anything known up to the present, they retain generally the characteristic Essex lines; however, the rear quarters have been somewhat curved and the whole body is two inches lower. The finish is a lustrous black enamel, baked on in the 600-foot ovens at high temperatures which assure a long life and a glossy appearance for the life of the car. A bit of color is added by a nickled radiator and by a double striping around the belt line.

"Possibly the most striking feature of the new body is its unusual rigidity of construction. By use of steel sills all lines of weakness between the chassis and the body has been eliminated; in fact the body and chassis are really one. The steel sill itself is 60 per cent stronger than the wooden member it displaced.

"Tested over the roughest stretches of road to be found around Detroit, the body has been found to be absolutely free from squeaks and rattles. The car was repeatedly run up on curbs at various heights, the doors tried and found to open and close freely. A 200-pound man was placed on each door as a final test of the stability of the body and the car was driven over several hundred yards of rough road. The doors did not sag in the least, fitting just as perfectly after this rigid test as before. This remarkable rigidity in the body is gained by the scientific sectioning of the pressed steel from which the body is made. All of the pressed steel parts are formed with not only ease of assembly in view, but also from the standpoint of rigidity.

"The plant has a normal capacity of 1,500 bodies per nine-hour day. In true progressive fashion the raw material enters on the lowest floor where the presses are located and from that point moving along until the bodies leave the final assembly complete. All main and sub-assembly work is done on moving conveyors which is the first time this has been completely accomplished in an automobile body-building plant.

"As an instance of quality the steel sheets used in the bodies, doors and fenders are of the same quality and same weight as is used in $4,000 sedans; it is described by Hudson officials as the best obtainable. One economy of this is that the sheets stand up to the action of the presses with practically no breakage. Scraps of steel left over from the stamping of large parts are used in making smaller units, so that final waste is less than 1 per cent—which is sold as scrap metal.

"Unlike practice in previous steel bodies, the parts are not welded together, but are bolted and riveted by an entirely new and exclusive process. The rigidity gained from this method has been proved by the most severe road tests in which there has been no tendency whatsoever for the bodies to loosen up. The elimination of spot welding in all points of strain is said to eliminate the possibility of loose joints.

"The whole interior of the car is exceptionally neat and trim—the dash well arranged and pleasing. The door handle and lock are combined in one unit. The steering wheel is solid walnut mounted on a cast aluminum spider. The windshield wiper switch is on the dash and forms part of an attractive instrument board arrangement.

"These bodies are mounted on the standard Essex chassis, with no mechanical changes whatever. Standard equipment includes shutters and moto-meter, stoplight, electric windshield wiper, rear vision mirror and tire carrier. The price announced is $795 f. o. b. Detroit."

Studebaker's Branch Manager Here

E. C. SEATON.

Mr. Seaton, who recently took over the reigns as executive head for Studebaker's Atlanta branch, is an automobile man of wide experience, having been a special representative for Studebaker in the western and eastern divisions for the past three years. Prior to his joining the Studebaker forces he represented the Lincoln and Premier companies as dealer in Battle Creek, Mich. His home is in Chicago, where he was prominently identified with selling transportation which dates back to the days when the bicycle was our means of transportation. He has recently finished a special branch manager's training course at the Studebaker plant in South Bend and comes to this territory well equipped for this important appointment and his selection by Studebaker is an asset to Atlanta's famous automobile row.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD FRANKLIN RUNS 100 MILES IN LOW GEAR

In connection with the Franklin national low gear demonstration, in which 185 latest model Franklins in every part of the country were each driven 100 miles in low gear without a motor stop, E. T. Byram, Franklin dealer at Galesburg, Ill., staged an unusually interesting event by entering an 11-year-old Franklin alongside the latest model. The motors in both cars performed perfectly during the long gruelling run in low gear, the time amounting to seven hours and 26 minutes. At the conclusion of the low gear run both cars came romping home on high gear at better than 50 miles per hour.

STUDEBAKER NOW HAS LINE CUSTOM SEDANS

Three custom-designed sedans, incorporating the beauty and refinements of exclusive custom-made cars, but at "family-car" prices, were announced today by the Studebaker Corporation of America through local Studebaker dealers. These cars are an addition to the present line of Studebaker models, and include a Standard Six custom sedan, a Big Six custom brougham and the President, an ultra-distinctive Big Six custom sedan embodying the most luxurious refinements of custom coachwork.

Outstanding features of the Studebaker custom sedans are low-swung bodies with fleet, flowing lines; rich duotone lacquer color schemes which are carried through to complete harmony in both interior and exterior treatment; Butler-finish hardware, mohair or broadcloth interiors with broad-lace trim. Disc wheels lacquered to match the body tone and four-wheel brakes are standard equipment.

"The introduction of Studebaker custom sedans marks a significant new development in American motor car manufacture," E. C. Seaton, of the local Studebaker organization, said in outlining the policy behind the announcement. "By creating a meeting ground for the custom designs of America's foremost coach builders and the one-profit facilities of the Studebaker factories, it is now possible to produce a line of motor cars which are custom designed in every detail, but still are within the reach of the great group of buyers of moderately-priced cars. The day of exorbitant prices for fine cars is past.

"Custom coachwork on the Studebaker chassis is by no means an innovation. For years many of America's most discriminating motorists have combined Studebaker stamina and performance with the bodies especially designed and built for them. In recognition of this growing trend, Studebaker established a salon in the roseroom of the Plaza hotel, New York city, where custom body builders might exhibit special creations on the Studebaker chassis. The decision to unite the advantages of custom design with the benefits of one-profit manufacture was largely a result of the marked interest shown in the roseroom exhibit. By virtue of this union it is now possible to produce cars in which there is no compromise with custom quality, but which are of moderate cost."

No changes in either the Standard or Big Six engines have been made in the custom designed line, it was stated. The Big Six motor which powers the custom brougham and the President is equaled in rated power by only seven American cars, according to the ratings of the Society of Automotive Engineers. It is the same engine which propelled Ab Jenkins' Studebaker "Sheriff" on its recent record-smashing dash from New York to San Francisco. And, except for refinements, it is the same motor as those which have powered hundreds of Big Sixes to membership in the Studebaker "100,000-Mile Club."

The Standard Six motor is likewise distinguished for abundant power. It is the most powerful engine in any car of its size and weight, according to the Society of Automotive Engineers' ratings.

GRIFFIN FACTORIES RUNNING FULL TIME

Griffin, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—Running on full time and giving employment to some 3,500 employees, the eight cotton mills of Griffin, the three hosiery and knitting mills, two buggy factories and a large planing mill are spending weekly approximately $55,000 in payrolls in Griffin, it has been learned here. Other industries whose exact figures have not been obtained yet will swell the weekly payrolls to $100,000 or more, it was said.

The cotton mills here have resumed full-time operations this week after having been closed down last week to give the operatives a short vacation. Th money spent in payrolls here goes directly into the channels of trade and is said to be a great stimulus to business.

Mill Conditions Better.

Mill conditions are reporting as improving, though not yet fully normal. Several of the mills are now getting new orders and the outlook is more promising than in some time past, it has been announced by officials of the several mills.

The weekly payrolls of the mills here follows: Griffin Manufacturing company, Griffin's oldest cotton mill, 750 operatives, $12,500; Rushton Cotton mills, 175 employees, $2,500; Georgia Cotton mills, 1,700 employees, $23,000; Highland mills, 165 operatives, $2,800; Griffin Hosiery mills, 275 employees, $2,700; Griffin Knitting mills, one of Griffin's newest industries, 25 employees, $200; Spalding Hosiery mills, 175 employees, $2,000; Gresham Manufacturing company, 125 operatives, $2,500; Norman Buggy company, 15 operatives, $300; Griffin Buggy company, 15 employees, $350. One of the busiest places in Griffin is the plant here of the Pomona Products company, pioneer pimento industry in the south, which is canning 45,000 cans of peaches a day, and 12,000 cans of beans. The principal business of the company is the packing of pimentoes, but in order to assist the county in disposing of surplus fruits and vegetables it is packing large quantities of peaches, string and butter beans.

The products in most cases come from Spalding county, and nearby county farms, it was said.

Employs Big Force.

The Pomona Products company employs from 150 to 300 operatives, and the payroll of the company for a period of about five months in the year runs from $1,000 to $1,500 a week, sometimes going as high as $2,500, it has been learned here.

After the peach season is over, the company will be ready for the packing of pimentoes, beginning about August 1.

The Pomona Products company, capitalized at $75,000 and operating under a charter, was organized about eight years ago. In 1922, it canned more pimentoes than any other concern of the kind in the world, its officials said. The officers include: D. F. Patterson, president; Walter F. Graefe, vice president, and J. D. Tharpe, secretary.

CHEVROLET SMASHES FASTEST TRAIN TIME

Lowering the fastest train time between the Pacific coast and Omaha by approximately two hours, Mason Jurgensen, age 21, of 141 West Eighty-second street, Los Angeles, drove a Chevrolet roadster 2,020 miles between the two cities in 56 hours 47 minutes. He was officially checked out at Los Angeles and in the Nebraska metropolis by Western Union executives.

This feat establishes an automobile record from the Pacific coast to Omaha.

Jurgensen stopped only to eat, take on fuel and change one tire on the way. He picked up a nail on the New Mexico desert, that being the only mishap experienced on the entire trip. His record time as given above includes all stops en route.

The young pilot was accompanied on his dash two-thirds of the way across the United States by Joe Rolley, of 941 West 41st street, Los Angeles.

On the return journey to the coast Jurgensen added further glamor to his driving achievement by lowering the Omaha-Denver mark from 15 hours 31 minutes to 14 hours flat. Harold Beyers, an Omaha boy, was passenger and relief driver on the way back, Rolley remaining at Omaha.

The youth's demonstration is more than a stunt. It is proof that transcontinental touring has become practical for the average motorist. Roads are good and danger has been eliminated as a factor. The young pilot spoke in high terms of his Chevrolet mount, giving it a clean bill in the matter of speed, power and roadworthiness.

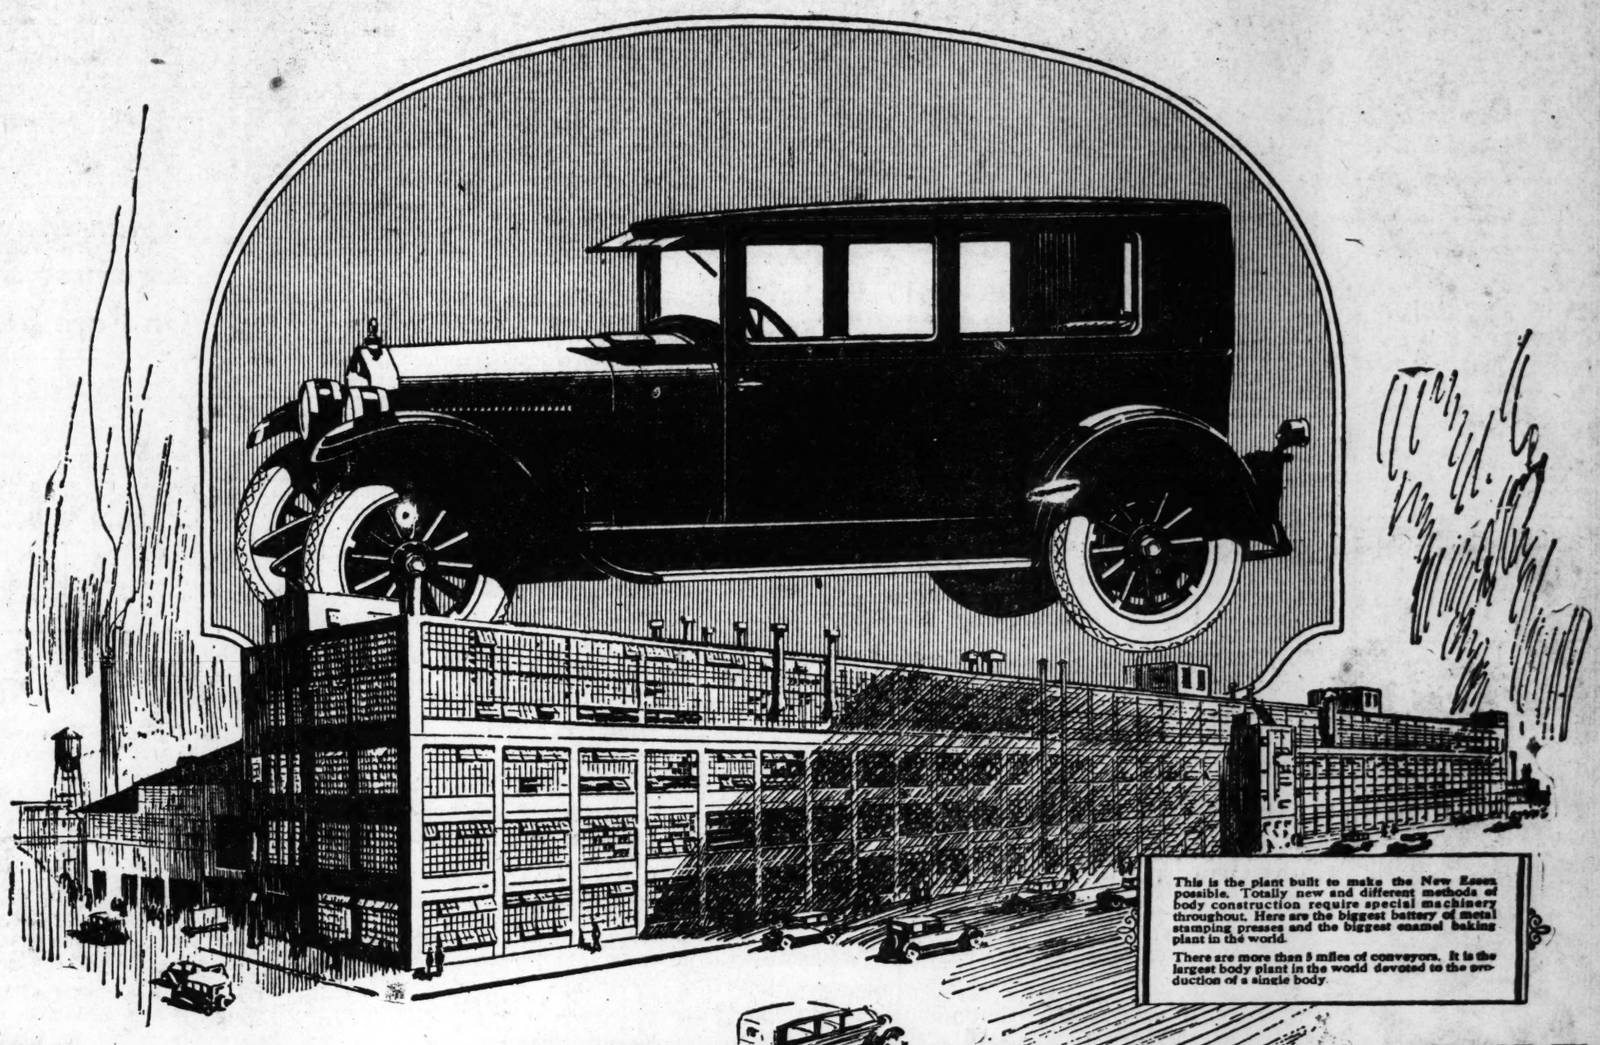

"Transcontinental touring is a mere 'ride around the block' in these days of high-powered light cars and wonderful roads," Jurgensen declared.

George Grantham's hitting for the Pirates was the sensation in the National league last week, the Arizonan added 41 points to his average and temporarily nudging up to second place among the league's leading sluggers.

DOUGLAS COUNTY MAN DROPS DEAD AT HOME

Douglasville, Ga., July 24.—(Special.)—I. A. King, 74, who was born and raised in Douglas county, dropped dead at his home near Douglasville Saturday morning. He was in his usual health until attacked. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Bethel cemetery.

$795

F. O. B. Detroit, Plus War Excise Tax

Standard equipment includes: Automatic Windshield Cleaner, Rear View Mirror, Transmission Lock (built-in), Radiator Shutters, Moto-Meter, Combination Stop and Tail Light.

Many of these advantages you will recognize at a glance. But you will have a higher appreciation of their meaning when you know that a plant of 18 acres which, with equipment, approximated a cost of $10,000,000, was first built and that special machinery had to be designed, to make possible this New Coach now on display.

Again Essex "6" offers in the design and construction of the New Coach as radical an improvement as was the original Coach itself.

It is all steel, bolted and riveted, and so rigid that squeaks, rattles and distortions, are as unlikely as in a steel building. Doors are so hung that a man may hang on an open door while the car is being driven over rough roads, without springing it out of true.

And it is so designed and constructed as to permit the use in a totally new manner of a high baked enamel, most lustrous and lasting finish. This has made possible new combinations in finish that will please your eye.

There has been constant improvement in the chassis from the first Essex shipped. Every week has seen some betterment. But only by the accumulation of the resources, the information, experience, and the skill that have resulted from the purchase of 350,000 Essex "Sixes" in a short period of time, was it possible to erect the plants, to perfect the machinery, to create the designs that have resulted in this car which we ask you to inspect and to drive as the best looking, best value, best Essex ever built.

Dependable

The greatest thing about a Ford is the way it keeps going, even under the worst conditions. The dependability of Champion Spark Plugs—which have been standard Ford equipment for 14 years—is an integral part of Ford dependability.

PEOPLE DEMAND MORE THAN TRANSPORTATION

That there is a distinct trend in motor car buying that promises rather spectacular developments in the industry is the opinion of Walter P. Chrysler, motor car manufacurer.

According to Mr. Chrysler, people demand something more than simply transporattion at a price; they demand in their cars all the excellencies, proportionately, that a higher price commands.

Furthermore, he says, this demand is so insistent and so widespread that they are going to have what they want.

"The purchasing of motor cars has taken a distinct trend recently that is of the greatest importance to the industry," says Mr. Chrysler, in an interview in Detroit.

"People are no longer satisfied merely with transportation at a price. They are insisting on the same things they find in higher priced cars; in due proportions to the investment, of course, and they are going to have these demands satisfied.

"They are most insistent on full-sized bodies which give all the occupants ample room. They insist not only on full-sized bodies, but on ease of riding as well—real comfort. And, of course, with this they want the best of performances with real economy of operation.

"All of these things can be built into a four-cylinder car at a reasonably low price.

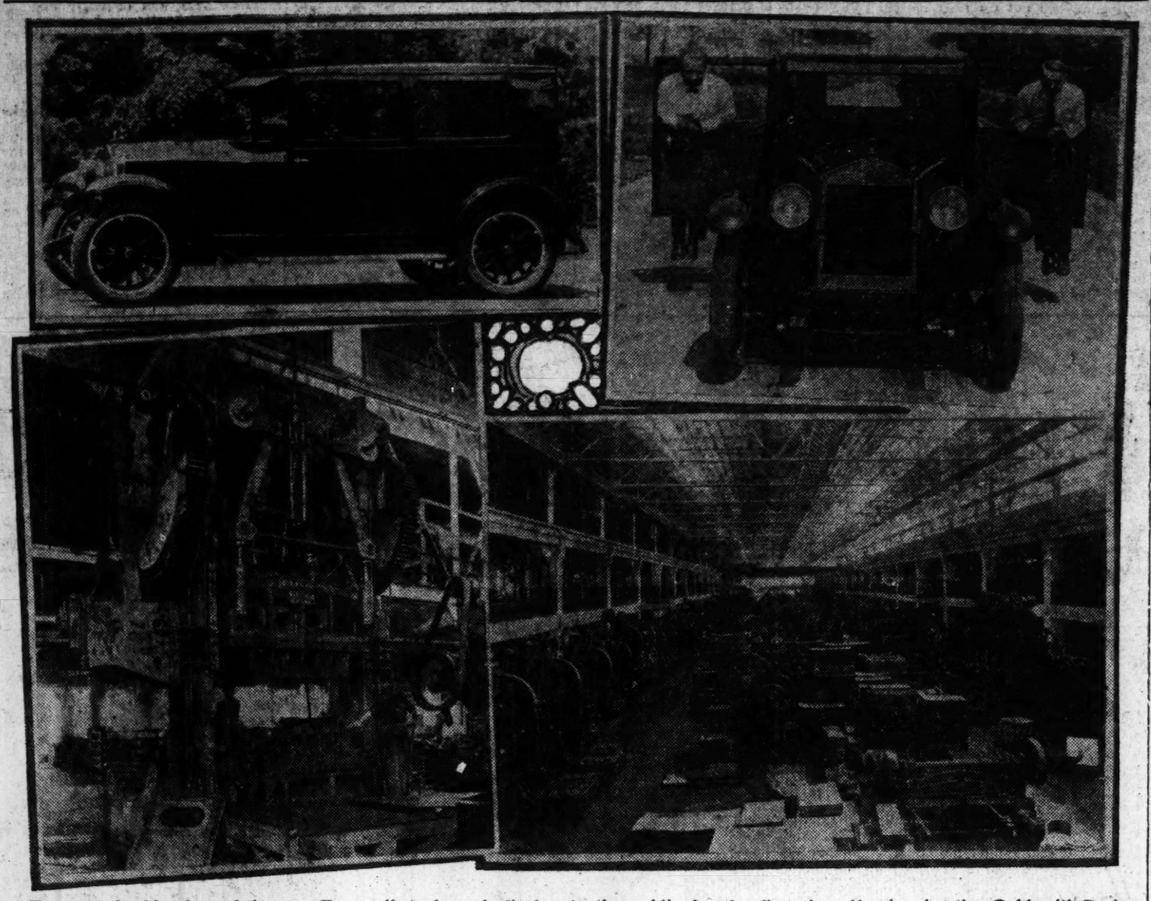

"The industry has developed today until it is entirely possible to give more per dollar than would have been imagined as short a time as two years ago.

"It is to that end that we are shaping our manufacturing plans and we are very confident that the car of this type which we produce will enjoy a conspicuous success from the start."

Mr. Chrysler did not amplify his statement with any details of the new car which he is apparently about to produce.

It is the general opinion in the industry, however, that the new car will embody many of the ideas which have been exploited in other Chrysler models, and which have kept this car continuallly in the foreground among fine cars since the first Chrysler was produced two and a half years ago.

Goldsmith-Becker Displaying Essex All-Steel Coach

Top, left, is side view of the new Essex all-steel coach display to the public for the first time Monday by the Goldsmith-Becker company, 229 Peachtree street. Top, right, shows a real test for strength. Two men are testing the strength of the newly designed doors on an entirely new type hinge. The doors were not even slightly loosened by this test. At the bottom are two views taken in the new Hudson-Essex $10,000,000 plant. Left, is the giant hydraulic press used to form or fashion these doors. Right, general view of the engine department.

NEW BOULEVARD OPENS TO ST. PETERSBURG

St. Petersburg, Fla., July 24.—This city, jointly with Tampa, now claims to have one of the longest boulevards in the world—a continuous stretch of paving known as Gandy Boulevard in honor of the originator and builder of Gandy bridge, longest "over-the-water" automobile structure in the world. The last strip in this long stretch of paving on the Tampa side of the bay has been completed, closing the last gap and giving motorists one of the finest stretches of hardsurfaced roadway to be found within the corporate limits of any city in North America.

This scenic highway starts in the heart of business Tampa near Hillsboro Bay, runs south along the beach drive and then turns westward across Hillsboro peninsula to the Tampa side of Gandy bridge, which is 6 miles long. The motorist enjoys the thrill of passing over the longest auto toll bridge in the world and then plunges into a continuation of Gandy boulevard, which he traverses southward through the business center of St. Petersburg, a distance of seven miles. Passing on for five miles more over a continuation of this same boulevard he reaches Pinellas Point, the most southern tip of Pinellas peninsula.

The entire length of this boulevard is nearly 25 miles, giving the motorist one of the most scenic and interesting trips to be found on the North American continent.

Completion of the new highway was not accompanied by dedicatory ceremonies. An unending line of motor cars furnished the most imposing celebration that could have been staged. The new route shortens the distance between Tampa and St. Petersburg and greatly adds to the comfort of motoring. It will help attract motor tourists from all parts of the United States to see Gandy bridge, the picturesque gulf drive from Gulfport to Tarpon Springs via Clearwater and other points of interest.

42nd Victim Dies in Gang War in Chicago

Chicago, July 24.—(AP)—Sawed-off shotguns roared in the grill room of an outlying saloon late last night and when the smoke had cleared away, Frank Conlon, 25, lay dead—the forty-second victim in Chicago's gangland warfare.

The cause of the shooting, like all others, remains a mystery, and the slayers probably never will be caught. police claim, as gangland prefers to hold its own court and pass its own sentence of death upon violators of its code.

The killing, coming but a day later than that of Philip Piazza, wealthy Chicago Heights cafe owner, may be linked in a new beer and liquor war feud, investigators believe, and may also be related to the present jail scandal, caused when Frank McErlane, liquor baron, was found drunk in jail.

While a crowd filled the saloon and merryment was at is height, a shotgun was pushed through a window and both barrels fired into Conlon's body. Four men and a woman were taken into custody today for questioning.

The police believe that the shots may have been meant for Vincent McErlane, whose brother is a leader of the McErlane-Saltis alcohol syndicate.

One of the theories held by the police is that Conlon was killed in retaliation of the murders of Frank de Laurentis and John Tuccello, bootleggers, killed last fall. It was also said that Conlon was dealing with liquor on a small scale and may have been slain by rivals whose territory he invaded.

PARACHUTE SAVES LIFE OF BALLOONIST

Mt. Sterling, Ky., July 24.—(AP)—A crowd of 4,000 persons at the Montgomery county fair experienced an unexpected thrill today when C. H. Hudgins, of Indiana, fell almost 400 feet during a balloon ascension. Hudgins escaped with a sprained ankle and several bad scratches about his face.

The balloonist fell when his parachute failed to open. The parachute, however, was responsible for saving his life for it caught in a tree on descent, breaking the force of the fall.

Hylan May Run Against Smith On Fare Slogan

New York, July 24.—Former Mayor John F. Hylan, the "stormy petrel" of New York city politics, who was practically ousted from the democratic party last year, is considering running for governor against Al Smith next fall if he can have "a five cent fare" as a slogan.

Hylan admitted today that he would enter the campaign as an independent or a democrat, he didn't care which, so long as the car fares in the city of New York were likely to be raised. He said he believed he could beat Governor Smith and anyone else "if Tammany puts over an increased fare upon the people."

ATHENS SUMMER TERM HAS BIG ATTENDANCE

Athens, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—Next Monday the University of Georgia summer school will enter the sixth and last week of the six weeks' session, though the nine weeks course, in which there is a large registration will continue through August 21, officials have announced.

This year's summer session at the university has been the large t in the history of the school, the registration being larger than that of any other summer school in Georgia, and in advance of 1,900 students, Dr. J. S. Stewart, director, said.

In addition to students from Georgia, the enrollment has included students from one foreign country and 15 other states in the union, as follows: Brazil, Alabama, District of Columbia, Florida, Illinois, North Carolina, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Massachusetts.

One of the features of the summer session is the music festival week program, affording the students an opportunity to hear the following a.tists: Marguerita Sylvan, Henri Scott, Judson House, Jessica Schwarz, Mary Craig, John Hendricks, Glenn Stables, Eoil Michaelis, Corinne Wollerson and Mr. and Mrs. George F. Granberry.

The program included selections from the following operas: "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Madame Butterfly," "Samson and Delilah," "Carmen" and "Faust."

SHAW TO CELEBRATE SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY

London, July 24.—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, the noted dramatist, who celebrates his seventieth birthday on Monday, has declined to get excited about the honors which will be showered upon him in his attainment of the allotted Biblical span of life.

He left town this afternoon and will remain in seclusion over the weekend. Before his departure, he was subjected to a barrage of inquiries, but all interviewers were informed that he had engaged not to say anything regarding his birthday before Monday evening. At that time he will return to London to attend a dinner in his honor.

FARM CLUB MEMBERS TO VISIT ATHENS CAMP

Athens, Ga., July 24.—(Special)—For the next five weeks, beginning July 26, the farm club boys from every section of Georgia will be going to Camp Wilkins, located on a beautiful wooded hill near the Georgia State College of Agriculture at Athens, according to G. V. Cunningham, state boys' club agent. Twelve hundred and fifty of the future farmers of Georgia will attend in groups of 250 for a week's outing and instruction.

The camp is the outing place for the farm boys and girls of Georgia, built in proximity to the Georgia State College of Agriculture where they can get the vision and inspiration for a better agriculture by observing the fine live stock, poultry and crops, and the agricultural experiments and tests being conducted, as well as the pleasures of boating, swimming, games, hikes, rides, moving pictures and all those things that go to make a real camping trip.

The boys will be divided into tribes named after important Indian tribes of Georgia's past history. Among other things the boys will make studies of the histories of these tribes and make reports for the benefit of all.

The following is the schedule of dates for the various counties:

July 26-31.

Bulloch, 20; Calhoun, 12; Chatham, 5; Clarke, Clay, Cobb, 15; Colquitt, 15-30; Early, Greene, Jenkins, 20; Montgomery, 15; McDuffie, Screven, 15; Telfair, Terrell, 15; Walton, 20; Washington, 25; Warren, 25.

9,000,000 Automobiles To Make U. S. Tours In 1926, Estimate

Washington, July 24.—(AP)—Nine million automobiles, carrying 36,000,000 persons will go on long distance tours during this season, according to a survey made by the American Automobile association's national touring board.

The board, whose survey is based on counts made by 815 affiliated motor clubs, estimates that three billion dollars, or more, will be spent by the tourists during their travels. This would exceed by half a billion the amount spent during last year's touring season.

Mercantile history in the making —a brilliant stroke in underselling.

Towels Shot from Cannon!

Every towel perfect, of first quality. Every one new. Made of the finest cotton yarns. Pure snow white bleach. Every one made by Cannon. Save One-Third!

Cannon Towels are made by the Cannon Mills of North Carolina—the largest manufacturers of Bath Towels in the whole wide world. By an unusual succession and linking of extraordinary circumstances we have purchased one thousand dozen of these world's best towels for selling at honest-to-goodness savings of one-third!

So far as we know, and our knowledge is pretty thorough, it is the greatest sale of bath towels ever held in the South.

As such, the opportunity fairly bristles, and it has the timeliness of the inevitable rescue in a melodrama. And speaking of drama, it is dramatic and moving merchandising. A thing done with power, packed with thrills!

They are towels that give a keen edge to the bath —thick, heavy, as absorbent as so many blotters, drinking up the water with an unquenchable thirst.

Read the details below. As a matter of simple fact, such towels have never before been sold at any where near these low prices in Atlanta.

Towels shot from Cannon, as it were, exploding the prices!

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Building Throughout South Running Along on Even Tenor

Building construction throughout the country and especially in the south, has been running along on an even tenor judging from reports of the labor demand in this field. Workers in the building trades of the south are reported to be well employed and recently to have received raises in some branches. The S. W. Straus & Co. statement on construction conditions follows:

"With construction conditions throughout the United States being maintained on a basis comparable to the record-breaking strides of a year ago, labor in the building crafts is well employed and conditions generally are tranquil. Some readjustments of wage scales have been made, especially in the larger cities even in the face of the fact that wage increases in a number of instances were granted June 1.

"Labor disputes that disturbed the industry early in the spring have mostly been settled without difficulties, although there is now a sharp controversy arising betwen the plasterers and bricklayers over the erection of artificial stone, a field now being covered by the bricklayers in most cities. The plasterers are trying to claim restricted rights in this phase of building construction.

Controversy Settled.

"The settlement of the controversy between the sheet metal workers and carpenters on the installation of metal trim was recently negotiated on a 50-50 basis by national representatives of both unions; this settlement is regarded by leading contractors as one of the most important jurisdictional settlements in the last 25 years, for it has been estimated that in the last six years fully one billion dollars' worth of construction has been held up by this controversy.

"Builders in the larger cities report a shortage of bricklayers, plasterers and lathers but the situation has not reached a stage where it has been necessary to pay bonuses as in former years.

"Conditions are somewhat unsettled in San Francisco, Kansas City and Cleveland. In San Francisco the turmoil is caused by the efforts of the International Union of Carpenters to unionize that craft along the Pacific coast.

"In Cleveland, where there was considerable labor diffculty this spring, laborers have returned to work but the controversy revolving around painters remains unsettled. There is also a slight disturbance reported among the union carpenters in Kansas City. This disturbance was created by a demand of the carpenters for an increase of 12 1-2 cents an hour.

Chicago Decline.

"Chicago showed a decline in building during May and June with the result that builders report a surplus of mechanics in several trades, although it is reported that there is a shortage of plasterers. Practically all disputes between building trades and employers have been settled up to date but the controversy of the Chicago Building Trades council to regain closed shop conditions for the 13 so-called open shop trades, remains unsettled. The strike of plasterers, which lasted several weeks, after being called on May 27, was settled when the employers agreed to grant a wage increase from $1.50 to $1.62 1-2 an hour. Bricklayers were granted a wage increase from $1.50 to $1.62 1-2 an hour on July 1. Electricians and steamfitters are getting the $1.50 an hour rate and it is generally agreed that they will get a wage increase to $1.62 1-2 an hour on October 1. Other trades, like the carpenters, cement finishers, hoisting engineers and iron workers, both ornamental and structural, are scheduled for wage boosts from $1.37 1-2 to $1.50 an hour on October 1. Building laborers in Chicago are scheduled to get a wage increase from 87 1-2 and 90 cents an hour on the same date.

"Builders in New York report that labor is tranquil and that because of a continued demand for building construction, labor is steadily employed. The scale for stone setters in New York is $14 a day, while other basic trades range from $11 to $14.

"In Philadelphia contractors report that there is a surplus of carpenters, plumbers, painters, stone and cement finishers, but there is a shortage of marble setters. Carpenters' wages were recently increased 12 1-2 cents an hour. Boston builders report that cement finishers, who are asking for an increase of 12 1-2 cents an hour on September 1, are still on strike.

St. Paul Open Shop.

"Builders in St. Paul report that open shop prevails there in building industry with the supply of labor about equal to the demand. No wage increases are in prospect for fall. St. Paul bricklayers get $1.25 an hour, labor is 45 to 60 cents an hour and carpenters 87 1-2 to 95 cents an hour. Builders report basic employment for residential building trades workers in Minneapolis where wage rates are about the same as those in St. Paul.

"Labor conditions in Florida are on a sound basis. In spite of a decided decrease in purely speculative real estate development, building is continuing in substantial volume. There is now in Florida ample employment of the resident building trades. The boomer artisan has left with the result that strictly resident building tradesmen are both well and profitably employed at wages commensurate with a steady demand.

"Practically all southern cities report tranquil labor conditions in residence building industries. In Atlanta, Ga., the ornamental iron workers and steamfitters' wage rates were raised from $1 to $1.25 an hour. New Orleans builders, as well as those of Houston, Texas, report all resident building workers well employed. Building programs in these cities for this year continue unabated. In Houston the plumbers and steamfitters were recently granted an increase from $11 to $12 a day. In Savannah, Ga., marble setters were recently granted an increase of $1 to $1.25 an hour and electricians from 75 cents to $1 an hour.

Bricklayer Shortage.

"There is a prospective shortage of Omaha bricklayers who have a wage increase of 12 1-2 cents an hour pending. Decline in Omaha of about 50 per cent of residence building recorded this year over last year's volume. Building labor in Omaha is paid from 40 to 50 cents an hour, bricklayers $1.25 an hour and plumbers from 75 cents to $1 an hour.

"In Cleveland this year's constructive program is lagging behind that of last year. The builders say there is no shortage of mechanics with the reverse being true in practically all other trades. Lathers and plasterers are paid $13 a day, other trades get from $1.25 to $1.50 an hour.

"There is a reported surplus of workers in Cincinnati, although building volume is good but less than a year ago. There is unlikely to be a demand for increases in wages this fall. Plasterers receive $1.50, bricklayers $1.62 1-2, carpenters, lathers, structural iron workers, hoisting engineers and roofers $1.31 1-4 an hour.

"Detroit, Grand Rapids and other Michigan cities report tranquil labor conditions. The supply of mechanics is adequate to the demand.

"This year's building program on the Pacific coast is about keeping pace with that of last year, based on reports from San Francisco, Seattle and Los Angeles. San Francisco builders aver that the carpenter strike has created a surplus of mechanics in other trades. San Francisco plasterers' pay is $12 a day, carpenters $8 a day and labor is $5 a day.

"Topeka and other cities in Kansas report basic building program for summer and early fall months. The supply of building mechanics is adequate to the demand in all trades. Carpenters receive 75 cents to $1 an hour, and common labor 40 to 50 cents an hour. Bricklayers in Topeka received $1 a day increase last April. Builders there report a 25 per cent greater volume in building this year than was erected in last year's program.

"Builders in Washington, D. C., recently granted the hoisting engineers a raise from $1.25 to $1.37 1-2 an hour. Builders in the capital city report no shortage of mechanics.

"Similar conditions are reported from Baltimore and Pittsburgh. In the former city the ornamental iron workers' wage rate was raised from $1.10 to $1.25 an hour."

DuPree Booklet Gives Publicity To City and State

Nearly 200,000 booklets containing interesting detailed information of the city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia have been prepared and distributed throughout the country by the W. L. & John O. DuPree real estate company, according to John O. DuPree. Four issues of this pamphlet, which advertises Atlanta and Georgia to the world, have been printed and the last 10,000, that will bring the total to the 200,000 mark, are now being circulated.

John O. DuPree, who compiled the first edition 12 months ago, after spending two weeks searching for information to go into the booklet and testing the accuracy of the data obtained, has been able to furnish thousands with information about this city and state, some of which appeared in the booklet long before official reports containing the matter reached the public.

While there is no commercial form of advertising in the booklet, compliments of W. L. & John O. DuPree being printed at the bottom of the front page as the only indication of its source, the booklet has resulted in numerous requests of the DuPree company from out-of-town people and firms for locations in Atlanta.

The following topics are discussed in detail in the booklet: Population estimate, banking resources and deposits, building permits, indebtedness of city, county and state, telephones in operation, schools, business firms and industrial sites, parks, golf courses, tax information and numerous other details occupying 16 printed pages. With each printing the information is brought up to date. An entire revision of the booklet will be made with the next edition, Mr. DuPree stated.

Many Beautiful Bungalows Arise in Candler Park Section

Beautiful bungalow at 88 Callan circle recently completed by Dennett Construction company and Edmundson Realty company, John C. Foster, architect.

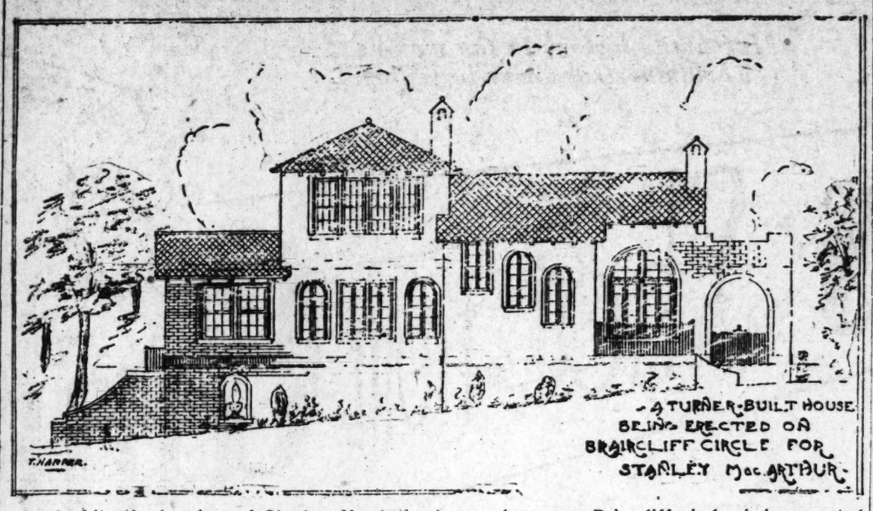

Completion of several brick bungalows in the Candler Park section was announced Friday by the Edmundson Realty company and the Dennett Construction company. Of these the last to be finished is a home at 88 Callan circle, overlooking the new Clifton road section of Druid Hills. Another home on Callan circle is under construction now by the Edmundson and Dennett companies. John C. Foster is the architect associated with these companies.

Mrs. N. W. Dennett, head of the Dennett company, has been in the real estate and construction business for more than 10 years and during this period has been responsible for the building of many homes and small stores. Since spring her company has built three home in Morningside and two in Sylvan Hills, in addition to many previously built in the Peachtree Hills section, it was stated. Several small stores on Peachtree road were also constructed by her firm. Handling its own improved lots in addition to general real estate listings, this concern is in a position to supply a variety of homes and building lots, as well as to build any style house to order, according to J. Harvey Baker, salesmanager.

Mr. Baker, who recently took over the management of the sales department of Edmundson Realty company and Dennett Construction company, said the sales in homes this summer is particularly gratifying compared with the past few summer seasons. His sales staff includes Mrs. W. L. Delay, W. H. Human, Mrs. Corrie Lindsey, Mrs. E. A. Roberts and Mrs. Berry.

Callan Circle, where several of the new Dennett houses are located, adjoins Candler Park, with its swimming pool, playgrounds and abundant foliage.

H. H. WILKINSON JOINS ATLANTA REALTY FIRM

H. H. Wilkinson, well-known real estate man of Atlanta, announced his connection as secretary and treasurer with the Vacant Lot and Loan company Saturday. Before his association with Paul R. Puckett, president of the Vacant Lot and Loan company, Mr. Wilkinson was with the Avondale Estates for three months.

H. H. WILKINSON.

Coming to Atlanta from Chicago about ten years ago, Mr. Wilkinson made his home here, remaining until the latter part of November. He came here as representative of James S. Kirk and company, a toilet and laundry soap manufacturer of Chicago. Until 1923 he served as the southeastern representative of this concern. He then became field superintendent of the Phi Delta Mutual Life Insurance company, with whom he remained until November, 1924, when he went to West Palm Beach, Fla.

There he represented the Hollywood company and had charge of its West Palm Beach office while the district manager, Vernon Oswald, was in charge of the Atlanta office.

GORDON PROPERTY SOON TO BE SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION

Todd-Worsham Auction company announces it soon will place on auction the old General John B. Gordon property, which is bounded by DeKalb avenue, Hampton terrace, Sutherland drive and McLendon street. This property, which is on the opposite side of the railroad tracks from the location recently purchased for the new Pullman company's shops, making it especially desirable, is now owned by Fred Hall.

Comprising about 16 acres, the tract is divided into nearly 100 lots, all having frontage on one or more of the streets. A new street is being constructed through the center of the property, according to T. R. Fuller and E. H. McGee, who are connected with the Todd-Worsham Auction company. Lon D. Worsham, who has been in the auction business for 12 years, will conduct the sale.

In announcing the removal of its offices from 331 Candler building to 629 Candler building, which will be done Monday, the Todd-Worsham Auction company gave out the results of two sales it has conducted within the past 25 days, amounting to over $25,000. $12,500 was obtained in the sale of the J. J. Knott estate, in the East Point section, July 20.

Real Estate Company Plans Treasure Hunting Contest

Treasure hunting is the novel way the Vacant Lot and Loan company has devised of advertising and interesting prospective customers in the purchase of lots. This method, which has been cleverly worked out until it is as attractive to thrill seekers as any of the treasure hunts that have been so popular with Atlanta's younger set here of late, is a unique plan in the real estate field, having been invented and copyrighted recently by Paul R. Puckett.

Today the treasure hunt begins. When the contest closes the winners will be rewarded with $100 cash for the grand treasure and $50 cash for the second treasure. In addition to these prizes, all contestants, who correctly fill in the required information will be tendered a negotiable certificate of credit for $50 to apply on the purchase price of any one lot purchased from the Vacant Lot and Loan company within a given period.

A chart has been prepared to be inserted in today's Atlanta papers which contains the following information on a series of 15 lots, the company's number of each lot, the direction the lot faces, its distance from the corner, the number of trees on it, its distance in blocks from a car line, also from a school and from stores, and other pertinent details. In the case of certain of the lots listed, some of the specifications are left blank. Gathering the information necessary to correctly fill in the blanks is the task of the treasure hunter.

The contestants will be required to visit the lots and identify them by a sign bearing the same numbers as are found opposite the location and description in the newspaper notices. They will then have to seek out the required information.

The method of awarding the cash prizes will be to select from the charts correctly returned the person whose automobile license number most nearly agrees with the numbers of the first five blanks filled in, and the license number of the contestant's automobile which comes farthest from agreeing with correctly filled in blanks. The first will be awarded the grand treasure of $100 and the second winner a prize of $50..

Motor Facts That Every Car Owner Should Know

SUMMER IS THE TIME TO GET THE BEST OUT OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE

A Motorist doesn't realize sometimes how much he needs repairs until something goes back on him at a critical moment.

Before going on a trip if you are experiencing any kind of trouble with your car, bring or send it to us, and let us give it the "once over." Then you can travel with your mind free of auto troubles.

If you haven't given us a trial, there is still something good in store for you. Join in with the ever growing list of satisfied automobile owners, whom we are serving daily with first-class automobile repairing.

All work guaranteed and our prices are right and reasonable.

"Official AAA Service Station No. 10"—WAl. 6610 6611

Southern Auto & Equipment Co., Inc.
111 S. Forsyth Street — Atlanta, Ga.

MR. CAR OWNER DO YOU KNOW that the manufacturer of your automobile has a certain standard for every part that goes into your motor?

Every piece must measure up to a thousandth part of an inch. Every piece of steel, bronze, brass or iron must stand a certain test as to accuracy and strength before it goes into your motor. Every motor is designed by highly paid efficient engineers who specify pistons and piston rings of certain material, certain weight and exact size.

Pistons must be ground to just the right clearance to fit the cylinders.

PISTON RINGS must have just the right tension on the cylinder walls to hold compression, yet not enough tension to cause excess friction. When cylinder walls become worn out of round and tapered it is necessary to "regrind" cylinders and replace pistons and piston rings.

It is "VITALLY IMPORTANT" that these parts and all internal parts of the motor be replaced with exact factory duplicates as originally designed by the engineers.

Be sure that you "KNOW YOUR MECHANIC." Do not be misled by mechanics who tell you that they can install so called leak proof rings that will seal out of round and tapered cylinders. To do so you are getting away from engineering design and factory standard and take chances of ruining your motor. Such rings have inner rings or springs which cause excessive tension or friction on cylinder walls and causes them to wear rapidly, makes the motor "sluggish," causes overheating and places undue stress on crankshaft and connecting rods and their bearings.

Do not confuse "cylinder grinding" with boring, reaming, honing or inferior methods of cylinder reconditioning.

Visit our modern equipped grinding shops and let us tell you what we can do for your motor troubles.

A Comprehensive Home-site Development

JOYLAN PARK

Near Clark University

Atlanta's highest class colored residential section and recreation center announces the reopening sale of lots and choice home-sites at low prices, with every advantage given to early buyers.

Joylan Park is one of Atlanta's most beautiful spots, close in and served by two car lines and is accessible to good, pure, clear drinking water.

JOYLAN PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Included in the improvements of this ideal home-site development will be sidewalks, grading of streets and resurfacing the main streets and avenues with cinders. Joylan Park now has a new church which is just being completed, baseball ground, and is adjacent to a splendid recreation pavilion and playgrounds, offering the home-seeker every advantage of an ideal location in which to build your home.

The contemplated improvements will be written in your deed which makes them a part of our contract to the purchaser. Prices, including the improvements, range from $250.00 up. A small cash payment gives you possession of one of these choice residential lots. Very liberal terms will be made on the balance.

Sale just opening. You are invited to come in and make your selection now while the choicest lots are available.

And remember when you buy a lot in Joylan Park you have no City Tax to pay, this being just outside the City limits.

Special concessions to those wishing to build their homes. Buy your lot now!

PRICES WILL NEVER BE LOWER!
TERMS WILL NEVER BE BETTER!

SECOND TREASURE—$50.00 IN CASH, AND ONE NEGOTIABLE CERTIFICATE OF CREDIT FOR $50.00.
GENERAL TREASURE—$50.00 NEGOTIABLE CERTIFICATE OF CREDIT.

—How to Win the Treasures—

The object of the TREASURE HUNT is—FIRST—by PERSONAL investigation of each of the first FIVE LOTS listed in CHART, to correctly state in BLANK SPACES about each lot, DISTANCE IN BLOCKS TO THE VARIOUS OBJECTS OR LOCATIONS DESIGNATED IN DIAGONALLY PRINTED HEADINGS AT TOP OF COLUMN, DIRECTION LOT FACES, NUMBER OF TREES, if any on the LOT, correctly answering or filling in all MISSING INFORMATION about each of the FIRST FIVE LOTS listed. The first FIVE FIGURES or CIPHERS (if any) correctly inserted by the CONTESTANT, reading from TOP LINE DOWN constitutes a NUMERAL. Should this NUMERAL tally exactly with your 1926 Auto State License Tag Number when both are read in order, or most closely approximates it, as will be determined by the CONTEST JUDGES at conclusion of CONTEST, you will be paid $100.00 IN CASH, and issued a $50 Negotiable Certificate of Credit, one of which, when properly endorsed may apply on the purchase price of EACH LOT purchased from VACANT LOT AND LOAN COMPANY, if purchased from them within 30 days from date of award.

The CONTESTANT, making the same personal investigation, filling in all BLANK SPACES CORRECTLY about each lot, and whose 1926 auto state license tag number is furthest away from the NUMERAL above mentioned, will BE PAID $50.00 IN CASH, and issued a $50.00 negotiable certificate of credit to apply as above mentioned.

ALL CONTESTANTS who CORRECTLY fill in all BLANK SPACES about each lot will be issued a $50.00 NEGOTIABLE CERTIFICATE to apply as above mentioned.

RULES

Blocks are to be counted from one street to another regardless of any difference in lengths or widths of blocks. The fractional part of a block may be added to the fractional part of another block, but such fractional parts must complete a block before such fractions may be counted. In counting blocks, count from one side of street until corners are turned, at which time the blocks may be counted from either side of street. DISTANCES are reckoned from nearest street approach of lot to nearest street car railway track, the nearest city or county public school or the nearest community grocery store. PRINT IN PLAINLY all MISSING information, your auto license tag number, the state issues by, make of auto, and then sign in blank spaces provided, your name, street and number, postoffice address and phone number, and bring or mail your chart to contest manager, 516 Healey building, Atlanta, Ga., on or before 11:00 o'clock a. m., Monday, August 2nd, 1926. Later filing of answers or post marks will be rejected. Awards will be made on or before August 15th, 1926.

Be Cool---Own a Car

THE WAY to get away from heat is to drive away from it. No matter how hot the weather may be it's always cool and breezy when you're riding. On week-ends, too, your car will carry you to cool shady spots by lake and river banks where the heat is as far away as the city itself. Why rob yourself and your family of summer-time happiness when for so little as the prices quoted below you can own a fine Martin-Nash Used Car. It's really foolish economy not to own one—isn't it?

327th Infantry, Officer Reserve, Breaks Camp Today

After one of the most successful summer training periods held by an officers' reserve, the 327th infantry of organized reserve officers under command of Lieutenant Colonel Edward A. Early, has been in summer training at Fort McPherson for the past two weeks, will break camp Sunday afternoon and report back to their normal assignment status with the regiment, it was announced late Saturday night.

One hundred and eight out of a possible 116 officers attended the two weeks' training period, which was a record attendance for the Fourth Army Corps area, it was stated.

The 327th infantry of organized reserves is composed of officers only and each year is assigned to a summer training camp for two weeks. The work is outlined in three-year cycles, one year devoted to troop training, one year to an army school and another to a citizens' military training camp.

Commander Pleased.

Lieutenant Colonel Early, commander of the 327th infantry, organized reserves, expressed himself Saturday night as being very much pleased with the wonderful showing made by the regiment during the past two weeks.

Captain Harry C. Luck, executive officer of the 327th, also expressed himself as being highly pleased with the work and praised the spirit and zeal of the officers during the training period.

It was pointed out that the 327th sent 18 officers to Fort Screven in April to train with the 325th Georgia regiment and later sent 30 officers to Anniston, Ala., to train with the 326th Georgia and the 328th Florida regiments.

The two weeks' training period started July 11 and will end this afternoon.

List of Officers.

Officers connected with the regimental headquarters were Lieutenant Colonel Lindsay C. McFadden, Captains Eugene B. Chase, Harry M. Smith, William A. Robinson, Hiram Hutchison and Oliver P. Lightsey and Second Lieutenants W. L. Whitestone and Arnold A. Wofford. Henry C. Bedinger was chaplain of the regiment.

Those with headquarters were First Lieutenant W. M. Albergetti and Second Lieutenants Robert J. Allen and Joe D. Aikins.

Officers with the howitzer company were First Lieutenant George R. Briggs and Second Lieutenants John F. Auten, Charles M. Blackwood and Lee B. Blakeney.

DOUGLAS MAN HURT AS CAR OVERTURNS

Douglas, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—Menno Farnell, Douglas automobile dealer, was seriously injured today when his automobile turned turtle two miles from Douglas. He was thrown from the machine, and at a late hour today had not recovered consciousness.

Women Are Urged To Support Strict Law Enforcement

Representative women throughout the state were urged Saturday to be present in the senate chamber of the state capitol Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock to take part in the organization of a state law enforcement committee by the Civic Council of Women. Following the meeting at the capitol, the civic council will sponsor a meeting at 8 o'clock on the night of the same day in the St. Paul Methodist church, at which Hooper Alexander, former United States district attorney, will make the principal address. This will be the first of a series of meetings designed to acquaint the public with conditions that are "unwholesome and not conducive to peace," with a view of remedying the "distressing situation."

All churches have been requested by the civic council and Methodist minister to open their doors and hold meetings immediately, and until relief is afforded. The same request has been made of all civic and religious agencies, asking them to furnish speakers to discuss "the lawlessness which has been clearly apparent in every section of the city" and to speak "in the interest of God and country."

In the meeting Wednesday night Mrs. J. E. Andrews, reform leader, and Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the League of Women Voters, will take part. It is announced that several prominent speakers, as yet not announced, will appear before the gathering at the capitol Wednesday morning to discuss various departments, local, state and national, under which the government functions, and to present information concerning law enforcement agencies. There will be sessions, both morning and afternoon, with the lunch period at 1 o'clock.

BRUCE BIELASKI PROBE IS STARTED

Washington, July 24.—(AP)—An investigation to determine how A. Bruce Bielaski, prohibition "under-cover" man in New York, receives the salary of $1,100 a month which he told a New York court he got was started today by Comptroller General McCarl.

McCarl ordered an inspection of all government payrolls after receipt of complaints from members of congress and others. Bielaski disclosed his salary during the Dwyer rum trial in New York.

The comptroller pointed out that the law prohibits a prohibition worker from receiving more than $7,500 a year and also prohibits a government worker from drawing two salaries where the combined total is more than $2,000 annually.

VESPUCI CARRIES DEPORTATION FIGHT TO CIRCUIT COURT

Unless the circuit court comes to his rescue, Americo Vespuci, late of the federal prison and now of Fulton Tower, will go back to sunny Italy—against his will.

Vespuci's lawyers sought to block deportation on the ground that he was given two sentences by the same court at the same time, contending that this did not constitute the required two acts involving moral turpitude.

Judge Sibley held that regardless of the fact that the two sentences were fixed at the same time, Vespuci could be deported legally. The Italian was sentenced to serve two terms of three years each following his conviction on a charge of violating the Mann act. Finishing his time at the prison, Vespuci was sent to the tower on order of M. A. Coikendall, imigration head for this district.

Vespuci's attorneys appealed to Judge Sibley, seeking to release him on habeas corpus proceedings. Failing in the district federal court, the appeal was taken to the circuit court.

Knight's Friends Put Him in Contest From Fourth Ward

Charles D. Knight, member of council from the fourth ward, has been forcibly entered into the contest for his section in the city primary. Friends of his in the ward have voluntarily entered his name and paid his primary fee without his knowledge.

Mr. Knight makes the following statement concerning his candidacy:

"Four years ago you selected me and elected me as one of your councilmen to represent you in the city council, and reelected me two years thereafter. In my absence from the city two weeks ago, my friends again announced me for this office. For the last four years as your representative in the general council, I have tried to do constructive work, such as building and paving streets, improving our parks, schools, bridges, viaducts and underpasses, trying to provide playgrounds for our children properly supervised by playground supervisors. How well I have helped to accomplish these things you know. It has taken much of my time, and has been at a sacrifice of my personal business interests to serve as your councilman for the last four years. The next two years will be history-making years, and I suggest that you good people will have meetings of the people of our ward, and select your representatives in council for this year with care, thought and deliberation.

"We have $8,000,000 of bond money to spend besides $9,000,000 of your tax money. You have your important viaducts to build, the city hall and your schools, sewers and waterworks extension, and I want to say this is no time for self-appointing or selecting the man to represent the city to get the best results out of this money. I am no aspirant for this job; I have asked my friends to call meetings and select some other one, and I take this opportunity of begging you to do something in the next ten days to show who you do want to represent you as councilman from the ninth ward.

"I suggest that the aspirants for alderman and councilman in the different wards of the city have something to say on what they expect to do if they are elected that will redound to the best interests of their respective wards and to the city at large. I want to say that I prefer to give my time and attention to my personal business interests, but I have at all times thought it was the highest duty of the citizen to serve his fellows and his city and after considering the matter, if it is your desire that I serve you as a member of the general council from the ninth ward, I would consider it my duty to answer your call to service and if elected I will serve you to the best of my ability and will do as best I can to serve the people of the ninth ward and promote the best interests of our beloved city that in my judgment is just entering an era of unprecedented prosperity and will maintain her prestige as the great city of our southland."

STATE NORMAL ADDS FACULTY MEMBERS

Athens, Ga., July 24.—(AP)—The faculty of the State Normal school here will be augmented by eight new teachers recently elected by the board of trustees of the school, when the new session opens in September. The additions to the faculty as announced by President Jere M. Pound are:

Dick Barthelmess At Metropolitan In 'Ranson's Folly'

Dorothy Mackaill and Anders Randolf Head Supporting Cast.

Richard Barthelmess, in "Ranson's Folly," is the screen attraction at the Metropolitan theater for the current week. This picture ranks among Barthelmess' best, and it is said that more exciting experiences and narrow escapes occurred to him during the filming of "Ranson's Folly" than during any other picture that has been made by the popular star.

Richard Barthelmess is seen in the role of Lieutenant Ranson, a youthful officer who had joined the United States army for the excitement and danger it offered. After a satisfying experience fighting Indians, he is transferred to Fort Crockett, where life is dull and monotonous. He forms an attachment for Mary Cahill, the daughter of the post trader.

There is a bandit operating in the neighborhood, known as the 'Red Rider," because he is always disguised in a red bandana and poncho. Ranson hears of him and belittles his exploits, claiming he could hold up the stage with a pair of scissors any day. Goaded by the jeers of his brother officers, Ranson decides to make good his boast. He seizes a red bandana, a poncho and a pair of scissors from the spot trader's store and makes off, much to the dismay of his comrades.

Lieutenant Ranson holds up the stage as a harmless prank. Later, while dancing, word arrives that the paymaster, following the stage in a buckboard, has been held up and the bodyguard shot by the "Red Rider" just after the stage was held up. Ranson is accused of the murder and arrested. Ranson is mystified, but makes light of it until he realizes the seriousness of his predicament. He is imprisoned in his quarters. There he is visited by Mary Cahill, the only one who believes in his innocence. Their mutual love is declared and becomes a firm bond.

The actions of Mary's father on the night of the holdup are very suspicious and it is apparent that he is the real culprit. At the court-martial he unites in giving evidence against Lieutenant Ranson. During the trial, however, suspicion points to Cahill, and when Lieutenant Ranson realizes that he might be freed at Cahill's expense he pleads guilty in order to save the father of the girl he loved.

When Cahill realizes that his daughter loves Ranson he confesses that he is the real "Red Rider." While the court is puzzling over this situation, word is received that a holdup has been committed by the "Red Rider" while the court is in session, and it is obvious that neither Ranson nor Cahill is the real bandit. Richard Barthelmess is supported by Dorothy Mackaill and Anders Randolf.

A special novelty reel made by Tracy Mathewson and showing Frank Adair's wonder horse, "Vendetta," will also be shown on this week's program at the Metropolitan theater. "The Gumps" will be seen in a very good comedy entitled "Tow Service."

Enrico Leide is offering as his overture this week "Valencia," the latest and most popular one-step in the country today. It is Spanish in characteristic, but mostly American in sweep and vigor. Mr. Leide makes an interesting interpolation in his overture with "La Poloma." The principal theme for the feature photoplay is "Sleepy Head," a Shapiro-Bernstein publication. A score of popular music accompanies the news, novelty reel and comedy.

'VENDETTA' SHOWN AT METROPOLITAN IN NOVELTY REEL

There will be shown on the screen at the Metropolitan theater this week, a novelty reel made by Tracy Mathewson, of Frank Adair's prize-winning mare, "Vendetta." The film was made at the Augusta horse show held recently at Augusta, and at which Mr. Adair gave a special exhibition of "Vendetta."

"Vendetta," at the Kentucky state fair last year won first prize for mares, and then later annexed the grand championship purse of $10,000 which is the largest purse offered during the year.

After "Vendetta" had won this zenith of honors in the exhibition field, Mr. Adair, in true southern sportsman fashion, withdrew "Vendetta" from further competition, and she can only be seen at special exhibitions, which fact further enhances the value of the Metropolitan reel.

It is only when the high-sped slow-motion camera is trained on "Vendetta" that one can begin to realize the wonderful grace and the rhythm of her every move, and the matchless style that won the title of "the most beautiful horse in the world" for her.

This week's programs of the local motion picture houses feature some of the finest pictures of the season. The young man in the natty uniform, on the upper left, is Richard Barthelmess, who is seen at the Metropolitan theater in "Ranson's Folly." The breakfast-table scene shown next is Laura LaPlante, who plays "The Midnight Sun" at the Howard. You're right, the next scene is of the circus "big top," from "Bigger Than Barnum's" with Viola Dana and George O'Hara at Loew's Grand. Top, extreme right, is shown Charles Chaplin, who is seen at the West End theater Monday and Tuesday in "The Gold Rush." The amorous scene which graces the lower left hand corner of this space is from "Red Dice," which will be shown at the Palace theater Thursday and Friday. The next scene is taken from "Under Western Skies" at the Rialto all week with diminutive Anne Cornwall. William Boyd in "The Volga Boatman" playing at the Cameo Wednesday, Thursday and Friday is shown next. The cowboy with the two-gallon hat in the next view is Hoot Gibson, who plays at the Tudor Thursday, Friday and Saturday in "The Man in the Saddle." Eugene O'Brien and Claire Windsor, who appear in "Souls for Sables" at the Alamo No. 2, are shown next.

Buchowetzki Film At Howard Theater Stars Laura LaPlante

"The Midnight Sun" Is Universal's Super-Jewel Offering.

In "The Midnight Sun," Dimitri Buchowetzki, noted Russian director, has produced one of the biggest screen spectacles of the year. It is a Russian story staged in a lavish setting that rivals even "The Phantom of the Opera" and other screen successes. It is Universal's Super-Jewel offering for this year and will be the feature screen attraction at the Howard theater this week. In addition to its magnificent sets, Universal spared no expense when it came to casting the players, making of "The Midnight Sun" an all-star production.

The story deals with a girl, member of the imperial ballet, who is coveted by two men, one of them a grand duke, commander of the military power of Russia; the other a banker, the money monarch of the country, and the girl's love for a young officer of the grand duke's staff. The young officer's brother is a Nihilist and this complication gives risb to many startling dramatic situations.

Laura La Plante is seen as the young premier ballerina who has charmed her way from the ranks of the ballet to the top. "The Midnight Sun" gives Miss La Plante her first chance as a dramatic actress, the young leading woman having heretofore been seen only as a comedienne. Pat O'Malley is the grand duke, handsome and resplendent in gorgeous and colorful uniforms. Raymond Keane, making his first start as one of the principals in a big production, plays the hero.

The Publix stage attraction for this week is "Southern Memories," a presentation devised and staged by Paul Oscard. This is Mr. Oscard's first production in the series of Publix presentations which the Howard has been playing during the past six months. Conspicuous in this peppy review which presents the songs of the old south interspersed with modern dances, is a medley of famous old songs, most of them the familiar airs composed by Stephen Foster, and arranged by Nathaniel Finston. With only a line or two from each song, the modulations from each air to the next are most ingeniously made. The company of vocalists and dancers is an unusually capable one and the production is most tastefully costumed and staged.

The overture for the week by the Howard Symphony orchestra under the capable leadership of Joseph Littau will be "Mignon." Other subjects on the program will include an organ solo, "Just a Cottage Small," a news reel and comedy.

'Under Western Skies' Rialto Photoplay Stars Norman Kerry

Norman Kerry Heads Big Cast in Sedgwick Production.

Robert Erskine, free and easy-going New Yorker, son of a hard-headed, wealthy business man, proved that when the test came he was a chip off the old block, much to his father's discomfiture but also to the old gentleman's ultimate satisfaction. The proving of it is one of the many interesting themes which Edward Sedgwick, author and director, has worked into "Under Western Skies," an Edward Sedgwick production released through Universal, that is to be screened at the Rialto theater this week with an all-star cast acting out the story.

Norman Kerry impersonates the character of Robert Erskine. The action takes place in two such widely separate sections of the country as the harvest fields of eastern Oregon and Wall street, New York city, the heart of the world's money market. The atmosphere of both these sections has been caught and held in this most interesting picture, as have the characteristics and ambitions of the people who inhabit them. Anne Cornwall, who is steadily mounting the ladder of screen fame, is cast in the role of Ella Parkhurst, a product of Oregon, set down in the shadow of Madison Square Garden under most trying circumstances.

Ward Crane, the screen's most polished and gentlemanly villain, plays the role of the rascally representative of eastern capitalists who are throttling the Oregon farmers by withholding loans just as the harvesting season breaks and who thereby hope to gain the farmers' land at a cheap price. Out of this situation comes the clash between Robert Erskine and his father, the latter being the part played by George Fawcett. After a quarrel Robert goes west to work in the Oregon wheat fields. There he learns that his father is one of the prime movers in the scheme to take the farmers' land, so he sets to work to beat the old man at his own game.

A pretty and appealing romance has been brought into the picture. There is also much that is tense and thrilling such as the great steeplechase and actual scenes from the famous Pendleton, Oregon, round-up, and the battle of wits between the farmers, led by Robert, and the eastern capitalists, headed by James Erskine. Much excellent comedy runs throughout the length of the picture, it being contributed by Eddie Gribbon, who again finds himself playing the role of the burglar, and the irrepressible Harry Todd.

The picture is also marked by many beautiful photographic shots, notably those showing the great reapers at work gathering in the harvest. These were made during the actual harvesting of the crops in eastern Oregon, the company of players being away from the studio for almost three months.

In addtion to the players already named, the cast also includes Kathleen Key, Charles K. French, John Peters and William Steele.

The story is built about actual pictures photographed at the great Pendleton, Oregon, round-up last year, and some of the most thrilling action in many a picture is depicted.

Universal is to be thanked for the exclusive rights to the Pendleton pictures and the dramatic action romance which has been built around them under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

The Rialto comedy is "Dangerous Curves Behind," and none other than Mack Sennett could have produced a comedy with that title.

Frank Turner directs the Rialto orchestra in a snappy, musical score and Pathe News brings the world's news to the screen in the best of picture reels.

Alamo No. 1

Jack Hoxie in "Two-Fisted Jones," Monday and Tuesday. A true blue outdoor picture crammed with thrills, galloping ranch riders, sensational escapes, exciting gun fights, reckless exploits and a king love story between the king of the cowpunchers and a pretty girl. If you love stirring action and the real west in all its glory, then see this fast-going western. A good selected comedy completes a snappy program that furnishes plenty of excitement and fun.

Wednesday and Thursday "The Midnight Flyer," with Cullen Landis and Dorothy Devore. It roars! It thunders! It pounds! It crashes! Two men fighting to death, a roaring wild train racing down the grade with the speed of a hurricane, another train coming up the grade, a mad man at its throttle, revenge, a sudden crash and the cars pile up on each other. And the weakling son proved his mettle by saving the Midnight Flyer from crashing into the fast freight. This is one of the best railroad dramas ever screened, furnishing plenty of thrills and heart throbs. Everyone in the family should see this great drama.

Friday and Saturday—Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Double Action Daniels." Another fast-going western with the usual action and stirring fights that westerns are popular for. This is Bill Jr.'s best action picture, with more trick riding, two-fisted fights, fast gun-play than any western you've ever seen before. Always a good selected comedy.

West End Theater.

This week's program at the West End theater offers Atlantans some of the best and most popular pictures ever filmed and include several of the most prominent artists in the cinema. Charles Chaplin in his latest and best comedy, Richard Dix in a light farce and a historical film headline the week's bill.

On Monday and Tuesday Charles Chaplin will be seen in "The Gold Rush." With that genius which is peculiarly Chaplin's own, and against a background of the Klondike gold stampede into Alaska, the screen comedian has depicted with subtly tender and delicate master strokes the struggle of man's eternal search of happiness, its heartbreaks and its tears, its laughter and its joys.

On the tragedy and misery suffered by the pioneers who first journeyed into Alaska, and on the dramatics of the soul-sufferings of the "sourdough" who braved mountains, snow and ice in their mad rush for gold, Charlie Chaplin has built in "The Gold Rush" a delightful structure of fun and hilariousness.

On Wednesday "Too Many Kisses," starring Richard Dix, is billed for a run of this day only. It is another of the famous Dix farces and the excellent comedy of the film is rivaled only by the attractiveness of the star.

On Thursday and Friday Wallace Beery will be seen in an historical romance, "King Richard, the Lion-Hearted." This is one of the most popular pictures that the talented Beery has ever made. It deals, as the title suggests, with the adventures of gallant King Richard and his crusade into the holy lands. Beery is seen as King Richard, the role that he created in "Robin Hood."

FILM OF CIRCUS AT LOEW'S GRAND

Viola Dana Starred in "Bigger Than Barnum's."

Loew's Grand theater this week will present "Bigger Than Barnum's," a colorful drama of the white tops, as the feature picture attraction for the week. This is a stirring story of life behind the scenes in a big circus and is said to be one of the greatest circus life pictures ever produced. In the cast are such notable stars as Viola Dana, Ralph Lewis and George O'Hara.

Arthur Guy Empey, who loomed on the literary horizon with the appearance of his novel, "Over the Top," is the author of the story from which "Bigger Than Barnum's" was made. Choosing as his premise the first article in the creed of circus folk—that "the show must go on"—he has woven a compelling narrative about the famous Blandin troupe of high-wire artistes and the traditions of the family in circus history. A Blandin knew his business, had courage and, come what may, was always ready to respond to the inviolable injunction that "the show must go on." Consequently, when the owner of the show, attempting to put a kick into the performance, removes the net over which the Blandin act works, and the son of Peter Blandin refused to go on because he fears for the safety of the girl also working in the act and whom he loves, it is received as a hard blow to the elder Blandin. Faithful to the traditions of the family, old Blandin goes on and falls, crippling himself seriously, while the son, who through his act has become a "sawdust rat," wanders out of the atmosphere he loves. Later the elder Blandin goes to live at a small hotel and the girl (played by Viola Dana) teams with another tight-wire artiste. She is about to marry this artiste, who would not permit her to carry on the name of Blandin unless she did so, when fire breaks out in the hotel where Peter Blandin lives. The renegade son, who has clung close to the old man by mounting a telephone pole and walking on a wire leading to the top of the hotel, carrying his father on his back from the burning building, thus reclaiming himself as a Blandin worthy of the name. The tag "shot" catches young Blandin and the girl doing the death-defying stunt in mid-air that apparently made the name ever more famous.

'KATINKA' IS OFFERED AT ATLANTA THEATER

Lou Powers Returns to Cast in Current Attraction.

With every detail for a brilliant performance completed, "Katinka," the offering for the sixth week of the Municipal Opera company, will bring Lou Powers, the immensely pleasing comedian back to the cast at its opening Monday night at the Atlanta theater.

The production of "Katinka" offers an almost infinite opportunity for colorful display, with its wedding scene assembling Russian peasants in quaint costumes with ornate headdress and its scenes of Turkish splendor in the harem sets. The music is bright and sparkling and the comedy is excellent, full of plots and counter plots, bringing about the most humorous situations.

Her biggest role of the season will come to Vera Myers, in the name part of the play. She will be the bride of the Russian ambassador, Boris, around whom the intrigues revolve. Boris will provide another splendid part for Louis Templeman, who has distinguished himself with outstanding parts in every production.

Lou Powers and Anne Yago as Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Hopper, wealthy American tourists, will have comedy leads. Mary Leila Patterson will play Olga, the former wife of Boris, and Arthur Burckley will appear as the sweetheart of Katinka.

Ballet numbers featuring Vienna girls, Turkish maidens and peasants will be interpolated during the show and Leonard White, leader of the ballet, will appear in solo numbers.

'The Demi-Virgin' Final Offering of Lanning Company

Bertha Mueller, Charleston Champion, Seen With Company.

With Avery Hopwood's breath-taking farce comedy, "The Demi-Virgin," as their final offering, Don Lanning and his musical comedy company are preparing to make their closing a memorable one. The play is by Avery Hopwood and contains some of the cleverest situations and bits of dialogue he has ever written. It is replete with the usual Hopwood comedy touches and should provide hilarious evenings for Forsyth audiences.

An unsual feature of the production will be the fact that Fred Raymond, Jr., will be seen in the same part which he created on the play's opening night in New York. At that time he was selected to play the leading male character and Miss Hazel Dawn, well-known screen star, was his leading lady.

While the original play was a dramatic comedy the story is well preserved in the musical version to be used by the Lanning aggregation and all the principals of the company will be given good parts. Several specialties are also introduced, among them a Charleston "as it should be danced," the illustrator being none other than Miss Bertha Mueller, of Atlanta, who has won many cups in Florida and is accredited as the champion Charlestoner of that state.

"The Demi-Virgin" was originally produced by A. H. Woods, and after a run of one year in New York it was taken to Chicago where its metropolitan success was duplicated. No farce of recent years has attracted such wide attention and the publicity earned in New York has made it well known throughout the country. Its bid for favor is granted on its wealth of bright dialogue and the originality of its farcical situations, the like of which have been approached by few comedies in years. It is built for laughing purposes only and is guaranteed to furnish plenty of this element.

It will be remembered that some litigation over the play resulted from its presentation in New York, but courts decided in favor of the producer and the run continued.

The local production, besides starring Mr. Raymond in his original part, will be the best attained by the Lanning Players, who intend to leave a most favorable impression here, it is said. The good characterizations and comedy parts provided by Avery Hopwood will give every principal in the company an unusual opportunity to score. The plot is an intriguing one, with a rapid-fire shift of situations such as Hopwood indulges in. The story will not be taken up in detail, suffice to say it contains many surprises besides its outstanding quality of humor.

A number of musical hits will be included and several startling specialties are promised, among them the Charleston dance by Bertha Mueller, champion Charlestoner of Florida, who has won no less than 26 cups in contests held in Florida during the past year.

Tudor Theater.

Coming to the Tudor on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week is a mighty drama of the northwoods, "Hearts and Fists," the story of a young man, reared in wealth, who traveled the world for sport, but was rushed back to save the business his father had left him, and fights his way through to victory in a way that is spine tingling and full of thrills.

In the cast are John Bowers, Alan Hale and Marguerite De La Motte.

Life in the far north, where the only law is that of might, where men fight for love of it and for life itself, is shown with remarkable clearness in the picture.

Atlantans are assured of excellent entertainment on the local stages this week, wherever they may turn. The scene on the extreme left (don't be afraid, he didn't hurt her!) is taken from "The Demi-Virgin" which is offered by the Don Lanning players at the Forsyth theater. The young lady with the fan is the star of the team of Cardiff and Wales, which features the stage at Loew's Grand this week. Arthur Burckley, with the Municipal Light Opera association which offers "Katinka" this week, is shown next. The group scene just below is from "Southern Memories," a Publix theater stage attraction at the Howard theater.

Cameo Theater.

Being brought back by the Cameo on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week is one of the biggest pictures of the past several years, a remarkable panorama of the rise of the masses in a mighty upheaval in Russia, made by the master showman, Cecil B. DeMille, and titled "The Volga Boatman." The picture is the story of Russia, and of the aristocrats who were overthrown, and of one man who was ordered to shoot a woman he thought he hated, but learned to love, a picture surcharged with drama, with a beautiful romance, and boasting of one of the most powerful stories ever written. In the cast are William Boyd and Elinor Faire, besides supporting players of screen notability.

On Monday and Tuesday the Cameo brings back the inimitable Adolphe Menjou in one of his most delightful pictures, "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," the delightful comedy drama of the sportsman who turned waiter to win the hand of a beautiful woman, going in and out of merry adventures until the picture is a bunch of giggles and laughter. Playing opposite Adolphe Menjou is the loveliest woman on the screen, Florence Vidor.

And on Saturday comes one of the most delightfully peppey comedies the screen has ever witnessed, Johnny Hines in "The Early Bird." This picture is a whirlwind of speedy comedy, boasting a number of thrills, and the record of being a knockout comedy laugh provoker.

"Subway Sadie," directed by Alfred Santell for Al Rockett's First National production unit, will be ready for previewing shortly. It is now in final stages of editing and titling at First National's New York studios, where it was filmed. Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall and Charlie Murray have the featured roles, with Peggy Shaw, Gaston Glass and Bernard Randall in the supporting cast.

Ray Rockett's next production for First National will be the screen version of the successful play, "Not Herbert," which was written by Howard Irving Young. It will be a Ben Lyon feature vehicle. Howard Higgin, who has turned out many First National successes, will direct. Production is slated to start about August 15.

John Philip Kolb, who was a truck driver in New York until a year ago, when First National started him on his film career, left for California last week with a long-term contract from First National in his pocket.

Alamo No. 2.

"Souls for Sables," a Tiffany production, suggested from "Garlan & Co.," by David Graham Phillips, is the feature picture at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday this week, with the beautiful Claire Windsor in the leading feminine role and Eugene O'Brien filling the principal male role. The production is a lavish screen presentation with a dazzling array of feminine finery that fairly staggers the eye.

In brief, the plot of the story tells of how a young and beautiful girl, used to the luxuries of life, loves and marries a poor, but ambitiouus young business man. While building up his business, he neglects his wife, who turns to others for her entertainment.

The events leading up to the final reconciliation are dramatically portrayed.

For Thursday, Lon Chaney in "The Next Corner," will be shown. Friday and Saturday Betty Blyth as the 1926 Queen of Sheba in "Folly of Vanity" will hold the screen.

Truck Driver Turns Actor.

Last week was the second red letter week in the life of John Philip Kolb, former New York truck driver, who made his debut in films in First National's "The Knockout" a year ago.

Kolb's rise has been a remarkable one. He had never appeared before the camera in his life until he was picked for his huge bulk for one of the big roles in "The Knockout." He made good with a bang and was next placed in the cast of "Men of Steel." This was followed by a part in "The Savage." Then he turned to a comedy role in "Mismates."

This week saw the start at First National's New York studios of "The Charleston Kid," another picture featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall. It is the screen version of Gerald Beaumont's story, "Even Stephen," and has in addition to Miss Mackaill and Mulhall, Louise Brooks and William Collier, Jr., in the cast. Alfred Santell is directing the production for Al Rockett's First National unit.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall are at First National's New York studios playing the featured roles in "Even Stephen," an adaptation of Gerald Beaumont's story of the same title, which Alfred Santell is directing for an Al Rockett unit of this company.

Palace Theater.

In celebration of the second anniversary of the popular Palace theater in Inman Park, Manager Alpha Fowler has succeeded in booking four really big film attractions for the enjoyment of Palace patrons this week.

On Monday and Tuesday Richard Dix will appear in "The Vanishing American," a story of the latter day Indians and their struggle for existance in the face of white domination. Dix, as the young chief in college and on the battlefield of France, is an heroic figure whose acting thrills and fascinates.

For Wednesday only, Aileen Pringle will charm Palace audiences in "Soul Mates," a story of dramatic action and the intense, romantic love for which Elinor Glyn is so famous. Miss Pringle is in her ideal element in the leading role of this play and carries off a difficult piece of emotional acting to perfection.

Thursday and Friday will see "Red Dice" on the Palace screen. This thrilling picture of a young man's gamble with death is one of the most unique productions ever offered on the silver sheet. Racing through gripping situations, the action of this play fairly sweeps audiences along, mystifying, thrilling and holding spellbound the most blase with its intense interest.

Saturday "The Golden Princess," another screen adaptation of a popular book will close the week of the Palace's second year of highly successful operation under the management of Mr. Fowler. It is planned to show in addition to the screen attractions a series of stage surprises during the whole of this jubilee week.

Ray Rockett's first production for First National since he was signed by this company as a producer is now in the cutting room at this company's New York studios being edited and titled. It is "Paradise," the screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's novel of the same title. The picture will be ready for its first preview in about two weeks. Milton Sills, Betty Bronson, Noah Beery, Kate Price, Charlie Murray, Lloyd Whitlock, Claude King, Ashley Cooper and Charles Brooke comprise the unusual cast which this picture boasts.

Peter B. Kyne will be well represented among the authors whose works will be pictured by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. For, according to Irving G. Thalberg, associate executive, M-G-M has purchased Mr. Kyne's "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Big Tim Meagher," "Little Casino," and "A Desert Odyssey."

Fred Raymond, Jr., Stars Last Comedy With Lanning Here

Fred Raymond, Jr., popular member of the Don Lanning company at the Forsyth, will this week be seen in a role that he created in New York when "The Demi-Virgin," this week's offering, made its initial appearance in the metropolis. At that time Mr. Raymond was selected to play the leading male part, opposite Hazel Dawn, who later became a favorite in the movies. His work in the part received great commendation at the hands of reviewers.

It is an unusual event in stock company programs and local audiences may consider themselves fortunate in being able to see at popular prices the actor in the same part that made him a Broadway star.

Several other unusual features will be given in the play this week, which is to be the last offering of the Forsyth Players before the beginning of their season in Virginia. Among them will be a Charleston by the champion of Florida, Miss Bertha Mueller, a native of Atlanta.

Miss Mueller has won no less than 26 cups in Charleston competitions staged in the state of Florida during the past year. There is now no question as to her right to the title of champion of that state, it is said, following her success in several of the biggest events of that kind. She was a participant in the famous marathon Charleston contest staged in Miami which was interrupted by the police after more than 12 hours of continuous dancing. The police objected to the affair on the grounds that it might injure the health of the participants but Miss Mueller declared that she felt fine and could have continued much longer.

She will be seen in a dazzling specialty this week and will give an exhibition of the dancing talent that has placed her in her unique position among Charleston exponents.

Muriel-Fisher Revue Heads Big Program At Loew's Theater

Comedy Is Predominant in Remaining Acts On Bill.

Filled with tuneful musical numbers and extraordinary dances the Muriel and Fisher revue in "Our Own Night Club" will appear as the headline attraction on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater this week. There are five men and three girls in the act and it is built along original lines.

In "Our Own Night Club" is some excellent burlesque and lots of comedy as well as dancing. The numbers have been created with original action in view and as a result the entire act is entirely different from other revues from start to finish.

In addition to the stars in the Muriel and Fisher revue there are such notable entertainers in the cast as Joe and Frank Reno, Lou Sher, Leslie Capen, Cleo Pergain and Patti Marshall. Some beautiful scenic effects are produced in the act.

Another strong number on the new bill will be Harry Cardiff and Mary Wales in "Travesties of Famous Plays," by Johnny Hyman and Hubert Warren. In this act some delicious comedy and real acting is offered.

Dan Jarrett and Jean Dalrymple will appear in an appealing little comedy sketch full of pathos interspersed with laughs, entitled "Just a Pal." This also contains some fine acting.

Arthur and Lydia Wilson, two excellent singers, will present their new song program entitled "Harmonizing Honeymoon." They also offer some comedy numbers. The opening number on the new bill will be the Three Silvers, America's Banner Athletes, in acrobatics and balancing.

Oscard Production, 'Southern Memories,' Features Howard Stage

The Publix stage presentation, "Southern Memories," which opens a week's engagement at the Howard theater tomorrow is the first revue in the Publix series to be produced by Paul Oscard. Although Mr. Oscard's work as a producer is comparatively unknown outside of New York, he has been a conspicuous figure for some time in the metropolis, having been associated with the Rivoli and Rialto theaters for four or five years as a producer of stage specialties.

"Southern Memories," while it presents the old-time scenes of the south, does so in an altogether unique manner. The act is presented in three scenes, the first being an old-fashioned drawing room where old-fashioned songs are sung and old-fashioned dances are danced. Then comes a brief interlude in which two whirlwind banjo players, Ban-Joe and Dave Wallace, are introduced. The final scene has a plantation background with the entire company offering a medley of southern melodies and a remarkably executed series of dances. In the entire company only one person appears in blackface, although some marvelous lighting effects make it appear that all have been treated to an application of burnt cork.

Among others who appear in this snappy mirth and melody melange are Vivien Holt, Naomi Pitta, Robert Roberts and Olaf Olson, who comprise the excellent vocal quartet, and Roy Loomis and Tom and Jerry Bell, dancers extraordinary. The costumes and settings are the work of Hermann Rosse and the musical numbers were arranged by Nathaniel Finston.

Ten Commandments Is Movie Feature For Lakewood Park

Screen Epic Starts Tuesday. Ralph Rader Sings Sunday.

With the "Ten Commandments," sensational story of Bible adventure and modern intrigue as the Lakewood Park motion picture feature for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the Southeastern Fair association opens the fourteenth week of the Lakewood season today with an unusually attractive concert program and a number of other special events scheduled for the following days.

The band and vocal concert at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon will present Ralph Rader, world famous evangelistic singer, in addition to the Royal Purple Elks' band and Miss Jessie Reese Calvert, soprano. Admission to the park and the grandstand for the concert is free and ample parking space for automobiles is also provided free.

The weekly children's matinee Wednesday afternoon from 1 to 6 o'clock, when all children under 16 years of age are admitted to all park amusements for a nickel, will be featured by a series of foot races and a "Ten Commandments" contest to pick the Atlanta boy or girl who knows the Ten Commandments best. A committee of ministers will quiz the contestants, each one retiring from the contest upon missing a question. The contest will be held in the airdome of the park.

The motion picture feature for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday is the original and authentic Cecil B. DeMille photodrama, opening in the time of Moses and carrying its audience through the colorful, spectacular and thrilling scenes of Bible times. The exodus from Egypt, the destruction of the Egyptian armies in the Red sea, when towering walls of water are seen actually to close in on thousands of soldiers and dashing chariots, the licentious worship of the golden calf in the wilderness, the giving of the Ten Commandments on the mountain and a dozen other episodes are among the most startling scenes ever flashed on a motion picture screen.

Dancing in the casino, with free admission to spectators, begins on week day nights at 8 o'clock. The park opens at noon daily, the rides and shows continuing in operation from 1 to 11 o'clock. Admission to the park and use of picnic groves, tables, ice water, etc., is free to the public. Reservation of grounds for large picnic parties can be made by telephoning Main 1870.

Louise Brooks and William Collier, Jr., are at First National's New York studios, where they are playing the second leads in "Even Stephen," which Alfred Santell is directing for Al Rockett's unit of First National.

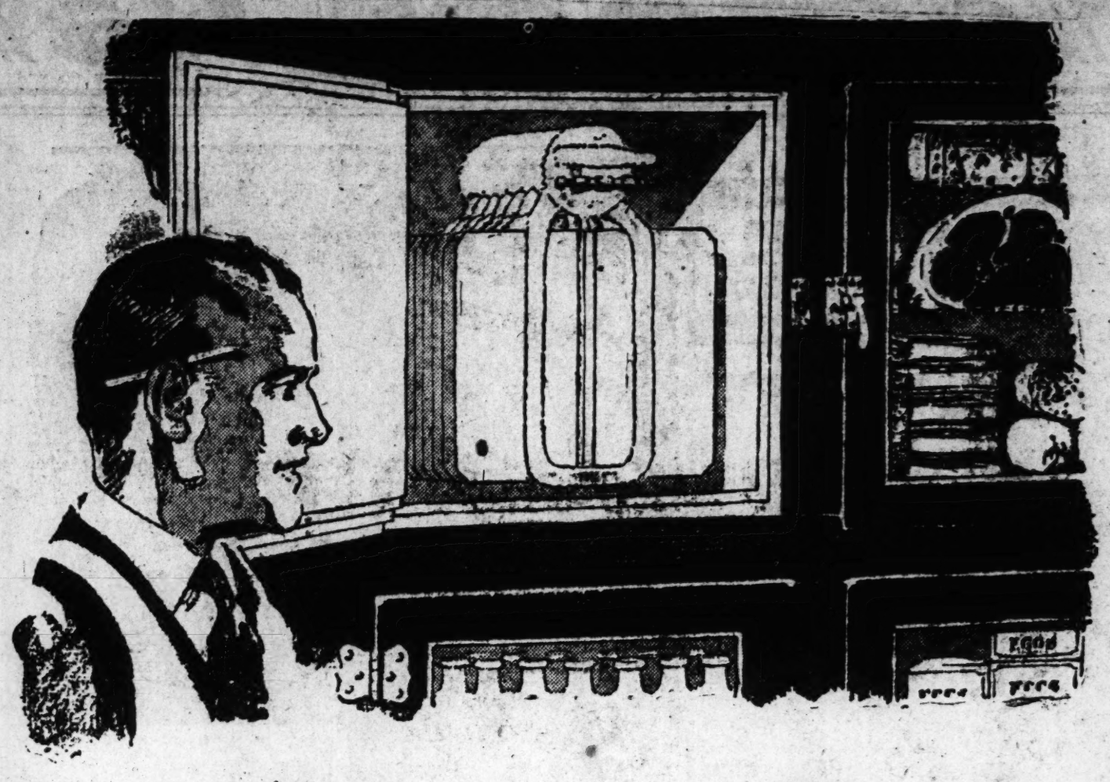

Milton Sills has completed his role in Ray Rockett's first production for First National, the film version of Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "Paradise," and is now in California.

Make Your Ice Box a Frigidaire

An open talk to all salesmen of the Georgia Railway and Power Company

The following is part of a talk by Mr. Arkwright with the salesmen of the Company at the opening of the campaign to place Frigidaires in homes of 500 of our customers.

WE are now in the midst of a campaign to give our customers the benefit of electric refrigeration, by placing Frigidaires in their homes.

Remember this one important fact—There is nothing as valuable to the buyer of goods as the knowledge that the seller is responsible and that he stands unswervingly behind his commodities and his service and makes them good.

Frigidaire Electric Refrigeration, for domestic use, has passed out of the experimental stage. Its makers are behind it; it is unconditionally guaranteed by Delco Light Company, a subsidiary of General Motors. The Georgia Railway and Power Company is behind it. We believe in it. If we did not believe in it, we would not put it on sale. If we were not willing to stand solidly back of it and the service it renders, we would not ask you to go out and sell it.

We couldn't afford to misrepresent facts if we wanted to, for we are in business permanently. We expect to be here always, and that means we are going to live with our customers forever. We are never going to offer them anything we haven't investigated fully or anything that hasn't our utmost faith.

Let your customer know exactly what you mean when you say you stand behind Frigidaire, which is that if anything goes wrong with his Frigidaire we will make it good, or take Frigidaire out of his home and give him a new one. If he doesn't want another, we will give him his money back.

Explain to your customer that he need not know anything about machinery to operate Frigidaire. When it needs servicing, all he has to do is call WAlnut 6121—and in a reasonable time someone will be out to make the necessary adjustments. Don't make the mistake of insisting that nothing will ever get out of order, however, for no machinery is infallible—although Frigidaire approaches perfection.

You will find that some of our customers have ice boxes in which a Frigidaire Electric Refrigeration unit can be installed—giving them this exceptional household service at surprisingly little cost. In such cases, never try to sell a new ice box if the old one will do. Never try to get more from a customer than he needs to pay.

Remember this—

That while you represent the company, you also represent the customer, and never try to sell him anything that is not to his advantage.

You know all about Frigidaire. You know its manifold advantages and you know what it costs to operate it. Explain these things fully; give your customer all the facts.

You ought to be able to sell many Frigidaires, for it is to the advantage of hundreds of our customers to have electric refrigeration in their homes.

You also have the benefit of easy terms—$10 down and the balance in 24 months, until the 500 allotted us for this particular offer are sold.

Your backing is solid, your product is good—step out and put a Frigidaire in every home that really needs it.

Mrs. John Raine was hostess at a small party.

Group of Attractive Fall Brides-Elect

At the upper left is photograph by Miss Nell Brawner, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Newton Brawner, whose engagement is announced today to David Evans Miller, the marriage to be solemnized in September. The photograph at the upper right shows Miss Ruth Rockefeller Weller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Weller, of Brooklyn and Goshen, N. Y., whose engagement has been announced to Mathew Henderson Elder, of Miami, Fla., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Elder, of this city. Lower row, from left to right, Miss Eunice Bothwell Collier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rawson Collier, who will wed Charles Bryan Daniel in September, while the other photograph is of Miss Elizabeth Ripple, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Nelson, of Kansas City, Mo., whose engagement to Edward F. Danforth, of Atlanta, is of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends. Photographs of Miss Brawner and Miss Collier are by Winn's studio.

Brawner-Miller Engagement Is of Wide Social Interest

Social prominence is attached to the announcement made today by Dr. and Mrs. James Newton Brawner of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nell Brawner to David Evans Miller.

The bride-elect is a popular member of the younger social contingent and has been an admired belle in a number of southern cities where she has visited. She received her education at Washington seminary and at Gunston hall in Washington, D. C. She was a member of the Pi Pi sorority and of the Tech club while at the seminary, and upon her graduation was honored as a member of the senior round table and was elected May queen for that year. She has acted as sponsor for Marist and Tech games and was a frequent and popular visitor to University of Georgia house parties.

Her father, Dr. James N. Brawner, is a well known Atlanta physician. He is a son of James Middleton Brawner and Emma Buchanan Brawner, early settlers in Harris county, Georgia, moving later to Troup county.

Mother's Family.

Mrs. Brawner has been an enthusiastic worker in Parent-Teacher circles since the beginning of that organization in Atlanta, having served as president of local associations and of county councils. She was one of the organizers and first president of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Medical Association of Georgia. She is the daughter of the late Charles Edward Barksdale, who for many years was connected with the Maddox-Rucker banking company, and of Cynthia Murphy Barksdale.

On the maternal side Miss Brawner is descended from the Barksdales, of Virginia. Her great grandparents were the Rev. Edward Jasper Barksdale, and Evelyn Patterson Barksdale, who were among the first settlers of Henry and Clayton counties, Georgia. Among other ancestors were Mark Murphy, who married Lady Elizabeth Byrd, of Virginina; Joseph Jesse Lasseter and Sophie McClendon, daughter of Major Thomas McClendon, of revolutionary fame and sister of Major Joseph McClendon; James Hanes, of Delaware, who was granted land in Georgia by the crown for services rendered during the revolutionary war and his wife, Elizabeth Callaway Hanes.

Mr. Miller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Evans Miller. His father is southeastern manager of the Cunard Steamship company. On the paternal side he is a descendant of the Miller family of Tennessee, which has had many famous doctors and surgeons. His grandfather was James Severe Miller, being named after his ancestor, Governor John Severe, Tennessee's first governor. His paternal grandmother, Mary Elliott Evans, of the famous Evans family of Virginia, was the daughter of David Evans, one of the first settlers of Caroline county, Virginia.

His mother was Genevieve Goldsmith. On the maternal side he is related to the Goldsmith, Wickliff and Stokes families, of South Carolina. His grandfather is James M. Goldsmith, who has been at the courthouse for many years. His grandmother was Ann Ellen Dent, whose father, W. B. W. Dent, was twice congressman from Georgia.

Mr. Miller is a member of the Delta Phi Sigma fraternity of Marist college, from which he graduated. He attended the University of Georgia and is a member of the Sigma Chi and Alpha Kappa Psi fraternities.

He belongs to the Atlanta Athletic club and is associated with the Retail Credit company.

Miss Hannah Sterne Honors Miss Johnson.

Miss Hannah Sterne was hostess at an informal afternoon tea at the home of her mother, Mrs. A. H. Sterne, on Westminster drive, Saturday at 5 o'clock as a compliment to Miss Sue Johnson, of Lynchburg, Va., the guest of Miss Caroline Paullin.

The home was artistically decorated with summer flowers, and the tea table was beautifully appointed.

Mrs. Sterne and Miss Sue Brown Sterne assisted in entertaining the guests, who numbered 20.

Miss Sue Johnson Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman was hostess at a luncheon party Saturday at the Piedmont Driving club, the occasion honoring Miss Carolyn Paullin and her guest, Miss Sue Johnson, of Lynchburg, Va.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Edgar Paullin. Covers were placed for a few close friends of the young honor guest.

Ripple-Danforth Marriage Takes Place in Early Fall

Cordial social interest centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Warren Nelson, of Kansas City, Mo., of the engagement of their niece, Miss Elizabeth Ripple, to Edward F. Danforth, of Atlanta, the marriage to take place early in the fall.

The charming bride-elect, who is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Ellsworth Ripple, was graduated from the Columbus School of Music in Chicago, and has served as supervisor of music in schools in Calumet, Mich., and Jacksonville, Fla. She is a gifted and brilliant musician and was director of music in the Atlanta Normal Training school, and associate instructor in Bass Junior High.

Miss Ripple has been intructor in music at the North Carolina College for Women in Greensboro, N. C., during the summer, her musicianship being an outstanding accomplishment. Outside of being very talented, she possesses an engaging personality, and her beauty is of the brunette type, combining soft brown eyes and waving bobbed hair with an exquisite complexion.

Mr. Danforth is prominently known as the sports editor of The Atlanta Georgian, with which newspaper he has been connected before and following the world war, in which he served with distinction overseas in the United States navy, having been detailed with the Queenstown destroyer division. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Danforth, who reside at 346 William Mill road, having moved to Atlanta several years ago from Hopkinsville, Ky., where their families are influential and prominent in social and business circles. Before coming to Atlanta for residence Mr. Danforth was connected with newspapers in Kentucky, establishing a brilliant record as a sport writer in his native state.

Miss Gradwohl Is Feted Guest.

Miss Louise Gradwohl, Allentown, Pa., guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Kline, at the Biltmore apartments continues to be feted at a number of delightful parties.

On Saturday afternoon Garland Walraven was host at a party at the Biltmore tea-dance in compliment to Miss Gradwohl. The guests included Miss Idolene Lewman, Lansing Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Kline and Mr. Walraven.

Mrs. Kline will be hostess at a swimming party followed by a luncheon Wednesday at the new Athletic club in honor of her niece. Invited for this occasion are Misses Idolene Lewman, Mary Harvey, Florence Tucker, Miss Oda T. Sperl, Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon, Mrs. Walter Brunmark, Mrs. Paul Franke and Mrs. John E. Smith.

Other parties are being planned for Miss Gradwohl, the dates to be announced later.

Opera Company Will Present "Katinka"

"Katinka," the delightful musical comedy presented by the Municipal Light Opera company at the Atlanta theater this week, is an intriguing little operetta filled with color and tuneful music.

A Russian and Turkish atmosphere gives just the impetus that carries this sprightly little opera through a maze of subterfuges and conspiracies. Written by Rudolf Friml, composer of "The Vagabond King" and "Firefly," "Katinka offers a number of delightful phases. Besides the many lovely airs that run through the entire opera, there will be the spirited ballet to give added charm and beauty. And in "Katinka," as perhaps never before, will the efficient and well trained ballet have an opportunity to show its real skill and grace.

Then, too, there are the bright and colorfufl costumes of the Russian pheasants and the subtle lavishness of the Turkish harem that entwine most fascinatingly with the intrigue and comedy in this animated little operetta. Especially quaint and lovely will be the Russian wedding scene assembling the peasants in their artistic costumes and ornate head dresses.

The play wends its way through a network of plots and counter plots, and, amazing complicationst arise out of the loves and schemes of the fine principal characters.

Charming little Vera Myers will be cast in the title role, "Katinka," the bride of "Boris," a Russian ambassador, played by Louis Templeman.

Lou Powers—whose reappearance this week will bring enthusiastic applause—will take the part of Thaddeus, a wealthy American tourist, who by chance falls into a Turkish harem, Ann Yago, as Helen Hooper, his wife, will again be shown in one of her amusing comedy roles.

Mary Leila Patterson will take the part of "Olga," the wife of "Boris," and Arthur Burkley will appear as the sweetheart of "Katinka."

So with the litling and sparkling arias afforded by this opera, the mysterious intricacies that range throughout the play, the artistic settings, the gorgeous colorings and the exhibition dances of the ballet, the opinion of Lou Morton, stage producer, that "Katinka will be one of the most beautiful productions of the season" can be relied upon.

Popular Atlantans At Tate Springs.

Tate Springs, Tenn., July 24.—(Special.)—Outdoor sports of all sorts and social gaieties as well are now reaching a new peak of popularity at Tate Springs hotel, especially with the recent addition of Miss Isobel Hunter and Mrs. Ernest Stacy Hill, both formerly of Atlanta, to the staff of this resort.

Miss Hunter is one of the best known horsewomen in the south, having successfully entered many of the most important shows during recent years. She also is an expert swimmer and it is planned to have her divide her time between assisting Roy McCray, Kentucky horseman in charge of the Tate stables, and in instructing women and children in swimming at the picturesque new swimming pool.

Mrs. Hill is also a horsewoman of note and has for years been a popular figure in social life of the southeast and east. Mrs. Hill has until recently been prominently associated with the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, in Atlanta, where she supervised arrangements and entertainment for the many social events of importance staged at this large southern hostelry.

Mrs. D. W. Brown Hostess to Book Club of Hapeville

Mrs. D. W. Brown was the charming hostess at a meeting of the Hapeville Book club, on Friday afternoon, at her home on Stewart avenue. The reception room, where the guests assembled, was tastily decorated in gold and green as the color scheme. A beautiful variety of sunflowers, ferns and other pot plants were used in profusion throughout the home.

The dining room was transformed into a zoo—with placards of a mere suggestion of a number of animals. Cards were numbered for a "zoo contest," the guessing of animals creating much gayety among the guests. During the game, red lemonade was served and popcorn and peanuts in dainty yellow baskets were given as favors.

The first prize, a lovely gold and black flower bowl, was won by Mrs. L. T. Carter. As consolation prize, a miniature elephant paper weight was awarded Mrs. T. P. Reddick.

A pleasant hour was spent in discussion of books, and an exchange of books for new numbers was made among the numbers. Mrs. J. M. Burks presided.

After the book hour, the club enjoyed two very interesting readings, "Johnny's Complaint" and "Soap," presented by Miss Lena Beth Brown.

Tea was served at 6 o'clock. Miss Lena Beth Brown, daughter of the hostess, and her niece, Miss Ella Pearl Pinson, assisted in serving.

Those present were Mrs. Jere A. Wells, Mrs. E. M. King, Mrs. L. T. Carter, Mrs. E. L. Greene, Mrs. J. M. Burks, Mrs. T. P. Reddick, Mrs. W. J. Gower, Mrs. D. W. Brown, Miss Elena Wells, Miss Ella Pearle Pinson, Mrs. Lena Beth Brown and Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy.

Five and Twenty Club Entertained.

The meeting of the Five and Twenty club was held at the home of Miss Marguerite Meiere July 22.

Bunsiness was transacted in the usual order, the most important feature of the evening being the initiation of three new members. Miss Mattie Ruth Stone, Charles Thrash and Henry Brown.

The interesting game of bunco was played. The prize for the highest score was presented to Bill England; the consolation went to Charles Thrash.

The members present were Miss Marguerite Meiere, Miss Helen Traber, Miss Evie Mae Cagle, Miss Marjorie Hogan, Miss Louise Chesnutt, Miss Mattie Ruth Stone, Miss Ruth Will, Bill England, John Chilton, Hubert Wood, Dan Hopkins, Henry Brown and Charles Thrash.

Cole, of Miami; Miss Frances Brown, who has recently returned from a cruise to the Orient; Mrs. Howard Motley, of New York; Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. Clarence F. Coppedge and Mrs. John W. Yopp.

Mrs. Hardwick Honors Visitors.

A pretty social event of Saturday was the tea at which Mrs. M. W. Hardwick entertained at her home on Gordon street, the occasion complimenting Mrs. James Gilbert Sherrer, of Charleston, S. C., and Mrs. J. M. Markley, of Miami, Fla., who are her guests for several weeks.

Miss Eunice Collier To Wed Charles B. Daniel in September

Centering the interest of society is the announcement made today by Mr and Mrs. Rawson Collier of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eunice Bothwell Collier to Charles Bryan Daniel, the marriage to be solemnized in September.

Miss Collier is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Collier. She was educated at North Avenue Presbyterian school, Washington seminary and St. Mary's school at Raleigh, N. C., and for several years made her home in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., during her parents' residence there. She is a member of the Atlanta Junior league and her sisters are Miss Susan Collier and Miss Nancy Collier. Her paternal grandfather, the late Charles A. Collier, was mayor of Atlanta, president of the Cotton States International exposition, and prominent in the civic and social life of the community. Her grandmother as Miss Susie Rawson, was a belle and beauty, and her great-grandparents, the late Judge and Mrs. John Collier and the late Mr. and Mrs. William Rawson, were among Atlanta's pioneer citizens. Her father, Rawson Collier, is well known in business and engineering circles, and her mother, formerly Miss Mirick of Worcester, Mass., is a member of old and distinguished New England families.

Miss Collier's aunts are Mrs. Julian Harris, of Columbus; Mrs. Robert Davis, of Atlanta, Mrs. Henry Stanton and Mrs. Hubbard Keenan, of Chicago, and her uncles are Charles Collier, of Atlanta, and John Collier, of California.

Mr. Daniel is the younger son of Mr. Daniel and the late Mrs. L. J. Daniel, and a brother of L. C. Daniel. He was educated in Atlanta schools and attended Riverside Military academy at Gainesville before entering business with his father in the firm of Daniel Brothers company, of which he is now junior member. His father, L. J. Daniel is among the prominent business men of Atlanta, having established in 1888 the firm which bears his name. He is also identified with many of Atlanta commercial and real estate enterprises. Mr. Daniel is the nephew of Charles Daniel, of New York, who was long connected with Atlanta newspapers and now holds an important position in the same field there.

Miss Lowe Weds Mr. Gregory At Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Lowe and Toy Rhea Gregory was solemnized Saturday at a high noon ceremony at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, the occasion characterized by beautiful simplicity and dignity. The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Daniel performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, while Mrs. S. B. Johnson sang several appropriate selections prior to the marriage service, accompanied at the organ by Mr. Diekman, the church organist.

The bridal party descended the center aisle of the church to the altar where lovely floral decorations formed a beautiful background for the pretty scene. A mass of palms, ferns, smilax and foliage plants banked the back of the pulpit, while floor baskets of ascension lilies were place at intervals alternating with brass cathedral candelabras holding burning white tapers.

Wedding Attendants.

First to enter were the bridesmaids, including Misses Latrelle Smaw, Minetta Sharp, Eleanor and Maude Gay. They were accompanied by the groomsmen, Thurlow Gregory, William Lowe, Bob Whitaker and Dr. Irvin Willingham. The bridesmaids wore tailored gowns of flesh-colored crepe, self-trimmed, and wore large hats of pink velour trimmed with grosgrain ribbons to match. Their arm bouquets were fashioned of pastel-shaded flowers tied with pink tissue ribbons. Flesh-colored kid slippers and hose to match completed the effective costumes.

Miss Anna Harriet Shewmake, who was the maid of honor, entered alone, wearing a gown of delicate pink chiffon fashioned along the same lines as those of the bridesmaids. She wore a large picture hat of pink felt trimmed with grosgrain ribbon to match and carried a shower bouquet of vari-colored flowers and valley lilies. Little Miss Jane Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith, of Charlotte, N. C., and little Miss Ann Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Colquitt Howard, of Moline, Ill., were the flower girls. They wore dainty frocks of pink and blue chiffon and carried small baskets of yellow rosebuds. They entered with Master Bobbie Martin and Master Willis Mozley, Jr., who were junior attendants. They wore smart white satin suits with chiffon blouses of shell pink chiffon.

The ring-bearer, Master Barnes Sale, Jr., preceded the bride, wearing a white satin suit and carrying the ring in the heart of a large lily.

Lovely Bride.

The lovely young bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, William C. Lowe, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the groom and his brother, Ned Gregory, who acted as best man. The bride wore an attractive two-piece costume of navy blue charmeen with an overblouse of rose-colored taffeta, and her hat was a becoming small model of rose and blue felt. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. Gregory and his bride left for a motor trip through North Carolina. They will be at home after September 1, in Lancaster, S. C., where the groom is prominently identified in social and business circles.

Mrs. William C. Lowe, the bride's mother, wore a handsome costume of French blue crepe with a gray neapolitan straw hat trimmed in blue ribbons. Her shoulder bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. William Thurlow Gregory, of Lancaster, S. C., the groom's mother, was gowned in powder blue crepe and she wore a striking hat of black lace and straw. Her shoulder bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busbee, of Aiken, S. C.; Mrs. Jack Smith, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Frank Harper and Mrs. William Thurlow Gregory, of Lancaster, S. C.; Ned Gregory, of Greenville, S. C., and Thurlow Gregory, of Lancaster, S. C.

Piedmont Avenue Sidewalks Denote Good Housekeeping

By Bessie S. Stafford.

THE opening paragraph of Sunday's comment asks the reason why all Atlanta housekeepers do not have the sidewalks swept in front of their homes?

This subject, by no means introduced with the idea of leading up to a controversy, nor is it intended as a lecture as some may be inclined to take it, is being dwelt upon as a very naturally proposed measure, and asked of every home maker who constitutes a vital part of the foundation upon which this progressive city is builded.

Breakfast had been served Saturday morning, and traffic moved out of the north on Piedmont avenue, headed towards the center of town. The regular routine of the day had begun to function in homes bordering both sides of this fashionable boulevard with its background of long-time, aristocratic residents of Atlanta.

Before almost every private doorway a butler or maid swept the sidewalk spick and span, leaving in direct contrast, the untidy one next door, attracting comparison. Nearly every housekeeper in this particular district belongs to a generation taught to include in the requirements conducive upon engaging a butler or maid, that this duty belongs to the first order of the day.

So reminiscent was the sight of an earlier period that, despite the live, progressive atmosphere of the model street, one almost expected to see a carriage and pair prance down the thoroughfare with a crinolined mistress bent on her day's marketing.

That, dear reader, is why the residential part of the street demonstrates that the real motive power behind the clean pavements lies in the requirements of the housekeeper.

Approaching Mrs. Ira Farmer, who belongs to the old-fashioned regime, and questioning her upon this responsibility relative to the appearance of the walk in front of her home she stated that, "The housekeeper is responsible for the physical appearance, comfort and operation of her household, therefore her authority is absolute, and properly so. Only by personal supervision can she secure this, even with trained servants, and the average servant of today cannot by any stretch of the imagination come within that category. Sometimes, through fear of losing a servant, who rebels at some required task, the housekeeper will compromise. Personally, though supposedly being unusually dependent upon my maid, because I am a business woman, I expect any order of mine governing my home to receive unquestioning obedience, and my servant realizes any failure to render this service means instant confusion to me. That it is mutually satisfactory is proven in that I have had only one maid during my residence in Atlanta."

The other side of the picture presents the younger generation as the housekeeper of 1926, from another angle. As a rule, the bride returns from her wedding journey and begins to housekeep in a modern apartment house, wherein keeping the sidewalk is quite naturally no responsibility of hers. This feature depends entirely upon the slant of the modern janitor's views about "cleanliness being next to godliness."

Doubtless, the bride of today, on becoming the owner of her home on the morrow, will not forget to give this important gesture her individual attention in regard to oiling the machinery of a well-governed home.

Or, is it perhaps true, that neatness and order, carried even to the sidewalks, belong to one age more than another? May it not be characteristic of certain individuals to create order out of chaos, and ornament rather than desecrate their surroundings from a fundamental abhorrence of disorder.

Shall we say with Omar, "the hand of the potter shook," in modeling some souls to preserve the niceties of living, while in others the instinct was omitted. Or shall we say the meticulous methods of our grandmothers are dwindling to such an extent merely to observe a recurrence of the practice strikes one as being out of the ordinary?

At any rate, the subject furnishes food for thought and afternoon tea gatherings can be enlivened with sprightly debates, provided the mercury does not climb too high.

Visits Famous Spa.

MRS. JOHN L. PATTERSON and her daughter, Miss Margaret Newman Patterson, of Richmond, Va., whose affiliation with Atlanta arises from the fact that Mrs. Patterson, as Miss Margaret Newman, was one of the city's most beautiful belles, traveled to Greenbriar White Sulphur Springs last week in the private car of Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Hunton, Jr.

Their mode of conveyance to the famous southern spa contrasted greatly with the period when the cavalcades of carriages with mounted escort found their way through mountain passes and along uncertain roadways. In those days Warm Springs was the center of life in the Allegheny valley. The ancient place is indefinitely closed, and memory walks in the tangled garden behind the pillared hotel. But the famous pools are still in high favor with visitors at the Homestead, and gorgeous motor cars stand in the valley turnpike beside the ancient bath houses while fashionable owners bathe in the invigorating waters. Families of the Old South visited Greenbriar and carried their hoop-skirt finery in Saratoga trunks. These were the days of morning germans, and champagne parties on the lawns. Mint juleps in their perfection were made in the famous barroom of The Old White, reached by a spiral staircase. Some of the old houses of the neighborhood still have the powder closets of an earlier period, and the windowless chambers off the masters' bedrooms in which slept the personal servants. The romanticism of the time gave its name to Lover's Leap, one of the loveliest of the mountain walks in the vicinity, picturesque with the dark green of rhododendrons and fir trees, and many were the engagements announced at the end of each summer.

Favors Mrs. Napier.

ALTHOUGH Governor Walker and the charming first lady of the state, did not definitely signify how long they would be absent from Atlanta when boarding a western-bound train last week, their destination will be Cheyenne, Wyoming, where chief executives from every state will congregate for conferences.

Governor Nellie Ross, who officially welcomed these exalted dignitaries and their leading ladies, is no stranger to Georgia's governor and his wife. They made the best of a few precious moments when the train on which they were crossing the continent, stopped at Cheyenne en route to the good roads meeting in California last June, and Wyoming's feminine governor extended personal greetings to them.

Mrs. Ross closely resembles in physical appearance, Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, Bibb county's popular representative in the legislature. She wore a costume of black silk and her hat was trimmed with a touch of ermine, suggestive of the regal position Mrs. Ross holds in her native state.

Egg-Bread Sandwich Recipe.

PEOPLE in the north are quick to recognize the culinary art of the southern housekeeper, whose recipes are oftimes broadcast through the columns of metropolitan journals, tantalizing the palates of residents far above Mason and Dixon's line.

It remained for an humble egg-bread sandwich to tempt a northern visitor at "The Cricket," Miss Allie Joseph's tea room in Columbus, Ga., and write to the New York newspaper that she never hoped to eat such good dishes made by cooks, and prepared in kitchens of the southland.

"The Cricket" is the pride of Columbus citizens with its fresh creamy walls and tables blossoming daily with lovely flowers. The pretty waitresses wear uniforms, the green of the leaves of valley lilies trimmed with flowered cretonne.

The egg-bread sandwich calls for one quart milk, two cups water-ground meal, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon salt, two eggs.

Beat the eggs until light, boil the milk, add salt, then the meal slowly, stirring until perfectly smooth. Then add the other ingredients and stir well. Pour into a greased pan and brown. Cut in six-inch squares, split, butter and put creamed chicken between and on top, with plenty of gravy.

Colonel and Mrs. Paxon Entertain at Picnic.

Colonel and Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon entertained their respective Bible classes of the Second Baptist church at a large annual picnic at Lakewood park on Saturday evening. Colonel Paxon is teacher of the Business Woman's league of the church and Mrs. Paxon has charge of Bible class No. 2.

About a hundred young ladies and their friends enjoyed the hospitality of Colonel and Mrs. Paxon. The picnic was in the nature of an old-fashioned basket party. Iced watermelon and cold drinks were served through the evening.

Through the courtesy of Oscar Mills, secretary of the Southeastern fair, many of the rides at Lakewood were thrown open free to the party.

Monday Starts Rich's Mighty July Clearance!!!

$300,000 worth Seasonable Merchandise - Going at $150,000!

One Dollar Stretched to Two

SWIFT release of $300,000 worth of seasonable summer merchandise for $150,000! A sale which literally stretches one dollar to two! Such---in a nut-shell---is the mighty event staged at Rich's for the week of July 26. Why? Because we must free our stock of odd lots. Because manufacturers' clearances mean savings to us and we are thus enabled to pass on these savings. Because, in many instances, manufacturers have given us special price concessions for this sale. Because, in short, quick selling is our only consideration at the present time. ALL MERCHANDISE ON SALE MONDAY. BE PROMPT FOR FIRST CHOICE.

When Fall and Summer Meet

THE "wearing qualities" of our robust southern summer must be reckoned with. Well-known August dog days promise weeks of weather demanding sheer, cool fabrics. Summer wardrobes will do well to take on a new lease of life through goods which bear no last-rose-of-summer marks, goods which are fresh, seasonable, spick-and-span. They go at a sprightly pace because

Summer must Give Way to Fall

IN justice to two seasons, comes this remarkable offering of bargains. The suitably dressed woman who knows that summer is still with us, the provident woman who can pick safe styles for another season, and the early fall buyers must all have their innings. But it is autumn custom which must soon have right of way. SURPLUS STOCK MUST BE SOLD. SHELVES, RACKS, AND STOCK ROOMS MUST BE EMPTIED. To bring about a speedy clearance summer goods are rushed out in a sale of such dimensions that

Weller-Elder Engagement Interests Atlanta Society

Southern society shares cordial interest with an exclusive circle of friends in the east in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ruth Rockefeller Weller, of Brooklyn and Goshen, N. Y., to Matthew Henderson Elder, of Miami, Fla., formerly of Atlanta. The wedding will be an event of social prominence, taking place in New York in the winter and one in which Atlantans will be especially interested, owing to the popularity of the young groom-elect, who until two years ago made his home in this city.

Lovely Bride-Elect.

Miss Weller is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Weller, outstanding figures in the social, business and philanthropic life of New York state. She received her early education at Brooklyn Heights seminary, graduating from that institution and later attending the Knox school, at Cooperstown, N. Y. Since completing her education she has taken an active interest in New York's charities and benevolent societies, her power of initiative coupled with great personal magnetism, admirably fitting her for the work in which she has engaged herself.

The lovely young bride-elect has enjoyed the cultural advantages of extensive travel, both in this country and in Europe. With her parents she has been a popular member of the fashionable winter colony at Miami each season, spending the summer months at the handsome Weller home on the Hudson at Goshen, N. Y. Another interest claiming Miss Weller's time and attention is the society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which she is a junior member.

The groom-elect is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling James Elder, of Atlanta, and the brother of Miss Margaret Elder. He is the grandson of Mrs. Matthew Henderson Couch, of Senoia, and the late Mr. Couch, prominent pioneer citizen, whose name he bears, his mother having been before her marriage Miss Madge Couch, a belle and beauty of the state. His paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. William Elder. The Couch and Elder families have long been identified with southern progress, being recognized leaders in the social, civic and religious development of middle Georgia, where they formerly made their homes in Coweta county.

Mr. Elder is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Nolan, of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. George D. Pollock, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Dr. and Mrs. John Z. Lawshe, of Atlanta, and Mrs. P. B. Perkins, of Turin, Ga.

Marist Graduate.

Mr. Elder is a graduate of Marist college and also of the Georgia School of Technology, where he was a popular member of the Chi Phi fraternity. He has made an enviable place for himself in social and business circles since going to reside in Miami, where he is president of M. H. Elder and company, distributors of construction machinery. Following the wedding he and his bride will make their home in Coral Gables, Fla.

Miss Minnie Lasseter To Wed Mr. Goldsmith in September

Miss Minnie Olivia Lasseter, lovely daughter of Mrs. Jessie Albright Lasseter and the late David Lewis Lasseter, whose engagement is announced today to Manning Miles Goldsmith, the marriage to take place at St. Mark's church in September.

An engagement of wide social interest is that of Miss Minnie Olivia Lassetter and Manning Miles Goldsmith.

The lovely bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Jessie Albright Lassetter and the late David Lewis Lassetter. On her maternal side she descends from the old Albright family of South Carolina and later of Georgia. She is also a direct descendant of the well-known Holman and Hopson families of Alabama and Georgia. On her paternal side she descends from the widely-known Robinson family of Virginia and of the Lassetter family of Alabama and Georgia.

Mr. Goldsmith is the son of Manning Goldsmith and the late Mrs. Stella Miles Goldsmith.

On his maternal side his grandfather was H. H. Miles, from New York, and his grandmother was from the prominent Wilson family of Tennessee.

On his paternal side he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Goldsmith, who are pioneer citizens of Atlanta. Mr. Goldsmith was originally from South Carolina, while Mrs. Goldsmith is a member of the well-known Dent family of Georgia. He is a nephew of the late J. W. Goldsmith, who was a leader in real estate circles in Georgia; also a nephew of the late John Goldsmith, who was comptroller of the city of Atlanta. Mr. Goldsmith is a deputy clerk of the superior court of Fulton county.

The wedding will be a brilliant event of September 22 at the St. Mark's Methodist church.

Miss Sara Bokritsky To Wed Mr. Rosenblum In Chattanooga

Interest centers in the announcement of plans for the approaching marriage of Miss Sara Bokritsky and David Howard Rosenblum, of Butler, Pennsylvania.

The wedding ceremony will take place in Chattanooga, Tenn., in the silver ballroom of the newly built Road House hotel, Thursday, July 29. Rabbi Samuel R. Shillman will officiate.

The nuptial music will be rendered by Misses Karen and Hazel Rosenblum. The wedding march will be played by Harold Schwartz, nephew of the bride. Immediately after the ceremony, dinner will be served on the roof garden of the hotel.

Miss Perle Bokritsky, sister of the bride-elect, will be maid of honor, while Mrs. Carrie Bokritsky, the bride-elect's mother, will be her matron of honor.

Mr. Rosenblum will have as best man Dr. William Shapera, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The bride and groom will leave for an extended wedding trip, and will be at home in Butler, Pa., after September 1.

Applications For Scholarships Are Received at Club

Applications for scholarships through the Atlanta Woman's club are being received daily, according to the report of Mrs. G. T. Wilson, chairman of the scholarship committee, and it is gratifying to note the interest displayed in this particular division of the club work.

Mrs. Wilson stresses the importance of applying early for these scholarships, and of having references accompanying all letters of application, since schools open in September, and time is limited. Then, too, it is necessary for the committee to consider carefully each application on its merits, with a view of placing these young men and women in the schools best suited to their talents and future ambitions.

Of special interest this year is the new scholarship given by the Atlanta Beauty institute, on Peachtree street. This is a wonderful opportunity for some young woman who wishes to enter this well patronized and remunerative field. Thus, the club is prepared to offer education along practical as well as purely academic lines.

The following scholarships are still available to Georgia girls and boys exclusively: Woodberry Hall, University School for Boys, Marist college, Georgia Military academy, Mrs. Merill Hutchinson, Miss Nellie Sullivan, dancing; Miss Margaret Bryan, dancing, one boy and one girl scholarship; Miss Dorothy Waldman, pianist; Atlanta Beauty institute, Misses Van Hook, Washington seminary, Bryan-Hatton Business college, one girl and two boys; Mrs. Potter-Spiker.

Miss Nola Swords Is Honor Guest.

An interesting event of Saturday was the miscellaneous shower at which Miss Dana Maffett and Miss Cora Lillian Wilson entertained at the home of Mrs. D. M. Swords in Druid Hills in compliment to Miss Nola Swords, whose marriage to Roy Maurice Jones will be solemnized on August 24.

The house was attractively decorated with garden flowers. Miss Wilson and Miss Maffett were assisted by Mrs. D. M. Swords in entertaining.

Those invited were Miss Mabel Porterfield, Miss Marie Sillay, Miss Mary Maffett, Miss Adelaide Thomas, Miss Lucille McCoster, Miss Gwen Robertson, Miss Minnie Turner, Miss Gladys Tucker, Miss Gladys Swords, Miss Elizabeth Patterson, Miss Lina Parry, Miss Willie Swords, Miss Mary Patterson, Mrs. Eugene Ball, Mrs. W. H. Swords, Mrs. David E. Sudderth, Mrs. Claude Maffett and Mrs. J. H. Garrison.

Mary McLendon W.C.T.U. Holds Open Meeting.

The Mary McLendon W. C. T. U. held an open-air meeting Thursday at Grant park. After dinner a patriotic program, composed of tributes to the American flag, was presented by a group of children.

Miss Ann Johnson gave a reading, "My Flag and Yours," and little Miss Rose Hunter gave the salute and the pledge. Unusual oratorical talent was displayed by Fletcher Magbee in his splendid rendition of "Old Glory."

Congressman Upshaw and Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown, the guests of honor and speakers of the occasion, were then introduced by Mrs. Amelia Woodall. Rev. Morris, of Baltimore, also made a talk.

At the conclusion of the speaking an old-fashioned watermelon cutting was enjoyed.

Georgia Chapter, O. E. S., To Give Silver Tea.

Georgia Chapter No. 127, Order of the Eastern Star, will give a silver tea Monday evening, July 26, from 8 to 10 o'clock, in Oglethorpe Masonic Temple, 4 1-2 East Georgia avenue, corner of South Pryor street. A good program has been arranged and a prize is offered to the O. E. S. chapter having the largest representation. The public is cordially invited.

Mrs. Fred Johnson Honored At Hapeville Club Reception

A reception was given Thursday afternoon by the Hapeville Woman's club in honor of Mrs. Fred Johnson, newly-elected president. The auditorium was decorated with baskets of bright flowers and pot plants, which made a harmonious background for the lovely costumes of the guests. The little ladies in pastel-shaded frocks who served at the punch bowl completed the picture.

Receiving with Mrs. Johnson were the other incoming officers of the club, which included Mesdames G. W. Taylor, first vice president; R. L. Fulghum, second vice president; W. W. Bruce, recording secretary; G. L. Greene, corresponding secretary; L. T. Carter, treasurer; G. F. Hunnicutt, parliamentarian; Zack Adamson, auditor, and W. B. Stewart, press representative.

The members of the West End Woman's club were special guests on account of Mrs. Johnson's past connection with that club and the fact that several members of the Hapeville Woman's club had also been members of the West End club. These two clubs have been closely associated throughout the existence of the Hapeville club, for this reason and also because two members of the West End Woman's club addressed the Hapeville club at its initial meeting in April, 1925. These were Mrs. Chester Johnson, president, and Miss Elizabeth Young, membership chairman.

Official Hostess.

Mrs. Jere Wells, retiring president, was official hostess, assisted by Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy, social chairman, and Hrs. W. J. Gower, music chairman. Mrs. Wells presented Mrs. Fred Johnson a corsage bouquet as a personal tribute, and called on several members of both clubs for short speeches.

Mrs. Chester Johnson talked of Mrs. Fred Johnson's work with the West End club, as chairman of home economics and press representative, and congratulated the Hapeville club on securing her as president. Mrs. George W. Taylor, first vice president of the Hapeville club, spoke of Mrs. Johnson's work with that club and expressed appreciation of her ability, experience and willingness to take up work. Mrs. J. H. Legien, treasurer of the West End club, talked on the relationship of the two clubs and the similarity of ideals, and mentioned the coincidence that both clubs have "Johnson heads."

Mrs. R. L. Fulghum, second vice president of the Hapeville club, had for her subject "Club Loyalty," and asked the members of the Hapeville club to pledge allegiance to the new president.

Impromptu Talk.

Miss Elizabeth Young made a witty and original impromptu talk. Mrs. W. W. Bruce also made an impromptu talk, complimenting the president and pledging allegiance. Mrs. Fred Johnson responded most graciously to all these overwhelming tributes, and expressed deepest appreciation. The speeches were interspersed with vocal music by Mrs. Julian Arnold and her sister, Mrs. N. G. Baggett, with their mother, Mrs. Z. T. Dake, at the piano.

Punch was served throughout the afternoon by the social committee, of which Mrs. Raymond Cathy is chairman. The following girls were at the bowls: Kathryn Carter, Dorothy Reddick, Josephine Humphries, Ruth Akin, Elizabeth Moss, Dorothy Hunnicutt, Estelle King and Marie Moss.

Atlanta Woman's Club Teas Prove Popular Diversion

Among the feted guests at the Atlanta Woman's club tea on last Friday afternoon were Mrs. J. W. Gish, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mrs. Hugh Gardner. Mrs. Gish, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the club, is an active member of the Parent-Teachers' Association of Memphis and prominently connected with the social and club life of that city. Mrs. Gardner, whose marriage was recently solemnized, has a wide circle of friends here, a number of whom were invited to meet with her at the tea.

Mrs. Smith, in a charming speech of welcome, thanked the members of the club for their cooperation in making the teas so popular this season and introduced the distinguished guests at the president's table in her own gracious and cordial manner.

Mrs. Mary Butts Griffith Dobbs, music chairman, presented the artists featured during the afternoon, namely Miss Senta Mueller, violinist, and Mrs. Kurt Mueller, pianist, who entertained the members and their guests with a charming program of music.

Swimming Party.

Miss Constance Spalding's swimming party assembled 20 of Atlanta's prettiest subdeb contingent. Her guests included Misses Mary Brown Spalding, Frances Spalding, Rosa Harbin, of Rome, Ga.; Sarah Smith, Margaret Hodnett, Arnette Gay, Sarah Hurt, Margaret Stovall, Mary Harvey, Mary Brown Littleton, Margaret Littleton, Alice Smith, Harriet Turman, Anne Lane Newell, Ellen Newell and Evelyn Thompson and Eleanor Dunson, of LaGrange, Ga. Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. E. L. Connally and Mrs. John S. Spalding chaperoned the party. Tea was served in the banquet hall, the tables being beautifully appointed with box and tall baskets of summer flowers.

Mrs. Nat Kaiser entertained four members of her hospital committee, Mrs. L. W. Rogers, Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. Cotton Mather and Mrs. J. W. Gibson.

Mrs. B. M. McFadden's guests for bridge and tea included Mrs. J. P. Billups and her mother, Miss Mabel Barr, Miss Roberta Barr, Mrs. Willard See, Mrs. Sibley, Mrs. J. M. Little, Mrs. E. H. Baine, Mrs. Oliver Smith and Mrs. G. W. Teachout.

Other Parties.

Mrs. Paul Jones, daughter of Mrs. G. Carpenter Jones, complimented twenty friends at a delightful bridge-tea in the palm room.

Mrs. George Obear entertained at tea for Mrs. F. C. Obear, of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Albert Bailey and Mrs. N. L. Angier.

Mrs. Stralton Hard, of Tampa, Fla., was the guest of Mrs. W. W. Anderson for tea. Invited to meet her were Mrs. W. B. Willingham, Mrs. Paul Potter, Miss Claudia Potter, of Boston; Mrs. Warren Redding and Mrs. Robert McLartey.

Mrs. Ben Simcox had for her guests at tea Mrs. E. S. Colbert, of Nashville, Tenn.; sister of Mrs. Simcox; Mrs. A. C. Bromberg, and Miss Gertrude Burke, of Mobile, Ala.

Mrs. J. L. Campbell entertained four guests at bridge and tea.

Mrs. Allen D. Johnson entertained for her daughter at bridge and tea, her guest list including eight friends.

Mrs. Clara Martain entertained a table of four at bridge and tea.

Mrs. M. W. Reid complimented six friends at tea.

Mrs. H. G. North's party included five guests.

Mrs. Joel Hunter entertained one table at bridge and tea.

Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman honored Mrs. Walter Jamison, of Savannah, who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. S. Moss, at a tea at the Atlanta Woman's club Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, inviting the following ladies to meet Mrs. Jamison: Mrs. Ivy F. Thompson, Mrs. J. S. Moss, Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mrs. M. K. Butler, Mrs. L. C. McKinney, Mrs. M. L. Thrower and Mrs. Mae McAlpin.

Mrs. Horace Pope entertained at a table of bridge and tea. Mrs. Wrin McGuin also entertained at a table of bridge. Mrs. G. R. Tyburn gave a pretty bridge party for sixteen.

President's Table.

Seated at the president's table were Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. J. W. Gish, Mrs. Hugh Gardner, Mrs. John Moore, of Eufaula, Ala.; Mrs. Woods White, Mrs. John R. Hornaday, Mrs. Delos Hill, Mrs. Eva S. Corrigan, Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, Mrs. Mary Butts Griffith Dobbs, Mrs. W. B. Bedard, Miss Senta Mueller, Mrs. Kurt Mueller, Miss Bertha Moore, Miss Mary Cayce, Mrs. Tom Brooks Miss Rosa Jones, Mrs. R. E. Cook, Mrs. J. D. Grant, Miss Maude Jones, Mrs. David Thornton, Mrs. Cloff Wilson, Mrs. James Coleman, Mrs. Joe Neadham, Misses Ethel and Jessie Tutwiler, Mrs. Edwin Yancey, Mrs. Robert Quinn, Mrs. George L. Turner, Mrs. Lillian Jones, Miss Dorothy Banks, Mrs. Arnold Hepp, Mrs. Robert Fisk, Mrs. Lency Hatfield and others.

Junior Group To Give Swimming Party At Woman's Club

The members of the junior group of the junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club will entertain Tuesday afternoon, July 27, from 3 until 5 o'clock, with a swimming party at the Deryl Sharp pool. This group includes girls from 11 to 14 years old. Each member of the junior membership on a specified day during the summer season, on presentation of membership card, will have the privilege, once a month, of inviting a guest to enjoy the pool.

On payment of dues those who have not secured their membership cards may do so Tuesday. Mrs. M. D. Farnham, chairman, will be at the club at 2:30 o'clock to issue cards.

Assisting Mrs. Farnham will be Mrs. Ben Simcox, Miss Anna Lee Coleman and Miss Isabel Spring, leader of the junior group. Miss Spring is an expert swimmer and will supervise the swimming and give suggestions to the girls needing advice.

The junior department has three groups, senior, junior and bluebird. Any daughter of a club member is eligible for membership in the junior department and by registering with Mrs. Farnham and on payment of dues may enjoy the privileges extended by the club.

Girl Scout Camp Will Close With Sunday Celebration

The Girl Scout camp, Civitania, will close its second successful season with a final gathering around the camp fire on Sunday evening. Over 200 Atlanta girls have been registered at this attractive camp during its six weeks' summer term. The camp, which is the gift of the Atlanta Civitan club to the local Girl Scout organization, comprises nearly 100 acres and is equipped with 12 permanent buildings, an out-door museum and theater and a large swimming pool. It is considered by camp inspectors one of the most up-to-date in the south.

Outstanding activities of the summer sessions include the establishment of primitive camping as extension work by Miss Corinne Chisholm, national regional director of Girl Scout work, and the entertainment of Dame Katherine Furze, considered one of the most distinguished English women of this generation, who came to Atlanta to visit the camp, bringing with her a party of British social service workers.

At special closing exercises on Friday evening, recognition was given to girls who have graduated into higher scout ranks. Those becoming first-class scouts are Margaret Darrington, Lundye Sharp, Marion and Dorothy Fugitt and Sarah Bowman. Second-class scouts are Jessie Bradley, Carolyn Weinstock, Frances Holsenbach, Mary Large, Willie B. Hapblodt and Jeane Rathborne. Qualifying as tenderfoot scouts are Florence Stevenson, Ann Worthy Johnson, Gertrude Colby, Juliette Harrison and Lola Landers.

Girls receiving merit badges for work in swimming, path finders, bird and nature study, pioneering, handcraft and woodcraft, painting, cooking, nursing, and other scout work, include Emily Carlton, Emily Walker, Margaret Bates, Aldora Hudson, Sarah Bowman, Louise Wesley, Ruth Peck, Helen Bauer, Polly Taylor, Edith Epstein, Virginia Karsten, Joe Newberry, Marion Denson, Rosa Leiter, Marion Fugitt, Dorothy Fugitt, Louise Soloman, McDougal Evins, Lundye Sharp, Ann Wynn Fleming, Miriam Fleming, Jane Bayard, Edna Karston, Mary Williams, Caroline Stewart, Evelyn Garwin and Louise King.

Other girls receiving awards are Chalice Howell, Caroline Weinstock, Gertrude Colby, Frances Holsenbach, Elizabeth Lee, Jean Rathburn, Margaret Darrington, Mary Large, Willie B Happboldt, Lola Landers, Florence Stevenson, Juliette Harrison, Earnestine Pegtim, Jessie Bradley, Novena Harrison, Irma Gutham, Dorothy Howard, Madge Durden, Helen Thompson, Sylvia Miles, Elizabeth Nowell, Virginia Wilkinson, Katherine McMillan, Louise King and Virginia Williams.

Georgia Women's Christian Temperance Union

President, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, 806 Fifth avenue, Eastman; vice president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, 307 North Moreland avenue, Atlanta; recording secretary, Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, Box 216, Emory University; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. G. Cotton, Box 1146, Columbus; treasurer, Miss Josephine Hammond, Monroe; advisory, Miss M. Theresa Griffin, 1530 Third avenue, Columbus; editor Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, Mrs. August Burghard, 421 Johnson avenue, Macon; director of music, Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, Cartersville; evangelist, Miss Carabel Wilkes, 121 Pierce avenue, Macon.

W.C.T.U. Continues Active Despite Heat

BY M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

The Woman's Christian Temperance union is one of the few women's organizations which does not take a vacation during the summer months. Its members enjoy vacations as individuals, but there are always enough at home to carry on some of its varied works and to hold regular meetings. Indeed, some of its most delightful gatherings are in "the good old summertime," and some of the most resultant departmental activities are carried on then.

The work is so comprehensive—so all-inclusive that there is something definite to be accomplished every month, and so varied that every member may have a part exactly suited to her taste and talents, no matter how extensive her ability, or what her limitations may be.

Membership.

The membership campaign which has been in progress some weeks has resulted in hundreds and hundreds of new members, gained by volunteer captains and their helpers.

The National W. C. T. U. has decided to continue the campaign to the middle of August at the urgent request from several states, but Georgia expects to continue until the state treasurer's books close two weeks before the state convention at Gainesville in October.

Tenth District Rally at Sparta.

The unions at Sparta and Culverton united in entertaining the tenth district rally at the Sparta school on Thursday, with a splendid attendance—large delegations were present from Milledgeville, Sandersville, Culverton and Sparta, and a number of smaller groups from other points.

An excellent program was given in the morning and afternoon, with the state president, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Macon, the chief speaker.

Many men came to hear and applaud what she had to say, among them the sheriff, school commissioner, preachers of several churches, the editor and others.

Miss Ruth Stone, of Milledgeville, the vice president, presided. Her reports of the unions were particularly good.

At the conclusion of a stirring talk on The Union Signal by the state agent, Mrs. Bessie Aldred, of Sandersville, a number of unions pledged their quota of subscribers.

Eight volunteered to be membership captains, each promising to secure at least ten new members.

A fine corps of officers were elected for the new year: President, Mrs. W. S. Brooks, Milledgeville; Miss Ruth Stone, vice president, Milledgeville; Miss Blanch Middlebrooks, Sparta, secretary; Mrs. P. W. Waller, Culverton, treasurer.

At 1 o'clock a bountiful barbecue with Brunswick stew, fried chicken, salads, etc., was served by the hostess unions under the trees on the schoolhouse grounds.

Mrs. J. M. Jackson, wife of the efficient sheriff of Hancock, is Sparta's W. C. T. U. president, and Mrs. R. H. Moore is Culverton's president, and the hospitality of their unions was complete.

Chauncey Entertains 12th District Rally.

The Chauncey union, with Mrs. D. B. Phillips, president, and Mrs. J. J. Caldwell, secretary-treasurer, was hostess to the twelfth district rally on Thursday, the president, Mrs. J. M. Bohannon, of Eastman, in the chair.

Mrs. Bohannon led the devotionals, having "Christian Citizenship" as a subject; Mrs. W. H. Clark, Rev. J. E. Channell and Mrs. J. J. Caldwell, of Chauncey, participating.

Talks were made by Mrs. S. E. Denton, president of the McRae-Helena union on arousing local interest; by Mrs. D. D. Smith, of Eastman, state superintendent of the health department, on "Prevention of Disease Rather Than Cure;" "High Lights of Our Local Work" was Mrs. Phillips', of Chauncey, subject; Mrs. Milton H. Edwards, of Eastman, state parliamentarian, discussed "Law Observance and Law Enforcement."

The child welfare department was illustrated with a playlet given by four children under the direction of Mrs. W. C. Edwards, Eastman, the superintendent.

A musical program was furnished by Mrs. Jeter Harrell and Miss Gladys Winn.

The presence and participation of Mrs. Alton Lee Hale, of Culverton, and Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman, daughters of the state president, Mrs. Armor, added much to the occasion.

Refreshments were served by the Chauncey W. C. T. U. during the social hour. Nearly one hundred were in attendance.

Mrs. Williams Speaks.

The Social Circle, W. C. T. U., organized by Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, state field secretary, early in the year has added a dozen members and otherwise prospered under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Wiley, Mrs. C. A. Hall and Mrs. W. B. Spearman.

The state vice president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, was the guest of honor at the meeting on Wednesday afternoon. She spoke convincingly on Christian citizenship, showing the wisdom of creating an intelligent and Christian citizenship by teaching the principles of Christ as they relate to government.

A number of Monroe white ribboners motored over for the meeting, among them the state treasurer, Miss Josephine Hammond and Mrs. Edwin Nowell, Jr., president of the Monroe union, each of whom made helpful talks.

The songs of Mrs. Wiley were enjoyed.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program. The home of Mrs. Shepard was gay with summer flowers for the occasion.

Mrs. Dillard Entertained.

Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, Emory university, National W. C. T. U., director of the department of peace, former state president, was a distinguished visitor at the state W. C. T. U. headquarters last Tuesday.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the state W. C. T. U. president, entertained at luncheon in her honor at the Tip Top Tea Shop. Invited to meet Mrs. Dillard were the Sixth district president, Mrs. D. A. Warlick, and the editor of The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, Mrs. August Burghard.

Mrs. Dillard was en route home after a visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lucius Whipple, president of the Cochran W. C. T. U.

Grandfather Is Perpetual Member.

It was announced from the state W. C. T. U. headquarters a few days ago that Robert Tyre Jones, of Canton, has become a perpetual member of the W. C. T. U.

Mr. Jones is the grandfather of the famous golf champion, Bobby Jones.

For a number of years Mr. Jones has made generous contributions toward temperance education in Canton and Cherokee county, as carried on by the W. C. T. U.

Perpetual memberships are new in this state, having been established last fall at the state convention in Macon. The interest from the $25 dues keeps the annual dues paid up perpetually.

The W. C. T. U. has four other kinds of memberships, active, honorary dues $1 annually; life membership, $10, and memorial membership, $15 dues.

New Unions.

During the past week Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins organized a union at White Oak in the eleventh district, of which Mrs. J. O. Ward, of Blackshear, is president, whose officers are: Mrs. Maddie Brown, president; Mrs. S. P. Lang, secretary, and Mrs. W. C. Rahn, treasurer.

The officers of the new St. Marys W. C. T. U. are Mrs. R. W. Huff, president; Miss Ethel Brandon, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. R. Smith, recording secretary, and Mrs. J. R. Bachlott, treasurer.

Heads Largest District

Mrs. D. A. Warlick, president of the Macon and the Sixth District W. C. T. U. Her union is the largest in the state with a paid membership running far over 500, and her district has made such large membership gains that she will be given a trip to the national W. C. T. U. convention in Los Angeles, Cal., September 26 to October 1.

Mrs. Tom Yarborough made a recent visit to Professo and Mrs. N. A. Goodyear, on Emory drive.

The Emory Woman's club will meet at the home of Mrs. J. A. Nelms on Wilton drive, Tuesday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock.

Vesper-Hyperian Clubs Hold Reunion.

The first occasion of the reorganization of the Vesper-Hyperian clubs was in the form of a dance and entertainment at Camp Kill Kare Wednesday evening. The interesting feature was that it had been approximately ten years since the participants had been together.

The following parties attended: Mr and Mrs. L. R. Pierson, Mr. and Mrs W. E. Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Pollard, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sims, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Teague, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dull, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. D. S McKinney, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. N Everett, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Rudd, D. V. A. Smith, Misses Suzanne Springer, Mabelle Hodges, Maude Thurman, Laura McCrary, Dorothy Freeman, Mrs. Louis Billingslea, Mrs. M. Myddelton, Mrs. Walter Smith, Mrs. Granville Baldwin, Mrs. W. H. Morgan, W. T. Trussell, J. I. Murdock, Guy Harper, S. S. Swilling, Neville Everett and Jack Wooding.

This is the first of a series of occasions expected in the reorganization and resumption of activities of these clubs.

Things Worth While!

Worthwhile things are those that inspire: that bring joys; which, when pleasure is done, do not leave a sting, nor sadness.

For instance, an evening at Home. There is a reason why the family want to stay at home. Dad invested money in attractive Home Furnishings. His Mohair Wing Chair and the lovely Parchment Shade of the Wrought Iron Lamp, reflects upon the daily news. He smiles lovingly at his wife as he reads how thousands are being benefited by the offerings at HAVERTY'S.

Amusement for the "Kiddies"—Mother tuned in on "Bed Time Stories." Everything so charming and up-to-date. Mary entertains her date at HOME. All of these are worthwhile things.

A few of us are as blind as bats that fly by night. They are those whose eyes have that lonesome look. Cannot see home for the dust who, unfortunately see only pleasure in places where the jazz band plays.

GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. Frank Sellers, 510 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning thru their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it recommend it to their daughters as a dependable medicine.

A July Clearance of Keely's Fine Shoes!

1,000 Pairs---Values Up to $15

Scores of Exclusive Styles

(1)

A KEELY sale of shoes carries with it a significance more profound than usually attends a shoe sale. The evident reason is that Keely's shoes have a reputation for quality, style, variety of patterns and exclusiveness. There are no "dead numbers" to wish off at cut prices. There are no ancient styles to palm at any price. Our seasonal clearance keeps our stocks up to the very latest style suggestion. This in a word explains this mid-summer clearance. Four outstanding styles are illustrated.

Phenomenal Clearance of Silk Summer Dresses

At a Most Remarkably Low Price

$12.75

Original Values Up to $25

Not a special shipment of special dresses to sell at a special price on a special occasion! They are our own dresses, taken from our own superb collection—dresses that are today's style edict, and that women of discriminating taste would instantly choose, regardless of price. But they must be sold—quickly—tomorrow. We have just received advices from our New York buyers that they have bought new fall stocks—bought heavily—and that shipments are right now on their way. We must prepare for them. They must have room for proper display. Let nothing keep you away tomorrow, for this sale is the one outstanding value-giving event of the entire year. Please be on time.

This lot of dresses includes such wanted materials as Georgettes, Flat Crepes, Canton Crepes and Novelty Silks in all the new summer shades and plenty of Navy Georgette. There are also many party frocks in the lot. Sizes: Misses, 14 to 20 women, 36 to 44.

Just In by Express Friday Noon

100 Dozen Pure Silk Crepe de Chine

Gowns and Teddies

$3.95 and $2.95

Regular Value $6.95 Regular Value $4.95

"They are wonderful values!" exclaimed a prominent society matron when she saw these lovely lingerie creations. "Why, I haven't seen anything to equal them at twice the price!" And she bought an armful on the spot.

These are the luxurious custom made heavy quality silk crepe de chine undies that created such a furor among undergarment buyers during a recent sale that we were sorely taxed to supply the demand. Friday's express brought us 100 dozen more for Monday's selling, and our former sale presages a spirited event tomorrow.

Pure silk, absolutely free of "loading," in many of the most wanted pastel shades, daintily lace and ribbon trimmed, and some beautifully embellished with hand embroidery in artistic contrasting colors.

Fine Trimmed Voile Lingerie

Beautiful Gowns and Teddies

$1.98

Amazing, you will exclaim, that such exquisite creations can be sold at such an insignificant price! Made of daintiest sheer voile—misty sheer—nebulous in texture—in the most bewitching styles to fascinate feminine tastes, and in the most alluring petal shades. Some are lacy trimmed with pleated fronts, some with net yokes and appliqued touches of embroidery, some with real baby Irish lace insets, some with round necks, and some with shoulder straps. Were cold words further employed to describe their beauty, the effort would have been in vain. See them—admire them—buy them! On sale Monday morning at 9 o'clock sharp. Please be here promptly for choice selection.

GEORGIA DIVISION, DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Montezuma, president; Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sandersville, first vice president; Mrs. Frank Exley, Savannah, second vice president; Mrs. W. T. Bankston, Reynolds; third vice president; Miss Laura Fraser, Flemington, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles E. Reid, Montezuma, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Tillman, Quitman, treasurer; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, registrar; Miss Mildred Rutherford, Athens, historian; Miss Lillie Martin, assistant historian; Miss Rebecca Black DuPont, Savannah, recorder of crosses; Mrs. I. Bashinsky, Dublin, auditor; Mrs. Lee Trammell, Madison, custodian of world war records; Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, state editor; Mrs. Louis Kendall Rogers, Tennille, poet laureate.

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Miss Anna Carolina Benning, Columbus; Mrs. Ida Evans Eve, Augusta.

Report of State Organizer

After our wonderful convention last year at Roberta I came home with renewed enthusiasm, if such a thing were possible, as I am sure we had the best convention yet.

The Helen Plane chapter, Camilla, Ga., is our largest new chapter with 22 charter members, and I am sure under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Joiner we will hear big things from them and I am delighted to honor our dear Mrs. Plane by having this chapter named for her.

Abbeville, Ga., has organized and I am sure in time to come we will hear from them.

I have sent all information to Cartersville and hope to soon have a flourishing chapter there. Have also sent information to McDonough, Ga., and hope to hear from them soon.

I wish that I could impress upon chapters the necessity of not waiting until the very last to send in papers, as it is too much on your state director. If your directors will send in papers as soon as you get them filled out and not wait and send in all at once it will be much easier on your state director.

We have registered 140 new members so far and should have as many as 500. Let us urge each member to try and lets get more members, as Georgia ranks third and she could be first if each one would do her part.

In traveling over the country, especially Georgia, as I do, I always call the director of the chapters in places where there are C. of C. and give them all the help I can and if they have no chapter I try and get in touch with the president of the U. D. C. and am very sorry to have so few new chapters to report, but am sure it is neither Mrs. Brankston's or my fault.

I cannot help but tell you all just what a wonderful director you have in Mrs. Bankston and if you could have seen the condition of your state C. of C. papers when she got them and see how she keeps them now you could appreciate her all the more, for she has them now just as they should be.

It seems very hard for some of you to learn that you order C. of C. blanks from me and always include extra money for postage, something very few of you do. You send your papers correctly filled out to Mrs. W. S. Bankston with 30 cents for certificates and postage. It is very necessary to fill out the connecting link, which is the grandfather, father or mother and child's name in this space.

I always answer all letters immediatel, and give full information for organizing in just a short time after receiving letters.

It has been my pleasure to be with Mrs .Harry Bell at Elberton in my rounds and this chapter is doing fine work. At Camilla I was with Mrs. Joiner and at Bainbridge with Mrs. Ward and all these chapters are doing fine work. Let's all go home with the determination to see if we can get as many as 300 members by the 10th of September, as state books close then and we have that long to enter national contest and we can win some of these honors if you all will just help us.

There is no use for me to tell you all just what difficulties I am laboring under all the time, as you all know I am working all this time, and if it were not for the love of the cause I would be forced to give up.

CHAPTER REPORTS

Louise Heard Chapter.

The Louise Heard chapter, Elberton, holds its meetings the first Friday in each month. We follow the historical programs, also have some music at our meetings. We always serve refreshments and have a splendid attendance and enthusiastic meetings.

Events occurring from October up until present time. October the following officers were elected:

President, Elizabeth Jane Mattox; first vice president, Annie Herndon; second vice president, Olive Edwards; secretary, Margaret Seymons; treasurer, Virginia Bell; registrar, Charles Hagood; historian, Elizabeth Little; flag bearer, Lee Rogers; Banner bearer, Travis Labor; current events, Emily Johnson; reporter, Inez Thornton.

Donated to the Mildred Rutherford scholarship fund.

November—Sent a Thanksgiving box of jellies to the Old Soldiers' home in Atlanta.

January—Sold ten of Lee and Jackson's pictures to the mother chapter. Also had special program for Lee and Jackson.

February—We observed Georgia day with fitting exercises. Sold a gross of flags on Flag day. Donated to the Helen educational fund.

March—Subscribed to the Confederate Veterans and also bought the book, "The Women of the South in War Times."

April—We assisted our mother chapter, "The Jefferson Davis," with the exercises on Memorial day. We presented a pageant, "The History of the Five Confederate Flags." We also placed flowers on the veterans' graves.

June—We had a splendid Jefferson Davis program. We presented a pageant for our mother chapter, "The Women of the South in War Times," in behalf of the veterans' wives and widows. Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, of Madison, state registrar of the U. D. C., was present at this meeting.

Donated to the U. B. Baum educational fund.

We have 56 children on roll, 26 active members. We have paid our state dues, $2.60. We have sent in 24 sets of application blanks, also money for membership certificates for each. We have paid for the minutes. Each month the president of our mother chapter, Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, meets with us and talks to us on some interesting subject. Our chapter has the honor of having one state officer Confederate flag bearer, Virginia Bell.

Next year we hope to have a splendid report of the year's book.

MRS. HARRY S. BELL, Leader.
MRS. B. M. GREER, Asst. Leader.

The Winnie Davis chapter, of Savannah, has been very busy since last conference. We gave $5 towards the printing of the minutes and $5 for the Mildred Rutherford scholarship fund. When any of our dear veterans are ill or we know of their birthdays we always send them flowers.

We hold our meetings the second Wednesday in each month and after the business meeting we serve refreshments and have a social hour.

On Memorial day we parade with veterans and take part in the exercises and on Lee's and Jackson's birthdays we have special readings on them. Christmas we sent a crate of oranges to the Soldiers' home in Atlanta and sent the widow of a veteran $5.00.

We spent $30 in doing over the children's room in the Winnie Davis hall, Athens. We pay one-third of the telephone bill at U. D. C. chapter house and also pay $24 a year towards the janitress' hire. We have paid our per capita tax of $6 for this year.

Our chapter has increased its membership by five new members, but we hope to have a larger membership next year.

DOROTHY L. CAHOV.

Mrs. Oscar McKinzie Is Back After Trip; Honored in North

It is with pleasure we announce the return of Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, who has enjoyed a most delightful northern trip during the past few weeks. While away Mrs. McKenzie attended the graduation of her son from Harvard. During her stay in Boston she was entertained at a most elaborate luncheon by Mrs. Chesley, ex-corresponding secretary of the general U. D. C. and the founder of the Boston chapter U. D. C. She was also the distinguished guest of the at a tea at the home of Mrs. Jannett, a former president of the Boston chapter and a prominent worker in the cause. These social functions were not only a delightful compliment to the brilliant state president, who ever carries the standard of the Georgia division so gracefully, but were a distinct honor to her state. Mrs. McKenzie is at home once more and has again resumed the routine of the business of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Social Notes From Decatur.

Miss Dorothy Smith has returned from a visit to Mrs. Warde Durham in Woodville.

Sister Mary Christine has returned to her home in New York, after a visit to her sister, Mrs. John Gleason.

Miss Alice Allen is with friends in Fort Valley.

Mrs. Sloan has returned home from a visit to Mrs. Jack Johnson.

Mrs. W. S. Nelms is entertaining her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Daugtrey, from Texas.

Mrs. W. W. Freeborn and daughter returned home Saturday from an extended visit to Wadsworth, Ohio.

Miss Virginia Mayson left Tuesday for Dallas, Texas, to attend the marriage of her brother, James Mayson.

Mrs. W. S. Elkin is visiting in Kentucky.

Mrs. Archie Wall and daughter, Mary Aline, from Florence, S. C., are with her mother, Mrs. J. E. Schofield, on Church street.

Mrs. Bagnal has returned from a visit to Wrightsville Beach.

Miss Barbara Wilson is visiting Wiley with Mrs. Dixon Noble.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Sutton and Dr. and Mrs. James Pittman are spending the week-end with relatives in LaGrange.

Mrs. Roy Jones is visiting Mrs. Broughton Branch in Crawfordsville, and will then go to Tallulah.

Miss Lillian Clements will return home the latter part of this week from an extended visit in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Misses Eulalia and Frances Napier and Miss Nell Patillo left Saturday for Camp Juliette Lowe.

Miss Annie Lizzie Pike, from LaGrange, visiting Miss Celia Wright on Church street, was entertained at a picnic at Idlewood Tuesday evening.

Adeline Baum Chapter Children of Confederacy.

As we come to make our report to you of our past year's achievements we are sorry that they are not greater, but being handicapped by the continued absence of our director, our meetings are held only every sixty days. We feel that we need Miss Adeline's leadership, so we plan our meetings to meet her convenience.

We carry out the general historical program as nearly as we can and we observe all patriotic holidays. Members of our chapter assisted the U. D. C. in the observance of Memorial day by presenting a memorial pageant. The graves of our Confederate dead, about 125 in number, were decorated with flags and flowers on Memorial day, while oura living veterans were presented flowers and cigars.

To our Soldiers' home we have sent money for tobacco, while to our own local veterans and widows of veterans we sent Christmas boxes and flowers on their birthdays.

In the recent essay contest more than 50 per cent of our members entertained, several of them winning medals or cups. Our historical library, at the home of our director, contains about 50 volumes.

On the occasion of the official visit of the state president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., our chapter presented the state president with a lovely corsage.

We feel that our greatest work for the year has been towards the Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Baum educational fund, a fund we are donating to one of our own worthy girls, Mary Radford, in memory of the sainted parents of our beloved director. We feel that we could not honor Mr. and Mrs. Baum in any greater way than to help in the education of one of our own girls. We know we are doing a work they would wish to carry on, as no couple has done more to help educate worthy boys and girls than this dearly beloved couple we claim as our own.

Our roll shows a membersihp of 88 with 13 new members added during the year.

Our financial report is as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Baum educational fund	$ 75.00
Mildred Rutherford scholarship	10.00
Printing minutes	10.00
State dues	8.80
Delegate's expenses	15.00

:: WEEKLY TEA PARTIES DELIGHTFUL AFFAIRS ::

At Atlanta Woman's Club

Once inside the doors of the Atlanta Woman's club, a welcome both royal and democratic awaits you,—royal in its splendid reception, democratic in that it includes every caller alike, and at once there follows a scene that cannot be duplicated at any other club in the city.

Women! Only women! Hundreds of them! Their club, their friends and their president's weekly tea party!

Picture the handsome club reception hall, once a private home, and therefore more intimate and friendly than you would expect in a strictly formal clubhouse,—soft carpets, subdued lights, a few well-chosen pieces of rare furniture, and flowers bright, sweet and fresh, everywhere,—always flowers.

You have passed the threshold, and now you are meeting the receiving line, headed by the popular new president, Mrs. Price-Smith, assisted by her vice presidents and any distinguished visitors who may be the official guests of the club at this time.

After passing the receiving line, the guests quickly find their own individual parties who gather for bridge, or for a swim in the lovely pool. Those who come for the social feature only, who neither play bridge nor swim, but who come to mingle with other club members, go to the beautiful banquet hall, which always delights the eye, for it is one of the most beautiful banquet halls in the city. Bordered on either side by French doors, on the left side opening on a tile terrace, flush with the green lawn, and at one end the swimming pool, and, on the right, the same effect but overlooking a driveway that leads to the entrance of the auditorium, another building that makes the third unit added to this magnificent Woman's club property.

Imagine again the long flower bedecked table of the president, who manages with tact and graciousness these happy occasions.

There is always a program of music by some of Atlanta's best talent preceding the tea, which although artistic, is in a most informal manner. There are speeches, responses, "bon mots" of bright wit, and much that is friendly and helpful in drawing together some of the most representative women in our city, as well as others who enjoy the social side of club life.

The recreation afforded by the swimming pool is available to members and their friends in parties of eight, and no more lovely sight can be found than this pool on a summer's day, its clear waters reflecting the blue sky above and reached by a long path over a smooth velvetry lawn that is shaded by a magnificent oak.

All praise to women who can own, and manage so successfully this wonderful club.

Music Chairman Formulates Plans for Atlanta Woman's Club

With the return to the city of Mrs. Mary Butts Griffith Dobbs, chairman of the music division of the Atlanta Woman's club, plans are being formulated by the committee for a distinctive program of music to be sponsored by the club this fall.

Mrs. Dobbs, whose brilliant performances on that beautiful instrument—the harp—have delighted many Atlanta audiences, is president of the Mary Griffith Harp club, federated in 1919. She is also director of the harp department of Washington seminary and of the Griffith School of Music. In 1923 and 1924 Mrs. Dobbs was harpist and solo artist for the Atlanta Symphony orchestra and has the added distinction of being the first solo artist to broadcast over The Atlanta Journal radio, WSB station. Her fame, therefore, is not only local but countrywide.

Better Music.

It is the ambition of the Atlanta Woman's club to make music a part of the activities of every committee and to encourage every member to work for better music in her community.

"Our committee this year," said Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president, "is composed of leading Atlanta women who have devoted their time and talents to the promotion of musical centers in Atlanta. Selections from famous composers will be featured at the club by artists who have studied under the best of teachers, not only in this country but abroad.

"Atlanta is growing in every direction. We are the center of increasing industrial developments and it is only fitting and proper that we should become a leader in the cultural development of the south."

Choral Club.

Included in the plans of the musical division is the proposition to organize a choral club and to encourage assembly singing. "We have ever been a nation of music lovers," said Mrs. Smith. "No better proof of this is needed when we remember how our youthful soldiers went singing up to the trenches in the late world war. We believe, therefore, that by introducing better music, through community singing, we will raise the standard of appreciation throughout the city. Good music is and should be as pleasing to the ear as some of our so-called popular selections. The immortal Goethe once said 'Music, in its best sense, does not require novelty; nay, the older it is and the more we are accustomed to it, the greater its effect.'"

The motto of the Atlanta Woman's club is to make good music popular and popular music good. Members of the music division are Mrs. Mary Butts Griffith Dobbs, chairman; Mrs. W. H. Bedard, cochairman; Mrs. Delos Hill, Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, Mrs. Charles Chalmers, Mrs. John O. Cooper, Mrs. W. O. Chears, Mrs. Susan Bowden Johnson, Miss Dorothy Waldman, Mrs. Katherine Connerat, Mrs. J. H. Whitten and Mrs. Theodora Morgan Stephens.

Gulledge-Braswell Wedding Announcement Made Today

Judge and Mrs. J. W. E. Gulledge, of Clanton, Ala., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Julia Lee Gulledge, of Atlanta, to Edward Jackson Braswell, on Saturday, July 17, at the residence of the Rev. S. R. Bell. The ceremony was quiet, being witnessed by only a few intimate friends.

The bride is of a distinguished Alabama family and is particularly beautiful and charming. The Gulledges were early American settlers, coming over from England. Gulledge manor, built in the 13th century, is still standing and there Mr. and Mrs. Braswell will spend their honeymoon.

Mr. Braswell, too, is of distinguished English ancestry, being a direct descendant of Sir Francis Drake, the famous sea fighter and explorer, and of Daniel Boone, the original settler of Kentucky. He is well known in business and is a veteran of both the Spanish and the world wars.

On their return from England, Mr. and Mrs. Braswell will be at home at 672 Peachtree street.

Mrs. Smith To Preside At Club Meeting.

Mrs. Edward H. Smith, president, will preside at the regular meeting of the Woman's Civic Club of West End Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the clubrooms.

Mrs. M. Herzberg, co-chairman of music, has arranged a very atractive program.

At the executive board meeting, which takes place at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Fred Stewart, second vice president, will occupy the chair.

A social gathering of the past week was the square dance given Monday evening in the clubrooms.

Mrs. Sharp Stresses Outdoor Pleasures For State Juniors

Mrs. Norman Sharp, chairman of junior membership, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, calls especial attention of the junior chairmen in the federation over the state, to the necessity of stressing outdoor recreation for junior members at this season of the year and to encourage all wholesome recreation and to assist in every way possible, those who are arranging and sponsoring outdoor activities.

Mrs. Sharp also stresses the importance of the recent movement by the United States government to establish training camps for girls all over the country. This has been the first effort made by the government to establish a program for the girls of the nation and the junior chairman of Georgia hopes to see the camps established as soon as possible. During the recent war physical examinations showed an alarming number of young men physically unfit for service. Many of these were materially benefited and improved by the systematic order of regular exercises which training camp programs demanded.

Free out of doors camps for girls, open to all classes, would afford excellent opportunities for health building which the American girl of today so greatly needs. These camps would be an especial boon to girls in modest financial circumstances who could not afford to pay for such advantages and benefits.

Bishop Stresses Call to Service.

Bishop W. B. Beauchamp of the M. E. church, South, was in the city recently and addressed a body of Methodists, taking as his text, "There was a man sent from God and his name was John." The bishop said that the "call to service" is the most important factor in the life of the church and "no training, no culture, can take the place of being sent from God."

This call is not limited to ministers, each man, woman and child is called of God to be a witness to Him and every Christian life preaches a sermon even though no word may be spoken.

"No training can take the place of being sent from God," but the call plus the training brings marvelous results. Belief in this is the foundation of the great training schools for Christian Workers in our different denominations. When the call has been heard and responded to, and the training completed, then experience is added and with these three in one, there is no task too great to be undertaken.

In the words of John Wesley, "The world is my (our) parish" and our missionary activities are not limited until the uttermost part of the earth be reached. All Christians feel the urge to "Go" but all cannot go. However, through the training schools that are made possible by our prayers and our contributions, we can send our "Called," "Trained" and "Experienced" representatives while we witness at home. And, as Mr. Wesley said with his dying breath, "The best of all is God is with us" when we send as truly as when we go.

—MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

St. Paul W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

The regular third Monday meeting of the W. M. S. of St. Paul church was held at the church Monday afternoon, Mrs. Jack Lane's Circle in charge.

The meeting was opened by singing. Mrs. Gifford offered prayer.

The anti-Christian movement in China was presented by the following ladies: Mrs. Gifford, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Coogler, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Tison, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Williamson Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Wills, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Starr, Mrs. Lozier and Miss Nettie Adams.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Ballenger, Mrs. J. J. McHugh, the vice president, presided over a short business session.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. C. W. McDonald, chairman of the entertainment committee, who had planned an unusually interesting program. The occasion honoring Mrs. Harris' circle for having had the largest attendance of any of the circles for the past quarter.

The play, "Possum Trot Missionary Society," was dramatized by Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Garrett, Mrs. Hopkins, Mrs. Carnes, Mrs. Tourman, Mrs. G. V. Greene, Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Jackson, Miss Dorothy Dukes and Miss Marjorie Gifford, Mary and Louise Campbell, William and Billie Gifford.

An old-time "spelling bee" was enjoyed by all.

Tea was served and the meeting adjourned.

Pattillo Memorial W. M. S. Meets.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Pattillo Memorial Methodist church held its literary and social meeting for the month of July at the home of the president, Mrs. C. J. Johnson.

Circle No. 3, Mrs. R. L. Sullivan, chairman, had charge of the program. The devotional period was marked by the singing of songs and reading of Scripture appropriate to missionary thought and ideals. Mrs. W. O. Slate and Mrs. K. P. McClung sang a duet.

The topic for the day, "Christ in China," was discussed by Mrs. L. L. Jolly. This topic is of the greatest importance to the missionary enterprise and should arouse the eager interest and attention of the missionary world. There is abroad in China a movement of the students and intellectuals called the Renaissance, or New Thought Movement, which has its roots in an ever-increasing nationalistic consciousness and a new spirit of scientific inquiry which has subjected all religions to criticism, but has singled out the Christian religion for prosecution. This crucial time in China has proved the stamina of the Chinese Christians, and has challenged the missionaries and Christian workers to vindicate their faith and to be able to render a reason for their faith. Opposition to Jesus Christ and persecution of Christians are not new but are as old as the Christian era.

The missionary's answer to the challenge is to study the problem more closely and to increase the efficiency of their work by rethinking their motive and methods, and to strengthen their positions of influence by more sanctity and sacrifice and by closer friendship with the Chinese.

An enjoyable number on the program was a solo by Mrs. Akin. The meeting was closed by the reading of a selection from the Missionary Voice and a prayer.

B. W. M. U. Board To Hold Meeting.

The executive board of the Atlanta Baptist W. M. U. will hold an all-day session in the Palm room of the Woman's club July 27, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. This is the last quarterly meeting of the associational year and the superintendent, Mrs. W. M. Jones, urges every member to be present.

Episcopalians Make Mission Study Plans.

Those interested in mission study in the Episcopal church will be glad to do some preparatory reading of suggested books during the summer.

The subjects which will engage the attention of many groups during the coming fall and winter are: "The General Program of the Church" and "Beyond City Limits," a study of the rural problem in the United States.

Miss Laura Boyer, assistant educational secretary of the national council, has prepared an outline for nine program meetings on "The General Church Program." The "Suggestions To Leaders" for "Beyond City Limits" will be ready by September.

Reference books suggested for these two courses of study are: "The Cost of a New World," Kenneth MacLennan; "Whither Bound in Missions," D. F. Fleming; "Empty Churches," C. J. Golpin; "The Woman on the Farm," Mary M. Atkinson; "The Little Town," H. P. Douglas; "Adventures in Friendship," David Grayson; "So Big," Edna Ferber," "Wild Geese," Martin Osteneo.

Mission Study Class Meets.

The advanced course of mission study class met Thursday morning, July 1, in Rich's conference room.

The class was well attended, with several new members and others sent in their names for enrollment.

Mrs. I. B. Smith, after a short devotional, led the class in a delightful study of the first two chapters of "Today's Supreme Challenge to America," by Love.

She was ably assisted by Miss Clara Stephenson, who furnished the most wonderful posters on the lesson; and by Mrs. E. S. Caldwell, who beautifully did the research work.

Mrs. E. G. Walton will lead the study of the third and fourth chapters; she assigned questions pertinent to the lesson and required some research work from all the members of the class.

Mrs. Walton and Mrs. Rhodes are anxious for all who are ready for the advanced course, especially mission study leaders, to secure the book and meet with us.

After prayer by Mrs. Walton the class adjourned to meet Thursday, August 5, at 10 o'clock, in Rich's conference room.

Mrs. H. A. Heard, secretary.

Tabernacle Y. W. A.

"Ole Man Summer Slump" is not bothering the girls in the Y. W. A. at the Baptist Tabernacle. They continue to have pep and enthusiasm in every meeting. The July meeting was held at the home of the counselor, Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, with Miss Elizabeth Webb in charge of the program, assisted by Misses Annis Stroud, Mary Davis, Mary Shirley, Anna Davis, Lillie Wright, Ernest Grubbs and Addie Wright.

The president, Miss Mary Davis, after the program, introduced Mrs. C. H. Terry, who spoke on the Y. W. A. plans for the coming months. A pleasant social hour followed.

Services at Home.

Services were conducted Sunday afternoon, July 18, at the Home for Incurables by George B. Hinman, assisted by members of the Young People's Service League of St. Luke's Episcopal church.

Publicity Director

Mrs. L. O. Freemen, publicity superintendent of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union of Georgia.

Readers of the Federated Church Women's page will be glad to see today the picture of Mrs. L. O. Freeman, of College Park, superintendent of publicity for the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia.

Since her election to this position, her regular contributions have been widely read and have greatly increased the value of the page to church women, especially to her own denomination. Since her early youth, Mrs. Freeman has been active in church organizations. A native of Georgia, and educated at Cox college, she is well known as one of the best equipped and efficient workers in Baptist circles. During her residence in the Stone Mountain and Rehoboth associations, she led the young people's work to a higher level of effective activity. For some years she was the author of the monthly programs for women's missionary societies, which appeared in the Mission Messenger, organ of the W. M. U. of Georgia. Later when she moved from Fort Valley to College Park, she was elected one of the district secretaries of Atlanta W. M. U. and greatly developed the efficiency of the church women under her supervision.

Mrs. Freeman has served for a number of years as a member of the executive board of W. M. U. of Georgia, and some months ago was elected superintendent of publicity, which position she now fills with great acceptability.

Mrs. Freeman is the popular teacher of a large class of young men in College Park Baptist church. She has been in demand in club and civic circles, but her greatest loyalty has been to her church and denominational work, putting always "first things first."

STATE EDITOR.

Briefly Told

The hosts of friends of Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, president of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union of Georgia, are glad to see such an attractive picture of Mrs. Neel in last wyeek's Christian Index, with the announcement that she is to deliver the Sunset lectures at the Baptist assembly, Blue Ridge, Ga., July 31-August 8.

Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secrtary-treasurer of Baptist W. M. U. of Georgia, has been out of the city the past week attending annual associational meetings of the North Georgia, Coosa, Catoosa and Chattooga associations.

Mrs. McMahon is a fine speaker and always in demand on ascsociational programs.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of Georgia W. M. U., greatly delighted all present and especially the young people at the annual meeting of the Noonday association, which was held at Locust Grove church July 21.

Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of the W. M. U., Atlanta, has spent the past month with friends in Alabama. Her many friends will welcome her return home early this week.

On account of the recent illness of the Baptist editor, Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke, she was compelled to cancel her engagement to conduct a series of missionary addresses at the Baptist encampment which is to last two weeks and the women of Louisiana are fortunate to have Mrs. R. K. Redwine, of Atlanta, field worker for Southwide W. M. U., fill Mrs. Clarke's place at their encampment.

Miss Ida V. Rhoad, rural extension worker B. W. M. U., Georgia, attended the annual meeting of the Noonday association during the past week and made a brief but forceful address, stressing the importance of subscribing for and reading the denominational missionary magazines.

At the recent annual meeting of the South Georgia Methodist Young People in Wesleyan college, Macon, it was voted to combine the offices of Epworth Era agent and recreational director for the conference, and Miss Mamie Milner, of Quitman, was elected to the new office.

Miss Elizabeth Belcher, of Americus, has been named offical delegate from the South Georgia conference, Epworth league, to the Epworth league assembly to be held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., August 5-15.

Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, of Rome, and Mrs. Buford Boykin, of Carrollton, were elected delegates to the annual conference of ministers and laymen of North Georgia Methodism. They will represent the Rome district. Mrs. W. G. Crawley, of Oxford, was chosen as the only woman representative from the Oxford district to the annual conference.

Mrs. C. A. Rauschenburg, Jr., superintendent of the primary department of the Inman Park Methodist Sunday school, is spending the summer at Lake Junaluska, N. C. She and her family are occupying an attractive cottage overlooking the lake.

Mrs. Maude Palmer Henderson, of the race relations commission, was registered at Cherokee Inn, Lake Junaluska, N. C., during the social service conference and remained over for the regional conference on home mission work, held at Lake Junaluska, N. C.

Mrs. James Atkins, widow of Bishop James Atkins, of the M. E. church, south, has been doing special work at Scarritt College for Christian Workers and expects to continue her course there this fall.

Mrs. Homer Williams, of Thomasville, Ga., formerly Miss Jennie Armstrong, of Atlanta, was the only woman elected to the annual conference of Methodist Ministers and Laymen from Thomasville district at the meeting held last week.

Miss Lilla Tuck and Miss Ruby Anderson will represent the Athens district in the annual conference of Methodist Ministers and Laymen in Atlanta this fall. Miss Tuck is secretary for the missionary women of the district and Miss Anderson has charge of the Epworth leagues in th same territory.

Mrs. Jere M. Gleen, of Dublin, superintendent of children's work for the South Georgia conference, Woman's Missionary society, better known as the former Miss Theodosia Wailes, Methodist missionary to China, will have charge of young people's work at Indian Springs campground in August.

The love and sympathy of a multitude of friends goes out to Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Thomas over the serious accident to their beautiful young daughter, Emma, who was injured in an automobile accident a few days ago. Mrs. Thomas, who is president of the Woman's Council of the First Christian church (Disciples), is a member of the executive board of the Federated Church Women. The prayers of us all are ascending in behalf of the complete recovery of this splendid young woman just on the threshold of life, who is a great leader of the young people of her church in its every enterprise, but most especially in the Christian Endeavor society.

Ormewood Park Social Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Robinson and Leo Sudderth, Jr., have returned from Chattanooga where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. McKinney.

Misses Dorothy and Roberta Hansell, Nancy Hudson, Charles Townsley, Olaf Puckett and Carlton Nunan, are at Smyrna camp ground attending the young people's conference of the Presbyterian church.

Misses Mary and Mabel Ellis, who have been the guests of Mrs. A. H. Rives during the absence from the city of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Ellis have returned home.

Misses Frances and Allene Sefton are spending two weeks as the guests of Misses Emma and Mabel Barnhardt at the Barnhardt camp near Elijay.

Misses Mildred Sexton and Katherine Wright who have been the guests of Mrs. K. S. McAllister have gone to Washington, New York and Chicago, where they will visit before returning to their home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. C. A. Wallace has returned from Porter Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Weyburn, Mrs. Patttie Estes, Miss Reba Adderholt and G. F. Lippman were a congenial party spending the 4th in Chattanoogo.

Mrs. John L. Hudson was hostess to the members of the church circle Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Paul West was hostess to the members of the missionary society of Martha Brown Memorial church Monday afternoon at her home on Woodland avenue at their regular literary and social meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Stockbridge entertained the members of their domino club Tuesday evening at their home on Ormewood Court.

Miss Ruth Granger, of Montreal, Canada, was honor guest at a lovely dinner party given by Mrs. W. A. Hansell Tuesday evening at her home on Woodland avenue.

Druid Hills Methodist Using Unique Feature.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Druid Hills Methodist church has been featuring a library for some months in connection with their organization. The result has been very encouraging and proves the plan to be a good one.

Such books as "Life as a Stewardship," "The Missionary Message of the Bible," and "Prayer and Missions" are kept on hand. At each meeting Mrs. C. K. Bivings, the librarian, is given time to announce the new books and those that have been returned. Those desiring to use them register their names and are given the books to be read and returned at the next meeting.

Thirty books were read in one month and the women eagerly await their turn to secure them as each new one is purchased.

Books of the kind being used by these good women cannot be read without resulting in deeper spirituality and a more generous giving to the cause of the kingdom and so it is proving in the lives and gifts of the Druid Hills women whose auxiliary always leads in activity and finances.

New Tithing Cards.

We are rejoicing over the new tithing record cards and the new plan for story contests on tithing for the junior organizations. Both plans are most progressive and will be far reaching in influence.

Would it not be well for each W. M. S. to offer prizes to the junior organizations of the church? Why not have a contest in each church for the Sunbeams and for each of the others? Then when the important date arrives, invite fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, and all the friends to hear these interesting stories? The W. M. S. could easily give prizes at each contest of a mission story book and an organization pin. Later there could be held contests in associations composed of prize winners, the associational W. M. U. giving the prizes. Instructions for state contests are given on page 28 of August Royal Service.

Georgia Baptist W. M. U. has been doing things during the past year. Let us begin now and really promote these contests, and not fail to use the new tithing record cards.

Calendar of Meetings

BAPTIST.

The executive board of the Atlanta B. W. M. U. will hold an all-day session in the palm room of the Woman's club July 27th, beginning at 10:30 o'clock.

On Monday afternoon at 3:30 in the Druid Hills Baptist church, Mrs. Harry Etheridge will teach the class on Bible study. All women of the church are invited.

METHODIST.

Methodist women of the South Atlanta district are urged to reserve August 5th for the all-day meeting to be held at Jonesboro, Ga.

Mrs. Elijah Brown Elected Secretary of Federation

Mrs. Elijah Brown has been elected unanimously to succeed Mrs. C. A Mauck, resigned, as corresponding secretary of the Federated Church Women of Georgia.

Mrs. Brown was the first Methodist editor of the page, but has been out of the work for more than a year.

Her knowledge of the work from its beginning, her ability as a writer, her charming personality and her influence with a large circle of friends make her a valuable member of the board and it is with the greatest pleasure that announcement is made of her return to the board in official capacity.

Douglasville Society Holds Meeting.

The Missionary society of the Douglasville Methodist church held its July meeting at the home of Mrs. G. T. McLarty. It was largely attended by the women of both churches.

Mrs. T. M. Stewart, superintendent of study, had arranged the program for the book called "New Days in Latin America." Rev. R. P. Etheridge made the introductory remarks. Miss Pearl Price gave chapter 1 in the form of a geography class. Girls from the Young People's society acted as pupils. Chapter 2 was given by Mrs. Glenn Dorris, using posters to make her talk more clearly understood. Chapter 3 was given by Mrs. W. M. Hayes, who impersonated the writer and made you feel as if you were really traveling in South America. Chapter 4 was presented in a most interesting talk by Mrs. J. L. Dorris. Chapter 5 was thoroughly entertaining as given by Mrs. A. W. McLarty, Mrs. W. M. Morris, Mrs. Charles Watkins and Mrs. A. V. Powell.

Part of the goal of every mission study class is to have as many take part as possible and the day was very successful because of the large number entering enthusiastically into making it possible.

Mrs. Mauck Honored.

The Druid Hills Methodist Missionary society was one of the first auxiliaries in the entire M. E. church, south, to complete its quota of $5 per capita to the Bennett Memorial which is the first unit of the Greater Scarritt college, missionary training center of southern Methodism.

Still the members of the society were not content and have continued their gifts to the memorial throughout the year. As a result of the special gifts they have conceived the idea of honoring their former presidents by placing their names on the permanent memorial roll which will be kept in the library of the Bennett Memorial building. The first name to be given for this purpose is that of Mrs. C. A. Mauck, who was president when the church was moved from Highland avenue to its present location and continued in this office for several years. She was succeeded by Mrs. A. L. Norris, who gave it up only two or three years ago.

For the privilege of honoring those who have helped to build the foundation for the splendid work now being done, these devoted women pay $100 for each name recorded.

Witches Club Has Meeting.

Mrs. O. N. Lackey was hostess to the members of the Witches club at the July meeting. The president, Mrs. Marguerite Murphy, spoke of the work being done by the club at the Georgia Children's home, Ormewood court.

The members were asked to meet Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the Atlanta Athletic club to discuss a matter of importance to the witches.

Those present were Mrs. E. H. Barnett, Mrs. W. A. Crossland, Miss Jimmie Lou Cruse, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Mrs. A. W. Eves, Mrs. E. E. Huguely, Mrs. H. R. Harland, Mrs. J. E. Nelson, Mrs. J. M. White, Mrs. Spencer Hutchinson, Mrs. Emmie Ballew, Mrs. C. B. Babb, Mrs. A. F. Bain, Mrs. W. J. Hodnett and Mrs. O. N. Lackey.

Have that Clear White Skin all men admire
Try This Quick, Easy Way

The skin you were meant to have—the kind of skin men admire—clear, smooth, youthful and white—it is yours as if by magic. Sallowness, roughness, muddiness, pimples, blackheads, blotches, freckles, tan and other embarrassing blemishes as if magic. Science has discovered such imperfections are merely a film which conceals your schoolgirl skin of natural beauty. Now—before your very eyes, you can dissolve that film that hides your pretty complexion. Yes, almost overnight you can actually make your skin clear, soft, white.

Try this 3 Minute Test: Before retiring, apply a thin coating of Concentrated Marsha Bleach Creme. No massage. No rubbing.

The secret is the creme. The next morning look into the mirror and behold the change—note the absence of pimples, blackheads and freckles. Gaze on a beautiful, soft, white skin that you can hardly believe is your own—and best of all—it's real. It's just your own natural youthful skin that is there right now but hidden.

Clear White Skin—or No Pay. If after 5 night's treatment with this magic creme your pimples, blackheads or other blemishes have not banished; if your skin is not clear, soft and pink white, return the unused portion of the jar to your dealer. Instantly he will refund full purchase price. For sale at all good drug and department stores.

Fourth District's Fine Report On Health and Child Welfare

In Columbus the work is divided into five heads: First, juvenile court, chairman, Mrs. Banks Younge. It will be impossible to give a very accurate report of the work for the past year, but through the courtesy of Miss Beulah Martin, the probation officer, Mrs. John T. Fletcher, district chairman of child welfare, makes the following report for Mrs. Younge who has been ill:

"We have handled officially and unofficially, since September, 1923, 1,113 cases. This includes the negro cases. Very few of these cases have been placed in training school, reformatories or orphanages, as all institutions in Georgia are crowded, so it means that most of these are still under our supervision, though not active cases. Two white probation officers, man and woman, and one woman negro probation officer, are on duty. We appreciate the support of the federated clubs and feel that it is through their influence and parent-teacher associations that we have been able to make the progress that we have. We hope you will help us in making a juvenile court that we all shall be proud of in the state, and the only way we can do this is to work toward establishing a separate juvenile court with a paid juvenile court judge in the future. Mr. Davis, our present juvenile court judge, who is not paid for this work, was sent to the convention in Chicago through the federation of women's clubs and parent-teacher associations. We hope the outcome of his visit to the convention will mean a full-time paid juvenile court officer.

Public Health.

Second, public health, chairman, Mrs. Minnie Flournoy. The public Health Nurse association was organized in Columbus nine years ago, it was the only organization at that time doing health work in the city. The federation of women's clubs was asked to be represented on the board of the Public Health Nurse association, at that time Mrs. Rhodes Browne was president of the city federation. One part of the city federation's work was baby welfare, the public health having that part of the work, too. We being short of funds and nurses Mrs. Browne promised that the city federation would help to sponsor one nurse. They made a brave effort to raise the salary of one nurse for one year, but sufficient funds were never raised for the salary, but the federation does sponsor Sacrifice day every year—report will be given in another paragraph. The federation cooperates with the Public Health Nurse association in every way that they can. The association appreciates their cooperation. Some of the activities of the Public Health Nurse association that are and have been carried on for nine years: The Public Health Nurse association is at present supporting five child welfare clinics—the number of clinics held during the year was 230, with an attendance of 3,521. The prenatal clinics held were 54, with an attendance of 444. Thirty-nine layettes have been furnished by church societies, clubs and individuals. Thirty-nine Little Mother league classes have been taught, with an attendance of 752. Home nursing classes taught, 45; attendance, 596; children sent to fresh air camp, 45; baby welfare visits, 5,031; maternity visits, 5,484; prenatal visits, 2,531.

The Public Health Nurse association matched the Sheppard-Towner fund with the state with $1,500. We have two nurses, one white and one colored, which are doing splendid work with the prenatal mother.

Child Welfare.

Third. Report of child welfare and sacrifice day; chairman, Mrs. Early Johnson. A committee from the Federation of Woman's Clubs has in charge annually one day in the month of May set aside as "tag day for better babies." On this day the public is asked to sacrifice something from a drink of soda water to a new dress, from a dime to a dollar for the welfare of babies in Columbus. The Federation of Woman's Clubs realizes that a well organized health work could use the money secured from tag dag to better advantage for the welfare of children and turns over to the club, and they in turn gave their Public Health Nurse association annually the entire proceeds from tag day.

This fund, which amounted to $649.32 this year, helps to make it possible for the Public Health Nurse association to carry on a splendid piece of health work for better babies, which is educational and disease preventive and curative, which reduces illness and the death rate of both mother and baby. A prize of $10 was offered to the ones who would collect the largest amount on tag day, which was won by the Jewish Ladies' prize to the Public Health Nurse association to carry on the work.

Social and Industrial.

Fourth. Social and industrial conditions; chairman, Mrs. H. L. Watson. The jail is in a splendid condition and considered one of the cleanest in the state—they have shower baths between each cell. The kitchen is kept in a sanitary condition. The jailer does all he can to keep the men and women separate, although that is one of the greatest needs, to have a separate place for each sex. The chaingang camp is also kept neat and in a sanitary condition. The stockade was inspected by the committee and they find it in a good condition.

The committee cooperates with the city and county physicians and has kept informed of the law affecting working women.

Family Welfare.

Fifth. Family welfare; chairman, Mrs. M. Rosenburg. Mrs. Rosenburg has cooperated with the family welfare and a splendid piece of work is being achieved.

Free Milk Station Established By Jewish Aid Society

The Jewish Ladies' Aid society of Columbus is one of the oldest clubs in the state and is regarded as a splendid feature in the fourth district. On the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary this society commemorated the occasion by establishing a free milk station in one of the mill districts of the city for under-nourished children and upon application were granted the use of a room in the North Highlands school.

Mrs. Max Rosenberg, chairman of the society's welfare and charity work, undertook the organizing and coordinating of the movement and is its efficient head. The equipment was installed and work begun on the day of the celebration. Naturally it was begun on a small scale, but Mrs. Rosenberg and her coworkers, by their very enthusiasm and through the worthiness of the movement (which was recognized immediately, too, by the faculty head at the school and visitors) enlisted the interest and cooperation of twenty women's clubs and church organizations throughout the city and thus made possible the carrying on and enlargement of the movement which, with its present impetus, bids fair to become all city reaching in its scope. There have also been any number of voluntary donations from individuals.

Each day the work is managed by two members of the parent organization and two from the cooperating clubs which lends not only these workers but gives the sum of money required for that day's free milk.

Four Gallons Distributed.

Four gallons of milk a day is the amount regularly distributed free to those children who are unable to pay and almost an equal amount daily has been sold at 3 cents a glass or two for 5 cents (the actual cost of the milk) to the children able to buy. The latter was rather uphill work as the children had been accustomed to buying soft drinks with their nickels and had to be taught the value of milk drinking. Pretty soon an improvement became evident not only in the looks and health of the children, but in their mentality.

If one doubts this statement he has only to be shown some of the children. It has been a pleasant sight for visitors dropping in at first recess to see the crowds of children drinking glasses of foaming milk and munching the crackers that go with it. The little folks kneel at low tables or sit in groups on the floor, coming back for glasses to be refilled as long as the supply holds out, and one hears "thank you for a cracker, thank you for a cracker" as long as there are crackers to be seen. The older children stand about the hall and yard enjoying theirs. In April of this year, the Elks having become interested in the work, subscribed a liberal monthly donation to sponsor the opening of another milk center at Linwood school. The work was begun immediately and is carried on there just as at the North Highlands school.

Colored People Interested.

The colored people of the city became interested in the work and voluntarily bestirred themselves by enlisting the cooperation of Mrs. Rosenberg to establish a station at Claflin school.

They have a well organized center and conduct the work themselves, their only outside help being the daily purchase of the milk for them by Mrs. Rosenberg.

During the summer months while the school buildings are closed the milk will be delivered to the homes of those children most in need of physical upbuilding whose parents cannot afford to buy it for them.

Other children who have been buying milk all year have promised to drink it all summer instead of cold drinks.

It is the aim of the organization to have its own small building on the North Highlands school grounds by next year so the work can carry on from these during school holiday periods as well as at other times and plans for same are already in the hands of Mrs. Rosenberg.

President's Report.

Mrs. H. Julius is president of the Jewish Ladies' Aid society and in her report says:

"We are strictly a charitable organization as as our dues are small, we must always be on the alert to raise funds to carry on our work. The three milk stations which were originated by our club are still functioning in a splendid manner due to the wonderful cooperation of many other clubs and organizations. During the past two years some of our funds were raised by catering for suppers and carrying on a rummage sale, raffling cakes and giving card parties.

"We do constructive charity by aiding families to get on their feet and teaching them how to live. We contribute to many hospitals and institutions in and out of the city and cheer the patients at the city hospital by taking flowers and magazines to them each week. Annually we give a picnic for the children of the Columbus Orphans' home and also treat the inmates of the poor farm to some delicacy and some form of entertainment."

Hoschton Club President

Mrs. Myron B. Allen, of Hoschton, who was reelected president of the Hoschton Woman's club. She has recently been appointed ninth district chairman of press and publicity.

Women Voters Call Meetings Of Various Ward Committees

The League of Women Voters' ninth ward committee on lists will meet with their chairman, Mrs. Marvin Williams, at headquarters, 356-7 Candler annex, Tuesday, July 27, at 9:30 o'clock to compile complete data on the registration lists for their ward. As this work is very important for the success of ward plans for the next few months, each member is urged to be present.

The organization committee of the league, with Miss Eleanor Raoul chairman, will hold its monthly meeting at headquarters Wednesday, July 28, at 10:30 o'clock. It is imperative that every ward officer in the city be present or be represented by a member from her ward.

The finance committee will hold its weekly meeting at headquarters on Thursday, July 29, at 1:30 o'clock.

The League of Women Voters' pilgrim staff committee, composed of Mrs. S. D. Halley, editor; Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, president of the Georgia league; Mrs. L. G. Algee, secretary of the Georgia league; Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the Atlanta league; Mrs. A. R. Brittain, secretary of the Atlanta league, and Miss Eleanore Raoul, executive director of the Atlanta league, held a conference at headquarters Saturday morning, July 24, at 9:30 o'clock.

Among the most interesting of the series of luncheons being given during the summer months by various league members was the luncheon given by Miss Lucy Nagle, of 218 Westminster drive, Thursday, July 22. Among the guests were Mrs Earl Scott, Mrs. W. H. McAloney, Mrs. Claude A. McGinnis and Mrs. William L. Hunnicutt.

At a recent meeting of the third ward league it was decided to change the monthly meetings into a series of citizenship classes to be held throughout the summer. The first of this series will be held at the league headquarters at 3 o'clock on Thursday, July 29. The classes are in charge of Mrs. Guy L. Sink, executive secretary, and the third ward officers, who are working together for better league organization. Mrs. R. L. Turman, who edited the book, "Studies in Citizenship for Georgia Women," which will be used during the course, will be guest of honor and a speaker at the first meeting. Although the lessons were first planned for the third ward only, so much interest has been expressed in regard to them the invitation has been extended to members of all wards to attend. Members of the fourth, seventh and tenth wards, which will not hold a meeting during July, are especially invited to participate.

Plans are under way for Mrs. George A. Matson, parliamentarian of the Atlanta league, to give a short course on parliamentary law to the representatives from the 12 wards during this instruction. This will probably take place in October and ward officers are urged to bend every effort to have a parliamentarian appointed by that time.

Earl House Student Aid Club Is Distinctive Feature

Mrs. J. T. Earl, of Clayton, has brought into the Georgia federation an interesting club which has its locale at the Earl House which has for a long time, been a distinctive feature of the summer colony left at Clayton.

Story Is Told.

The story of this new organization is fully told by Mrs. Earl as follows:

"The Earl House Student Aid organization, formerly the Bleckly Memorial School Improvement club. The burning of the administration building in September, 1923, discontinued the school.

"In order to retain the history a few of the graduates, the Earl House guests and Mrs. Earl are having round table talks during the summer and accepting free will offerings for Tallulah Falls and other mountain schools. No committees and no reports to be made except for education."

(Signed)
MRS. J. T. EARL, Director.

Clayton is the county seat of Rabun, one of the two counties in which Tallulah Falls school is located and so, it is very suitable that Clayton should help for in so doing they are helping their own.

Many of the girls and boys who live in the school-home are from the mountains directly around Clayton and Rabun county contributes from its school fund to the teachers' salary fund of the school which is also the day school of all Rabun children within walking distance during the nine months' session.

Interesting Colony.

The Earl House has an interesting artists' colony each summer and one of the first services of the new club to the school is the gift of art instruction to one of the best girls of the Tallulah Falls school home. Annie Taylor was chosen for this pleasant opportunity and will spend some weeks at the Earl House under the care of Mrs. Earl and in touch with the Earl House Student Aid organization.

School and Community Is Slogan of Union Club.

In the beginning will say the Union Improvement club of Harris county is the only rural club in the fourth district, and was organized in 1920 with eighteen members and at this writing every woman with a very few exceptions, within a radius of three miles from the clubroom is enrolled and active. The clubroom is in the school building, located nine miles east of West Point, 12 miles west of Chipley, and 12 miles south of LaGrange. Those who attended the district convention here in 1921 and the Tallulah Falls school barbecue in 1925, well remember it. The most of the activities have been for the school and community, and the club paid for the heating of the auditorium when the furnace was placed in the school building, put 300 opera chairs in the auditorium, piano in the music room, furnished desks for one classroom, equipped a laboratory, the proceeds of a barbecue furnished money to repair teacherage, and a $65 donation to Tallulah Falls school.

A domestic science room was furnished, paid our pro rata part in a lighting plant which lights the school building and the church across the road. The civic committee inclosed the cemetery and beautified it and the church grounds, and the club takes delight in furnishing scholarships to any girl desiring to attend Camp Wilkins. Five farm women spent the week for farm women at Camp Wilkins. The club sponsors a two days' short course every spring, and a canning course every summer, and sponsored the first community fair in the district.

Since then two other clubs have joined and now these three clubs of Harris county finance the Tri-County fair, which includes, Troup, Merriwether and Harris counties. Largely through the efforts of the county home demonstration agent these three clubs won the first, second and third prizes at the Chattahoochee Valley exposition in 1925.

An opportunity is never allowed to pass to help those in need. The amount raised since the organization is $3,045.63. The women are banded together for the public good.

Columbus City Federation Activities.

The city federation has had two very active years and usually begins the year's work by taking charge of the woman's department of the Chattahoochee Valley fair, thereby making a nice sum for the treasury. An overwhelming vote for various bonds and the buying of pole seals marks the past two years. In connection with various other organizations, it has helped our oldest member, the Jewish Ladies' Aid (nearly 52 years old) to keep in continuous operation milk stations for undernourished children. These were established to celebrate the club's 50th anniversary.

The second Naegele competitive art exhibit and court of awards was held last year, purchasing one of Balton Jones' pictures. Last year, too, one of the clubs sponsored the Wilford S. Conrow exhibit of oil paintings. This year Mr. Naegele brought an exhibit of oil portraits and the court of awards and the club expects to resume the competitive exhibit next year.

The chautauqua is always sponsored in connection with the Parent-Teacher association.

Sacrifice or tag day for better babies is another annual federation activity, the funds collected being turned over to the Public Health Nurse association, and there is a week's demonstration of a model home. This year the effort was to show it is perfectly possible to have a comfortable, convenient, prettily furnished home with nice lot in good location for $5,000. The most important of all the work of 1924-25 was trying to raise our quota for Greater Tallulah while seeking the usual gifts. The most important of 1925-26 work has been redeeming the pledge of $5,000 made several years ago, but put aside for more pressing matters. Starting June, 1925, with approximately $1,500 on hand for that special purpose, by means of a woman's drive, a ca. sold, a rummage sale, a football game, an all-girls' field meet, the net proceeds of the closing dance recital of Miss Dozier's classes and the amounts the clubs assessed themselves, we hope and expect to declare at our open meeting, June 11, "it is finished."

Night School Work Is Carried on At Good Will Center

The activities of the Good Will industries have not changed materially from last year except a better cooperation and understanding exists among the members, officers and supervisor.

Most every one knows that this organization was the outgrowth of the free garden work which was carried on for thirty years in this same community, 1322 Twelfth avenue in Columbus. The present officers are: Mrs. John T. Fletcher, president; Mrs. J. P. Golden, first vice president; Mrs. J. C. Alexander, second vice president; Mrs. O. C. Bullock, third vice president; Mrs. B. J. Ryan, fourth vice president; Mrs. Early H Johnson, recording secretary; Mrs. James P. Kyle, corresponding secretary; Miss Lizzie Hall, treasurer and supervisor.

The purpose of the Good Will work is to stimulate interest among the people living in this community—it gives a chance and not charity. Most important in this work is the night school, operating three nights per week, for those who wish to be taught more of the "three Rs" and textile mathematics. There is no age limit, from 16 up. Miss Hall gave 235 reading lessons in the various homes where mothers could not leave their home duties. The Public Health Nurse association holds a weekly clinic in the Good Will building. Miss Hall gives the nurse such assistance as needed. There were 48 clinics held besides 18 social meetings. The Blue Birds' club of girls are the pride of the Good Will Center and have been taught to embroider, do practical sewing and handcraft. Mrs. C. B. Tomb's splendid leadership with the Camp Fire Girls has taught them to be skilled in many lines. Mr. Daniel, scoutmaster, and Harry M. Littleton, scout executive, are doing splendid work with the boys. Some of the Boy Scouts have taken a great interest in this work. There is the interdenominational Sunday school held at 2 p. m. and is well attended. The children enjoyed the Easter egg hunt and a Christmas tree was given to the Sunday school and community, which was made possible by interested people.

Our work is financed by individual contributions, also from some of our church societies, the Young People's Missionary society of St. Luke's church, the Baptist Aid society, First Presbyterian Bible class. We went into the Community Chest and they made a desperate effort to give us part of what was asked for to finance the work, but finding that they could not has handicapped us to a great extent. The managers, knowing the need in this community, are going on, feeling that the money will come in some way for such good work. It takes $102 per month to carry on the work.

We have in connection with the Good Will the Good Will industries; this work is self-supporting. We distribute bags to people in the city, asking them to fill and return to the Good Will industries with old clothing, furniture and cast-off material of any kind. In this way men and women who cannot get work elsewhere on account of some physical trouble, are paid to put these articles in a salable condition. In turn we sell them for a small profit; in this way we give them a chance and not charity.

There are three members appointed to visit the Good Will each month and we are hoping to increase the interest to such an extent that people will see the great need.

We are hoping to get the money to install a bathtub and shower bath at the Good Will building.

Respectfully,
MRS. JOHN T. FLETCHER,
President.
MRS. EARLY H. JOHNSON,
Recording Secretary.

Miss Carrie Green Makes Urgent Request.

To the clubs of the seventh district: According to the plan outlined by our state chairman, Mrs. Battey, this is the month when our district remembers our boys who are sick in Augusta with boxes that prove we do not forget their sacrifice for us. I realize it is vacation time for the club, but judging from the interest in the past feel it only necessary to remind our district these ex-service men are looking for our expression of loving sympathy. Send the boxes to Mrs. Battey, state chairman for ex-service men. She will see they are properly dispensed. Remember how long a ray a small light can cast in a dark place. These men envy those in Flanders fields. Let our gifts carry a message that will make them feel they are not forgotten. Please do so at once or report to Carrie W. Green, seventh district, chairman of ex-service men.

G. F. W. C. Appointments Made For January Consideration

The general federation committee reports the following readjustment for the consideration of the board in January next but which probably will be adopted in toto. Since the reclassification simplifies and readjusts the work, the report of the committee will in all probability be accepted.

Club Editor Makes Statement

The club editor takes this opportunity to express to the clubwomen of the fourth district, appreciation of the data sent for the page last Sunday and to state that the material telling of the wonderful activities of the district far exceeded the allotted space. In view of this fact, the data left over appears on the club page today. Copy was selected to fit the space last Sunday and there was no possible way of editing the data down to fit the columns so as to get it all in the page of July 18.

Royston Woman's Club Gives Picnic for Juniors.

The president of the Royston Woman's club, Mrs. Stewart D. Brown, ever desirous of observing all patriotic days in the best way possible, and ever mindful of the fact that the young people of today are the clubwomen of tomorrow, the president with their leader, Mrs. Starks Ginn, planned a picnic Saturday afternoon for the Bluebirds and members of the Woman's club.

About two miles from Royston there is a beautiful swimming pool located in a grove of lovely oak trees. Long tables have been built, at the nearby spring, for the convenience of the surrounding community to come and enjoy an outing. To this lovely place club members and the Bluebirds motored Saturday afternoon to swim, to enjoy a picnic lunch, and, best of all, to observe the fourth of July with a patriotic program.

The following program was given: Rev. J. O. Brand very interestingly gave "The Origin of the Fourth of July;" Mrs. J. A. Dyar talked to the Bluebirds of their work; how they were appreciated and what their efforts to help in the great work meant to them and to the club women. She then read an interesting paper on "The Birth of the Flag." "America the Beautiful," was sung. "Your Flag and My Flag" was given beautifully by Frances Turner, president of the Bluebirds.

This department of the Woman's club is a bright, breezy band of girls from 8 to 13 years, who are ever ready at the president's call to give real, worth while service.

Officers of the Royston Woman's club include:

President, Mrs. Stewart D. Brown; first vice president, Mrs. J. F. Lee; second vice president, Miss Vera McConnell; recording secretary and press reporter, Mrs. Jep Winn; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Arthur Ray; treasurer, Miss Sallie Veal; historian, Mrs. L. N. McWhorter; parliamentarian, Mrs. Don T. Barnes; civics, Mrs. L. W. Dorough; forestry, Mrs. Sallie Veal; art, Mrs. E. N. Bowers; entertainment, Mrs. R. M. Turner; public welfare, Mrs. Sam Bowers; citizenship, Mrs. Lee Turner; legislation, Mrs. J. A. Dyar; child welfare, Mrs. C. C. Fain; music, Mrs. S. F. Ginn; flowers and wreaths, Mrs J. F. Lee; resolutions, Mrs. G. T. Ridgway; sick, Miss Bernie Forbes; home economics, Mrs. Charles Wilder; road beautifying, Mrs. W. G. Brock; scrap book, Mrs. J F. Barnes' membership, Miss Vera McConnell; program, Mrs. D. T. Barnes; club room and finance, Mrs. Charlie Weatherly.

Birthday Gifts For Tallulah School.

July is the birth-month of Tallulah Falls school and its friends are accustomed to sending special gifts at this time.

Personal as well as club gifts are in order and Mrs. David Woodward has sent $250 from Watertown, Conn., where she and Mr. Woodward and Marian (just returned from Europe) are at their summer home. Mrs. Woodward is a member of the 19th Century club of Atlanta, one of the oldest literary clubs in the state and one which stands out conspicuously in its constant and liberal contributions to Georgia federation's school.

Many clubs are holding social meetings with free-will offerings and giving other celebrations or sending other gifts to honor its child's natal month.

Mrs. J. P. Cobb, president of Ellijay Woman's club writes: "After our club meeting yesterday we had a social hour in honor of our school's birthday and I am sending you the freewill offering which was given at that time. Best wishes for a splendid year."

The Covington Woman's club will celebrate the birthday of the school in August.

The Royston Woman's club will sponsor a swimming party for the school.

LaGrange Woman's Club Owns Fine Clubhouse.

The LaGrange Woman's club was organized in 1908 through the efforts of its first president, the late Mrs. Sallie Cary Jones. It was divided into the usual departments of civics, literature, music, domestic science, etc. Through the civics department, the club originated and sponsored "clean-up week" for the town and was instrumental in getting the first garbage wagons installed. It also maintained a public restroom until recent years.

The literature and music departments have produced some splendid entertainments and concerts during the years and have been most fortunate in the assistance of the artists of the college faculties. The members of these departments have brought many celebrated speakers and musicians to LaGrange. Twelve years ago the club bought its own home, one of the oldest colonial homes in the city, which was remodeled and has been used for many civic purposes.

It is fitting to say at this point in the rapid resume of the activities of the club that, while the need of a public library had been manifested in many instances and keenly felt by many club members, to Mrs. Clifford L. Smith belongs the honor of recognition as the presiding genius of nearly every effort of the club toward that end. Previous to the great war she had called to her aid a number of faithful workers and had launched the plan for a library. The fruition of this plan was delayed by the war, at which time this club, like all others, bent its every energy and resource to aid the various measures connected with the great upheaval.

Five years ago a very small beginning of a library was made through gifts, the chief of these being the library of the defunct Southern Female college, which was donated by the R. L. Ryder family. The woman's club organized the library and gave the use of its clubroom, the rental of the other apartments in the old mansion, as well as all the club dues, in order to maintain and house the library. The club has continued this maintenance with the aid of a small sum appropriated by the city during the last three years.

Two years ago J. H. Edmondson, a capitalist of the city, moved by the efforts of the women and the need of a real library building, generously offered to give $5,000 if the city would raise the sum of $10,000. After many efforts and much advertising, several members of the club presented the cause of the library to the Rotary club. This organization heartily indorsed it and put on so intensive a campaign that a sum of $25,000 was in one day raised in the city of LaGrange for a new library building. The American Legion also assisted whole-heartedly with its time and money and it was decided to make the building a memorial to Troup county soldiers.

A beautiful plan of a very modern and convenient library, connected with the Woman's club rooms, was drawn by Ivy & Crook. The trustees have been elected, a charter provided and the contract let. The Woman's club gave its valuable site; the old house has been demolished and the beautiful new library will be ready for occupancy by the 15th of October next.

The citizens of LaGrange have given generously and all the civic and patriotic organizations have contributed to the cause, but it is chiefly through the efforts of a faithful membership of the Woman's club during many discouraging years that this handsome building, with an adequate library and artistic furnishings, has been made possible for the city.

While the club has carried on its literary pursuits, assisted in every civic enterprise and fulfilled its district and federation obligations, every member feels that the supreme ambition of the club is about to be realized in achieving this library, which will be of untold usefulness not only to this generation by to many yet to come.

In conclusion, we are moved to stress again the need of praise which the organization and the city gave and unanimously accord to Mrs. Clifford L. Smith, who has been twice recalled to the presidency and who during the three terms of administration has given 11 years of service as president of the club and whose untiring spirit has kept alive the dream when often hope seemed to be dead, and who would vigorously and most ardently deprecate this just estimate and recognition of her value to the community and state.

Bathing Suits Are Given To Tallulah School

Thanks most sincerely to all who have responded to the appeal through the club page for bathing suits to enable our children to enjoy the swimming pool you have built for them at your school.

Many sections of the state are represented every afternoon when the bell is rung at 5 o'clock (fast time) to announce "pool time."

The greatest number came from our ever-faithful and loyal friends, in Savannah, who through Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Wood, gathered up a goodly store of suits by which south Georgia children are giving joy unspeakable every day to their brothers and sisters of the mountains.

Other gifts from other sources can not be mentioned by name, but are all heartily appreciated.

Please continue to send suits. Some children are still swimming in overalls!

And September soon will be here with its crowd most anxious on hot afternoons for their cooling plunge, and swim.

MRS. Z. I. FITZPATRICK.

State Treasurer Resumes Her Duties

Mrs. A. P. Brantley announces with gratification the recovery from illness of Mrs. W. W. Stark, treasurer of the Georgia federation. Mrs. Stark will resume her duties as treasurer at once. During Mrs. Stark's illness Miss Julia M. Sparks ably carried on the work of this office.

Interest on Note Due in August To State Federation

Mrs. W. W. Stark reports that the next payment of interest on the note owed by the Georgia federation to the bank is due early in August. This debt has decreased so appreciably that with a little extra effort the payment in August can be made large enough to wipe out the debt entirely. To those who subscribed to this fund at Augusta and who have not as yet sent in their checks, the director asks that they be sent to Mrs. Stark, and to those clubs which have not answered the appeal we again ask that a contribution be sent to Mrs. Stark. It is the ambition of the president, the director, the treasurer—indeed, of the whole federation—that we start the fall work with this indebtedness wiped out entirely. Individual as well as club help is needed and will be most gratefully received.

Letters have been sent out to those who subscribed at Augusta, the returns are most gratifying, but every penny of that subscription is needed at once, as well as an extra effort on the part of clubs and individuals in order that we may wipe this debt off the slate before fall. Indeed, it would be wonderful to clear the matter up with the August payment. Send checks to Mrs. W. W. Stark, Commerce, Ga.

MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
Director in the General Federation.

Dallas Woman's Club Holds July Meeting.

The July meeting of the Dallas Woman's club was one of unusual interest. Mrs. Joe I. Matthews was in charge of the program, which was on "Independence," and was opened by the singing of "America the Beautiful." Miss Bessie Crew gave a delightful reading entitled "Birthday of the Flag;" this was followed by a playlet, "Our First Flag," sponsored by Mrs. W. C. Sams and beautifully given by Zuma Holland, Frances Bagby, Radford Johns, Joe Matthews and Billy Hay. Mrs. O. J. Withrow read an original paper, "The Price They Paid for Signing." The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung as a quartet by Mrs. Waitcel Bulloch, Mrs. C. A. Hart, Mrs. Claude Rainwater and Mrs. Jesse Cooper.

The club voted at this meeting to sponsor the Poultry club of this county for the year and in addition to the club sponsoring it as a whole, each member has adopted two poultry club members to encourage and be especially interested in. This feature of the club work is being entered into most enthusiastically and much benefit and pleasure is expected from this close association of the two clubs.

The Woman's club will observe the week of July 24-31 as a week to give aid to the disabled veterans of the world war.

A booth will be placed uptown in a conspicuous place and gifts will be solicited by a competent committee in charge.

The club has met with much encouragement in this undertaking and a box of luxuries will be shipped to the Veterans' hospital at Augusta at an early date.

State President Addresses Class.

Mrs A. P. Brantley delivered an address to the graduating class of nurses at the state sanitarium at Milledgeville Wednesday evening, July 21.

Mrs. Albert Hill Takes Active Part.

Mrs. Albert M. Hill, of Greenville, has been an important figure in the club life of the fourth district and of the state and her absence in Florida is a serious loss and is deeply regretted by all her associates in club work.

She served as district president from 1917 to 1919, and during her administration the fourth was awarded the gavel for federating more new clubs than any other district in the state. In 1919 she became state recording secretary, in which capacity she served most efficiently for four years. In 1923 she was elected state treasurer, which office she held until the recent convention in Augusta, when she declined to accept reelection on account of absence from the state. Her charm of manner, modesty, sincerity and brilliance of intellect made association with her a pleasure, her fine business ability fitted her preeminently for the exacting duties of these offices and her sound judgment made her advice a valuable asset to her colleagues. The fourth district is proud of her ability and her achievements and hopes that she will soon resume her place among us.

Atlanta Club Women Attend Beulah Rally.

An educational rally was held at Beulah Consolidated school Wednesday under the auspices of the newly-organized Beulah Woman's club. The program was in charge of the Woman's club, Mrs. S. McGarrity presiding. An all-day meeting was held, with picnic dinner in the grove. Among the speakers were J. O. Martin and Miss Lurline Parker, from the state board of education, and Mrs. Charles McGarrity, president of the Seventh District Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Ira Farmer, chairman home demonstration work, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. McGarrity spoke on "Federation," and Mrs. Farmer spoke on "Rural Clubs."

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson and Mrs. Ira Farmer spoke Thursday at the Fourth District A. & M. school, Carrollton, where the short course for farm women is being held by Miss Lucile Turner, district agent, and Mrs. Whatley, county demonstration agent. Mrs. Richardson spoke on "Christian Citizenship," and Mrs. Farmer spoke on "Rural Organization and Cooperation."

O. E. S. Patrol Will Present Musical Program

The Eastern Star patrol of Atlanta will present a very interesting musical program and drill Thursday evening, July 29, at 8 o'clock, to be held at the W. D. Luckie Masonic temple, West End, Atlanta. The Eastern Star patrol was organized June 23, 1926, at the North Atlanta chapter with full attendance of the drill team. Officers were elected, chairmen have been appointed and many interesting plans made for the coming year.

As this is the first program to be rendered by the new Eastern Star patrol, it is hoped that many will be in attendance. The following musical selections and readings will be presented: Piano duet, by Miss Nell White and Miss Jessie White; violin solo, by Miss Louise Carter, accompanied by Mrs. W. J. Gower at the piano; dance by little Miss McArva Allen, Mrs. W. J. Gower accompanying her at the piano; drill, by Eastern Star patrol; vocal solo, by Miss Eline Yeast; instrumental solo, by Miss Gussie Wooten; musical selection by Miss Margaret Wakefield and Miss Leila Landers; dance, by Miss Margaret Wakefield; reading, by Mrs. Myrtice Beattie; quartet, by Miss Vera Tollerson, Miss Lena Tollerson, Mr. Bradberry and Mrs. Rogers.

The public is invited to attend. The small admission of 25 cents will be charged. The proceeds from this entertainment will be used entirely for charitable purposes and the drill.

Council of Women Issues Meeting Call For Wednesday

The Civic Council of Women has issued a call to representative women throughout the state to be present in the senate chamber of the state capitol Wednesday, July 28, at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a state law enforcement committee, which in turn will immediately affiliate with the national law enforcement committee, thereby becoming a part of the great nation-wide movement for law enforcement.

Those who are thoroughly in sympathy with law enforcement, either men or women, are welcome and urged to be present. Those not in sympathy with enforcing the rules and principles which were designed for protection of society and to carry on civilization itself are not desirable.

Several prominent speakers will be present who will lead in a general discussion of the various departments of government, local, state and national, under which we are governed and furnish information concerning the law enforcement agencies at our command.

Luncheon will follow the morning session which will adjourn at one o'clock. The afternoon session will be devoted entirely to business.

Miss Ruth Averett Weds Mr. Moore.

Mrs. Frederick Averett announces the marriage of her daughter, Ruth, to John Joel Moore, on Saturday, July 17.

The marriage took place at 10 o'clock Saturday morning and the ceremony was performed by Dr. W. W. Memmenger in the presence of immediate relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore left for a wedding journey to points in North Carolina, and after September 1, will be at home with the bride's mother, Mrs. Averett, at her home, 590 Virginia avenue. The bride and her mother are former residents of Birmingham, Ala., having only resided in Atlanta for several months.

Miss Josie Woods Weds Mr. Eller.

The marriage of Miss Josie Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Woods, of Jackson, to Millard Felix Eller, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Eller, of Hiawassee, was solemnized Wednesday, July 14, at 6:30 o'clock.

Dr. H. M. Frigate, of the Tattnall Square Baptist church, Macon, officiated. The ring ceremony was used.

The bride, who is a charming young woman of the blonde type, was gowned in a fall model of blue satin with trimmings of tan, hat and accessories to match.

The groom is an honor graduate of Hiawassee Junior college. He later attended Mercer university, Macon.

After a few days' visit with the bride's parents they left for points of interest in north Georgia and North Carolina, after which they will reside at Hiawassee.

HE HEARD A RUSTLE AMONG THE LEAVES, THE GRASS SLOWLY PARTED, AND A LION LEAPED TOWARD HIM. RAISING HIS BIG-GAME RIFLE TO HIS SHOULDER HE FIRED AND THE GREAT ANIMAL FELL DEAD AT HIS FEET.

GEE, GRAMMA, I'D LIKE TO HUNT LIONS!

WHERE YOU GOIN' WITH THAT POPGUN, SKEEZIX?

THAT AIN'T A POPGUN. IT'S A BIG-GAME RIFLE AN' I'M GOIN' TO HUNT LIONS.

I'M GOIN' RIGHT INTO THE JUNGLE AFTER 'EM. I HAVEN'T GOT ANY AFRICAN BOYS TO CHASE 'EM AROUND WHERE I CAN SHOOT 'EM.

SNEAK UP ON 'EM, THAT'S THE ONLY WAY. YOU GOTTA S'PRISE 'EM OR YOU CAN'T GET NEAR 'EM.

THERE! I CAN SEE ONE NOW. I MUSTN'T MISS THIS SHOT OR HE'LL 'TACK ME.

I GOT HIM! RIGHT BEHIND THE EAR!

POP

WELL I GUESS IT WASN'T A LION AT ALL. IT WAS ONLY A COUPLE O' ROCKS.

YOW!

OO! IT WAS A BIG LION! I KNOW IT WAS! I SAW HIM— HIS MANE AN' TEETH AN' EVERYTHING.

HE ISN'T GOIN' TO FOLLOW ME OUT OF THE WOODS. I GOT HIM SCARED.

OH, WELL, I GUESS I'LL STAY OUT HERE AN' HUNT RABBITS. LIONS AREN'T GOOD TO EAT ANYWAY.

WINNIE WINKLE
THE BREADWINNER

JUMPIN' JUPITER! I HOPE THAT AIN'T MY MUSIC TEACHER COMIN' TO GIVE ME A LESSON !!!

CLANG CLANG

AMBULANCE

YOUR MUSIC TEACHER IS DUE HERE ANY MINUTE NOW, SO DON'T TRY TO SNEAK OUT OR YOU KNOW WHAT YOU WILL GET!

R-RING R-RING R-R-RING

AW- MUSIC!! PIANO!! WHO TH' DEUCE WANTS TO STAY IN AN' POUND A PIANO ON A FINE DAY LIKE THIS?!

HELLO? THIS MISS SNACKENBURG? OH GRACIOUS!! GOOD HEAVENS!! YOU DON'T SAY! OH ISN'T THAT TOO BAD!! ALL RIGHT, I'LL TELL PERRY!!

SUMP'N HAPPENED TO MY PIANO TEACHER!! GOOD FOR HER!!!

ISN'T THAT TOO BAD! MISS SNACKENBURG HAD AN ACCIDENT ON HER WAY HERE! SHE HURT HER WRIST!!

HOORAY!! GOODY!!! NO LESSON TO-DAY!!

DON'T FOOL YOURSELF! YOUR MUSIC LESSON WILL ONLY BE DELAYED A LITTLE WHILE! YOUR TEACHER WILL BE HERE SOON

AW! GEE WHIZ!! HOW CAN SHE GIMME A LESSON WITH A BUSTED WRIST ?? !!!

I'M SO SORRY I HAD TO KEEP YOU WAITING, BUT THAT TAXI NEARLY RAN ME OVER.

ISN'T THAT AWFUL! STILL IT'S GOOD IT WASN'T MORE SERIOUS MISS SNACKENBURG!

GR-RR-RRR! GR-RRR!

MAYBE WE OUGHT'A LET THIS LESSON GO ON ACCOUNT OF YER HAND! GEE, I'D HATE TO SEE YA STRAIN YER SORE HAND!

IT'S AWFULLY SWEET OF YOU PERRY, BUT DON'T WORRY ABOUT MY HAND! GO AHEAD AND PLAY THAT EXERCISE!!

BONG BANG

NO! NOooo!! THAT'S NOT THE WAY TO PLAY IT!! STOP THAT RACKET, PERRY!

AW'RIGHT— HOW WOULD YOU PLAY IT ??

I CAN'T SHOW YOU BECAUSE OF MY BANDAGED WRIST!

WELL THEN HOW DO Y'EXPECT ME TO KNOW HOW TO PLAY IF YA DON'T SHOW ME?

YOUNG MAN, THIS IS A PIANO LESSON, NOT A DEBATE!! TURN AROUND AND DO YOUR EXERCISE!!

BONG BAM ZUNG

WELL, I GUESS THAT WILL BE ENOUGH FOR TO-DAY, PERRY!!

S'POSE YOU'D HAVE BUSTED YER ANKLE, MISS SNACKENBURG, WOULD YOU BEEN ABLE TO COME TO MY HOUSE TO-DAY ??

NO, I WOULD HAVE HAD TO POSTPONE YOUR LESSON — WHY ??

?? PERRY!

WELL, NEX' TIME YA HAVE A' ACCIDENT, WILL YA PLEASE BUST YER ANKLE INSTEAD OF YER WRIST ??

VIEW OF PEACHTREE CREEK LOOKING WEST—Taken from the Peachtree road concrete bridge and showing the city's property which begins on the ridge in the center background where the creek turns. The city's property extends from this ridge to North Side drive more than a half mile beyond.

SCENES FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE CITY'S 125 ACRES ON PEACHTREE CREEK WHICH WITH THE REMOVAL OF THE DISPOSAL PLANT IT IS PROPOSED TO CONVERT INTO A PUBLIC PARK AS A MEMORIAL TO THE GREAT BATTLE OF PEACHTREE CREEK, FOUGHT JULY 20, 1864, AS THE FIRST OF THE ENGAGEMENTS AROUND ATLANTA.

SHOWING THE SACRILEGE of the use of this historic spot for a sewage disposal plant which cares for only a small part of the sewage for which it was intended, the untreated part passing into the creek. This identical spot is in almost the center of the battlefield of Peachtree Creek and on this spot thousands of lives were lost in the battle of July 20, 1864. Note the wonderful forest foliage which abounds through his property belonging to the city.

TYPES OF GIANT LIVE OAKS abounding on the city's property on the ridges and in the Peachtree creek valley.

HENDERSON HALLMAN, of the city bond commission, who first suggested the use of the city's land for the establishment of a beautiful public park commemorating the battle of Peachtree creek.

TYPES OF FORESTRY found everywhere on the city's Peachtree creek property. State Forester Lufburrow states to Chairman Henderson Hallman, of the city bond committee dealing with the park proposition, and the original proponent of the park., that on this land is found practically every kind of forestry growth known to the eastern section of the United States.

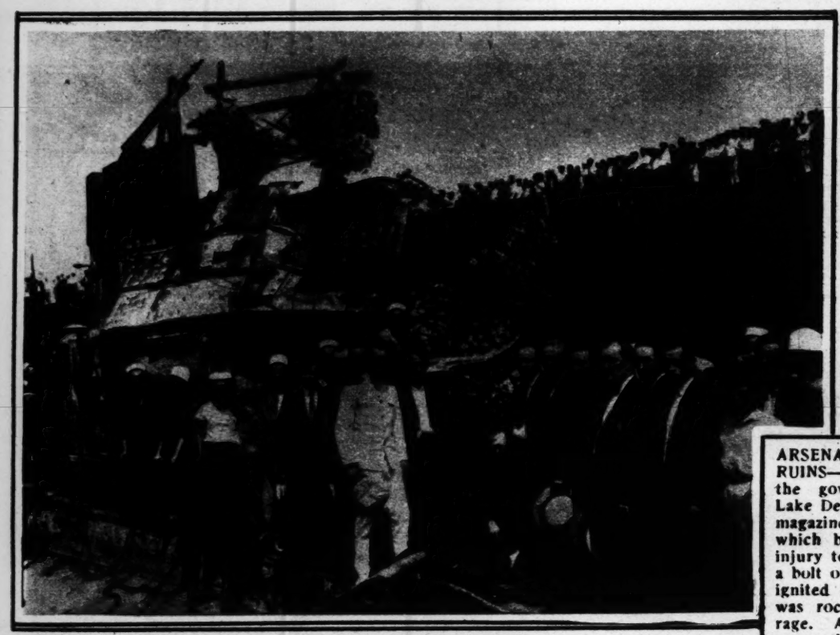

VIEW OF THE CITY'S PROPERTY taken from the famous hill on the Hayne Manor development on the north side of Peachtree creek, and on the spot which was the headquarters of Colonel Benjamin H. Harrison, of Indiana, later president of the United States, who commanded from this point the charge of his regiment to the valley below. For his gallantry in that action, in which he was wounded, he was brevetted as a brigadier general on the field. The creek passes through the valley between the line of pine trees in the foreground and the corn field in the low ground beyond. The ridge beyond, in the background, is owned by the city, a part of the land being used for a sewage disposal plant. Along the ridge in the background General Hood commanded 50,000 Confederates, who charged three times into the valley below, to be met by the federals entrenched along the ridge on the north side of the creek. In this battle 8,000 were left dead or wounded on the field.

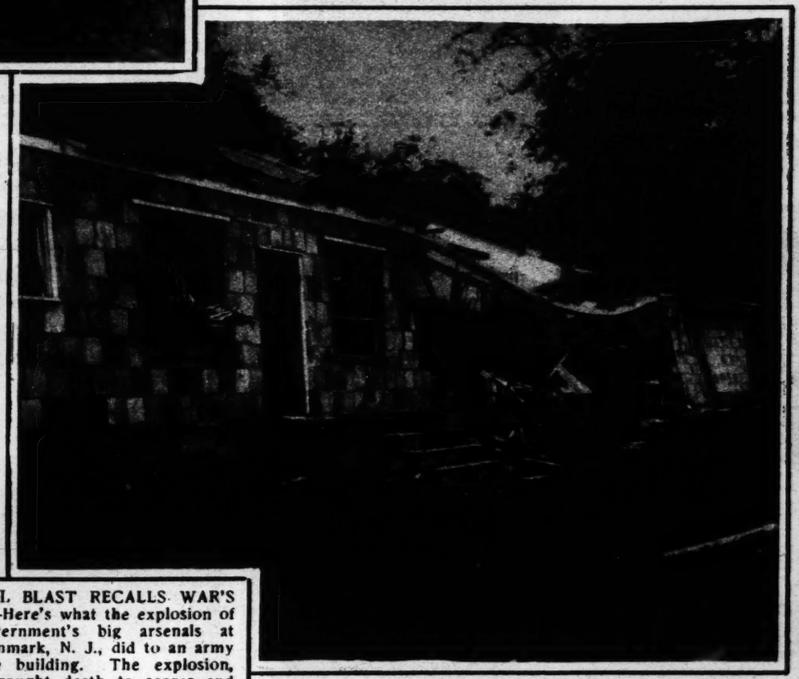

DESOLATION REIGNS WHERE SHELLS RAKED JERSEY—Scene of wreckage near the army and navy arsenal at Lake Denmark following the blast started by a bolt of lightning. This rivals real warfare, veterans of the recent world conflict say. (International)

WARLIKE SCENE—This photograph of the area devastated by the explosion of the arsenals at Lake Denmark, N. J., resembles a battlefield. Shells bursting at short intervals made occupation of the vicinity hazardous. (International)

DEAD OF S-51 HONORED—Flowers were placed on the conning tower of the submarine S-51, now in Brooklyn navy yard after being raised from her watery grave. Thousands paid tribute to the memory of the men who were lost when the vessel was rammed and sunk last fall. (International)

ARSENAL BLAST RECALLS WAR'S RUINS—Here's what the explosion of the government's big arsenals at Lake Denmark, N. J., did to an army magazine building. The explosion, which brought death to scores and injury to many others, resulted from a bolt of lightning. Exploding shells ignited others, until the whole area was rocked with a continuous barrage. At right is another disastrous scene showing how roads were torn up by flying shells, trees were uprooted and fields were laid waste by the bombardment of high-powered shells. (International)

ONE OF THE VICTIMS OF THE GREAT EXPLOSION—Scenes like this were common following the great blast at the Lake Denmark arsenals. Captain E. C. Dowling, one of the officers in charge of the naval arsenal who suffered serious injury, is being led from the Dover, N. J., hospital probably blinded for life. (International)

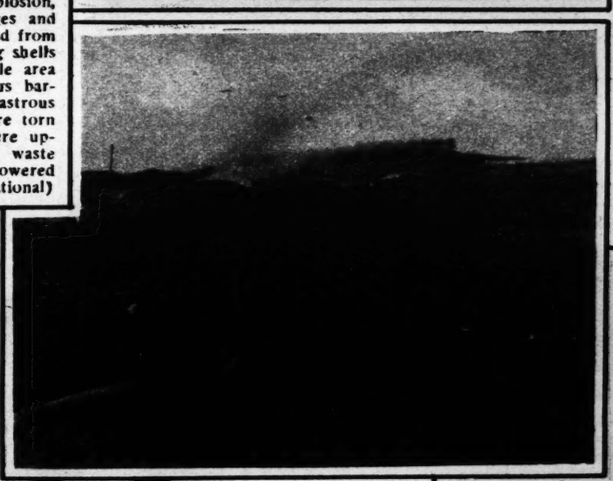

THELMA CONVERSE WEDS—Shortly after her divorce from Theodore Vail Converse, the twin sister of Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, married Viscount Furness, millionaire ship builder. (International)

ANOTHER YANKEE CONQUEROR—"Billy Mac Shane" won the King George V cup for jumping at the recent international horse show in the Olympia in London. (International)

A FLOATING HUMAN TABLE—Norris Kellam, "the human cork," does his stuff in the Oakland City pool with a bottle of soda pop and six glasses of water balanced on various parts of his anatomy. (Holloway)

ELKS PICK A BEAUTY—Jane Marre won over 75 other fetching contestants in a beauty tournament conducted by Elks of Chicago. She says she seldom looks in a mirror. (International)

HUNGRY ARTISTS' EXHIBIT—The famous "Bread Crust Fair" is staged each year by poor Parisian artists, where their paintings are sold for a few francs each. (International)

AMERICAN VENUS POSES—Dorothy Knapp, famous American beauty, is shown posing for Karl Schenken, Austrian artist. The portrait will be exhibited in the Gainsborough galleries. (International)

LARGEST ELK HEAD EVER MOUNTED—Fred Sauter, the expert taxidermist, is here shown with what is probably his most unique trophy.

A QUEER MENAGERIE

Is the collection of beasts and birds owned by Fred Sauter, of New York. Though they look ferocious in some instances, they never bite; they never move, and Mr. Sauter never has to feed them. The answer is that Mr. Sauter is a taxidermist, one of the most dextrous of the world, and his charges are all stuffed and mounted.

The photos are by Herbert.

NOT A DEER RACE—But a row of mounted heads in Mr. Sauter's collection.

FISHES, TOO—Are included in the big collection of mounted animal life.

SMOKING, SWINGING, SIMIANS—But they're stuffed, too.

A DOG CONVENTION—Mr. Sauter had to be well versed in the ways of the various breeds of canines exhibited here to do this splendid bit of taxidermy.

THEY'RE OFF—Not in a race but off their usual stands while the camera photos Sauter's mounted ostriches.

CHARMING SUMMER EVENING COSTUME—American-designed for formal wear. The dress is of printed crepe over an underslip of cream satin with a rich flounce border of chiffon velvet on the skirt. The wrap is of suede lustre cloth, with brocade velvet border.

(Herbert)

FIRST HONOR WINNER—Miss Mary Frances Banks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Banks, who graduated from the Forsyth High school with first honors.

(Rowland)

WOOF! WOOF!—This wolf seems to be ready to spring at Sauter's throat, but the gent with the club really is in no danger.

WHERE FLOODS CLAIMED LIVES OF SCORES—This photo shows the desolation and ruin spread by flood waters in the city of Leon, Mexico. More than sixty bodies were recovered when the debris in the market square was cleared away.

(International)

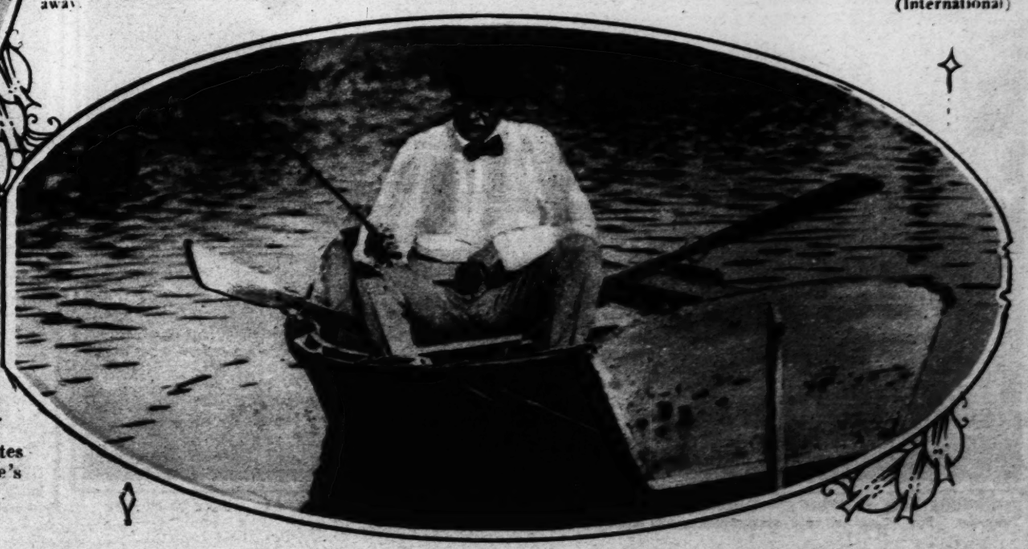

FORSYTH HONOR GRADUATE—Miss Evelyn Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Anderson, who graduated with second honors from Forsyth High school.

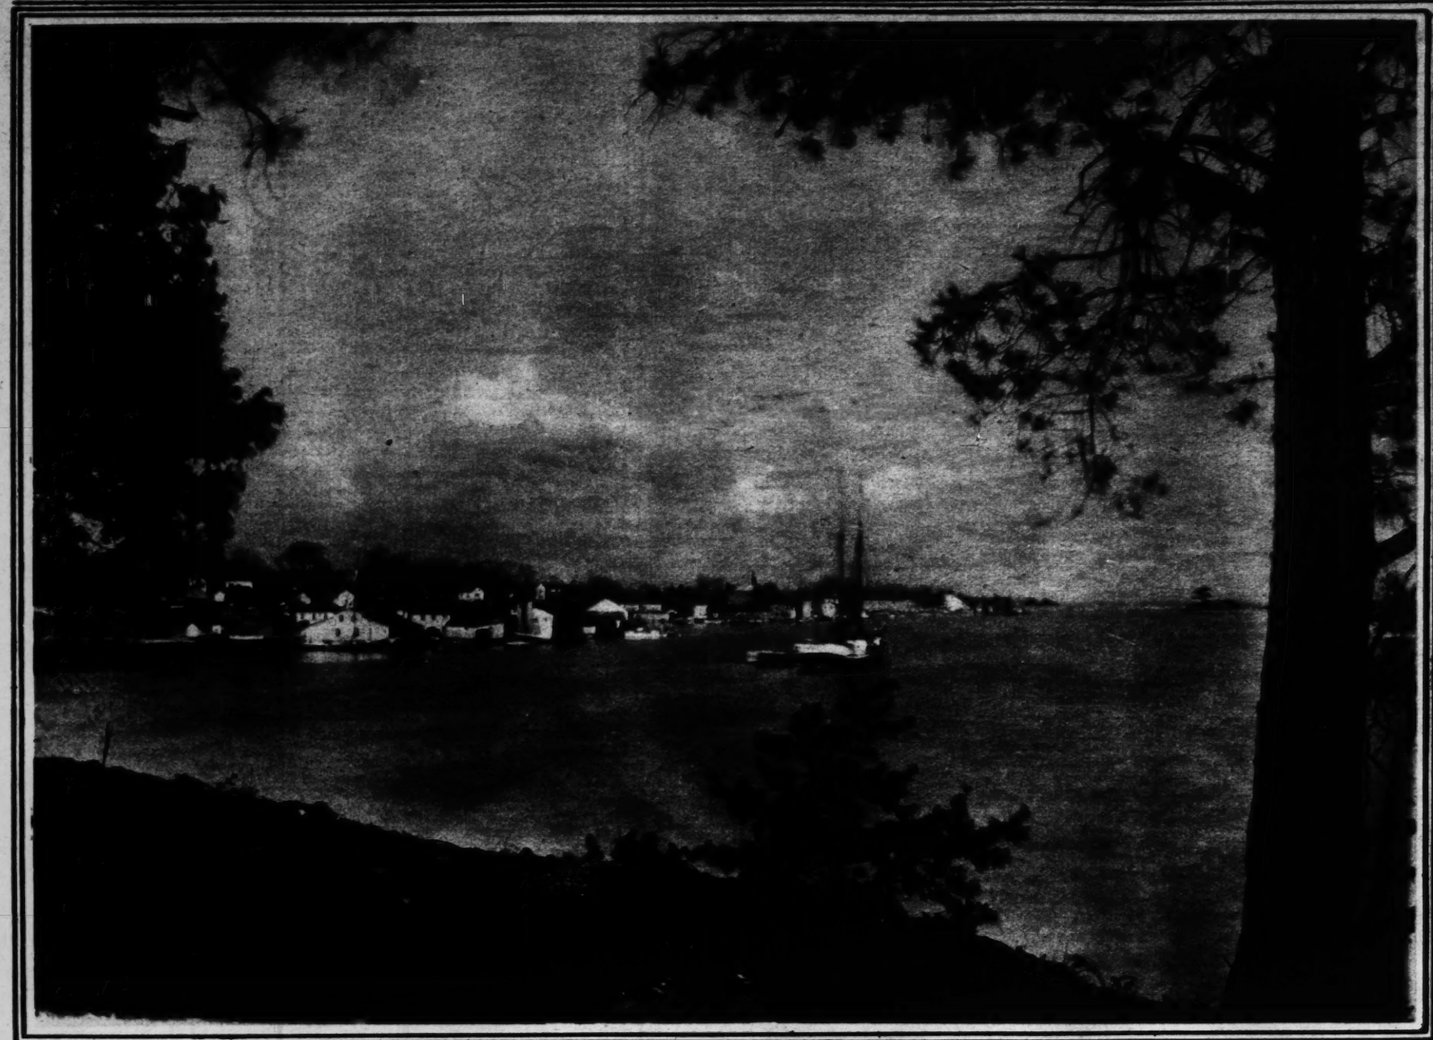

(Rowland)

OH, YES! THE MALE DIVORCEES LOVE HER—Mrs. Margaret Donar (seated), head of the Chicago alimony bureau, established in order to see that all court judgments are properly carried out.

Senator Richard P. Ernst, Kentucky, emulates Izaak Walton and President Coolidge. He's fishing here in the Potomac.

QUAINT OLD VIRGINIA HARBOR—Is Urbanna on the Rappahannock, with its bluffs and picturesque houses and docks. Only a few miles away four presidents of the United States were born. (Bagby, Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.)

ATLANTA GIRL CHARLESTONS WHERE OTHERS FEAR TO CRAWL—Miss Trinx Jackson, The Constitution-Publix theaters Charleston beauty titleholder now playing in John Murray Anderson's "Charleston," does a wee bit of a daring step on the dizzy ledge of the Hotel Sherman while thousands below on Chicago's loop were thrilled. Miss Jackson is directly behind Miss Grace Butterley, Kansas City's strutting titleholder.

SOUTH GEORGIA BOUQUET OF BEAUTIES

Pretty girls of the plains section of the south's Empire state are shown herewith, all having been students at the Georgia State Woman's college at Valdosta last year.

MISS AGNES KING, Waycross.

MISS MARION WISEMAN, Adel.

MISS MAMIE LOU SAPP, Bainbridge.

MISS FRANCES MYRICK, Thomasville.

MISS VERNA SCARBOROUGH, Umadilla.

"ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE"—Selected as one of the 52 greatest paintings of the world, was painted by Nicolas Poussin. For story of this masterpiece, see today's Constitution Magazine.

MISS MARIE CLAYATT, Nashville.

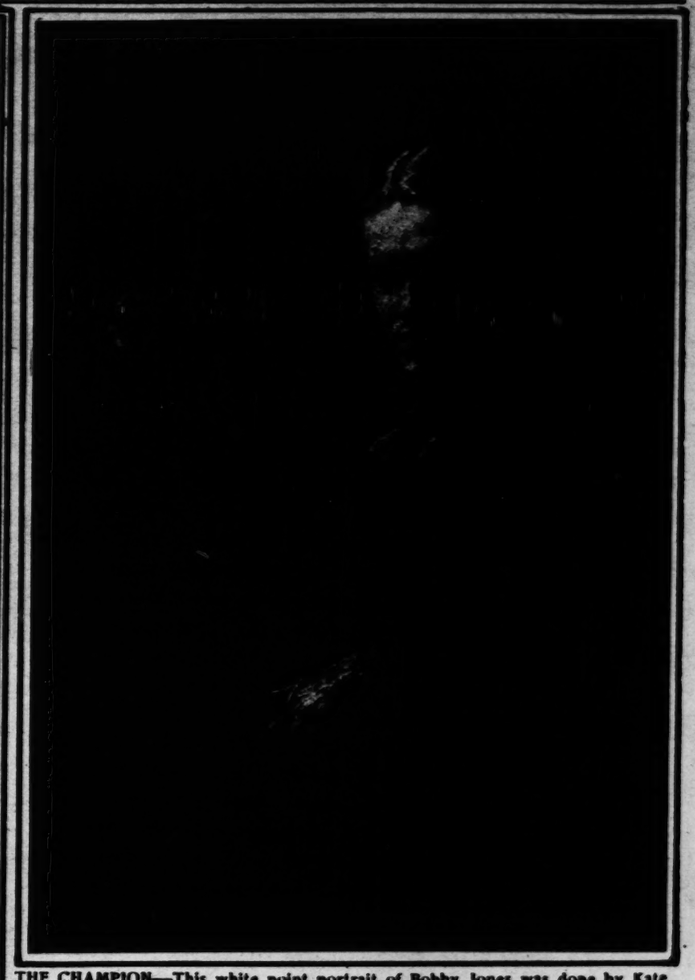

MISS MARY YOUNG, Faceville.

MISS MAY LILLIE TOUCHTON, Lake Park.

THE CHAMPION—This white point portrait of Bobby Jones was done by Kate Edwards, of Atlanta, portrait artist. It is declared to be one of the best portraits ever made of the world's greatest golfer.

TRAIN PLOWS THROUGH TRESTLE INTO RIVER—This scene of tangled wreckage was snapped by Kenneth Rogers at Canton recently when a Louisville & Nashville passenger train fell fifty feet into the Etowah river, killing two members of the train crew and injuring others. The twisted debris of the engine is shown underneath the baggage car on the margin of the mountain stream.

YOU, TOO, MAY LEARN GOLF IN YOUR SPARE MOMENTS—If one believes the claims of the inventor of this adjustable golf club held by none other than Douglas MacLean, of the silver screen. The maker, a Frisco pro, says it can be adjusted for use in any shot. (International)

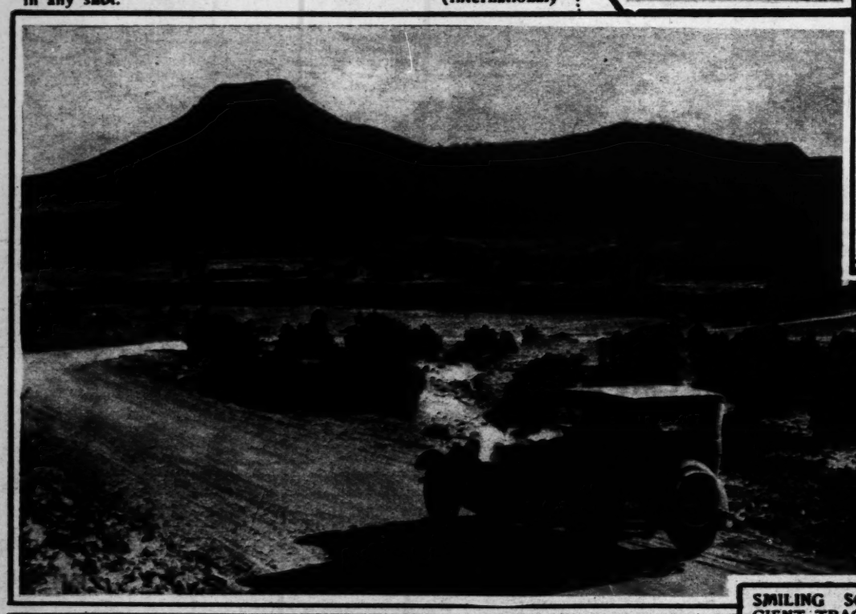

NEW STAR IN FIRMAMENT OF GEORGIA LITERATURE — Miss Mary Granger, of Savannah, daughter of Harvey Granger, whose new book, "The Widow of Ephesus," published by G. P. Putnam, is attracting nation-wide attention. She is a young woman of brilliant attainments and her first effort in the field of fiction assures her brilliant success.

THEY HUNG THEIR COTHES ON A HICKORY LIMB—In order to cut this fetching little caper for the cameraman in decollete bathing suits. Yes, Myrtle, they're members of a popular New York revue. (International)

A CELESTIAL PORTIA—This is Miss Soumi Cheng, a Cantonese lady who was a leader in the overthrow of the Chinese dynasty and who claims the distinction of being the first and only female lawyer in her native land. (International)

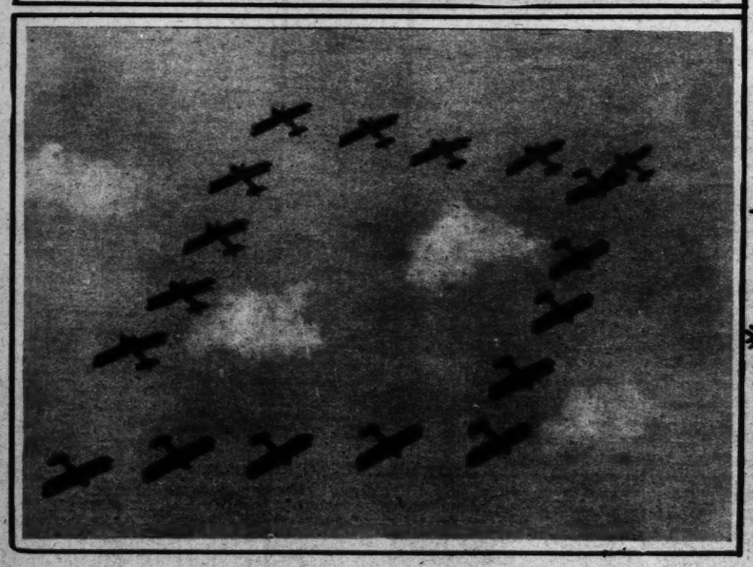

RAGS AND NAILS AND—MAYBE—PUPPY DOG TAILS—All went into the manufacture of this unique table fashioned by William Ginsberg, of Rochester, N. Y. Three thousand pieces of metals and wood were used by the maker, an expert craftsman. (International)

NEW CHAMP TAKES A BRIDE—Sammy Mandell, new lightweight titleholder, is here shown thanking Judge Fred E. Carpenter for performing the ceremony which united him to the former Miss Elizabeth Hemming. (International)

SMILING SCENE OF ANCIENT TRAGEDY—This picturesque scene in New Mexico shows "Starvation Peak" in the background. One thousand eight hundred Spanish pioneers perished on the mountain in the early days of the American continent when they were besieged by Indians. (Pictorial California)

FLIGHT OF THE GRAY GEESE OF WAR—Remarkable photo of a formation of battle planes of the royal air service of Britain. (International)

YALE CHIEF'S DAUGHTER TO WED M'ALPIN—Miss Marion Angell, daughter of the president of Yale university and Mrs. James Rowland Angell, whose engagement to William Rockefeller McAlpin, of Morristown, N. J., is announced. McAlpin is a grandson of the brother of John D. Rockefeller. (Herbert)

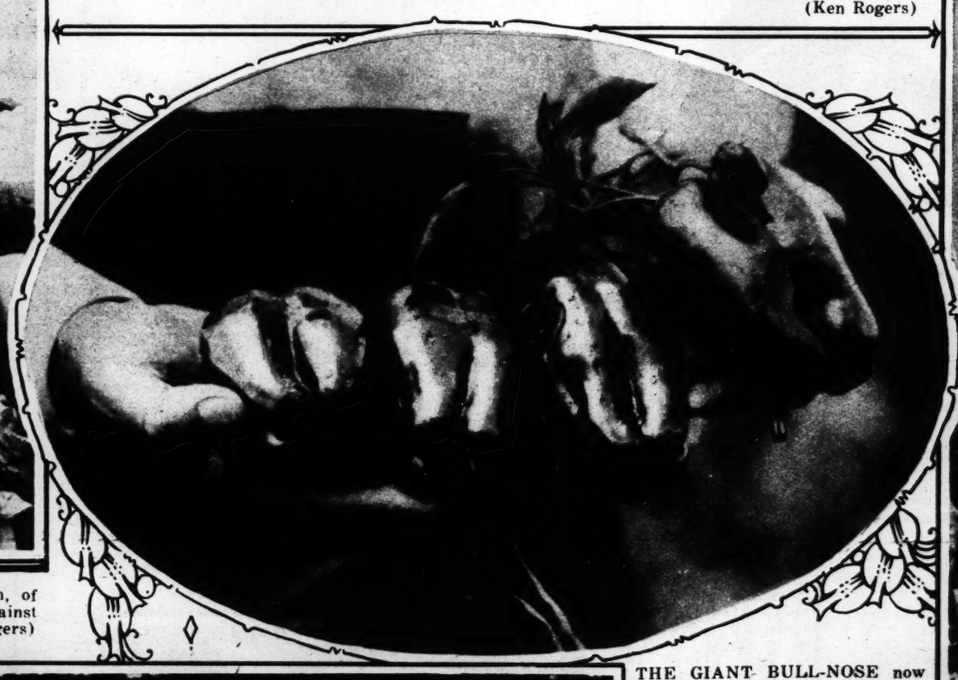

MODERN KNIGHTS AT TILT—These well-protected gladiators took part in an event in the military sports meet and rodeo at Fenham barracks, England. A few of the Sir Galahads were unhorsed but none was injured. (Herbert)

GEORGIA'S LUSCIOUS MELONS are in excellent company in this striking photograph snapped in south Georgia. The young women displaying the prize fruit are Misses Elinor Oliff, of Bainbridge; Lou Ella Coffee, of Douglas, and Margaret Lewis, of Bainbridge.
(Ken Rogers)

SPEAKING OF "THE MAKIN'S"—Miss Elizabeth Bowen, of Tifton, will stack this beautiful plant of Lady Nicotine against the best the country affords.
(Ken Rogers)

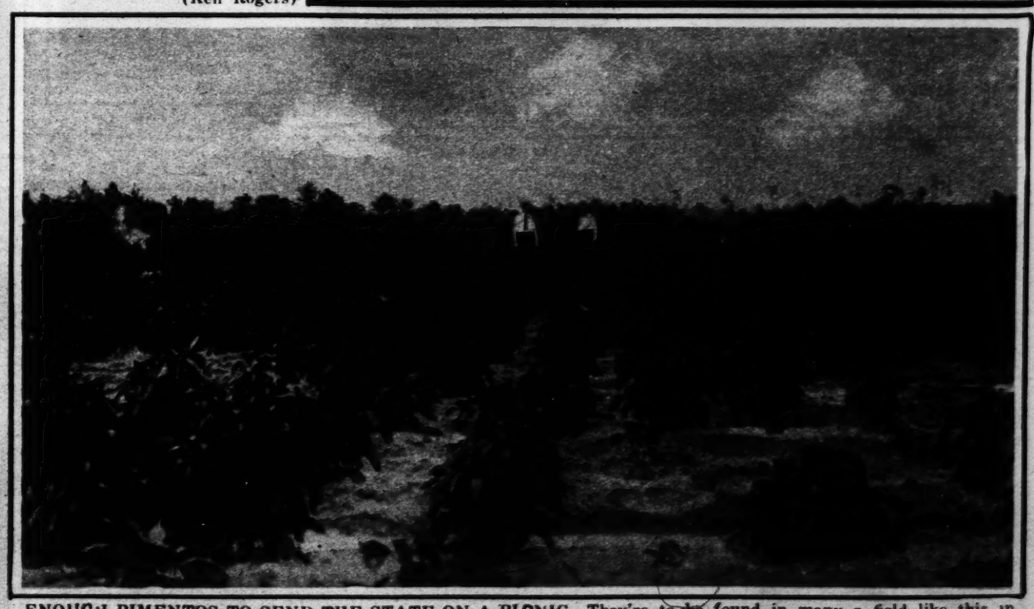

THE GIANT BULL-NOSE now hails in thousands from fields of south Georgia, where big harvests of the pimentos are in prospect. These four peppers make an overflowing double-handful.
(Ken Rogers)

WATCH YOUR HONORS, IOWA—To prove that Georgia is a land "where the tall corn grows," Miss Katherine Hall of Tifton, Georgia, stands in the hands of H. A. Hill and C. B. Kealhofer, of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad, to give an idea of the height of south Georgia's monster stalks.
(Ken Rogers)

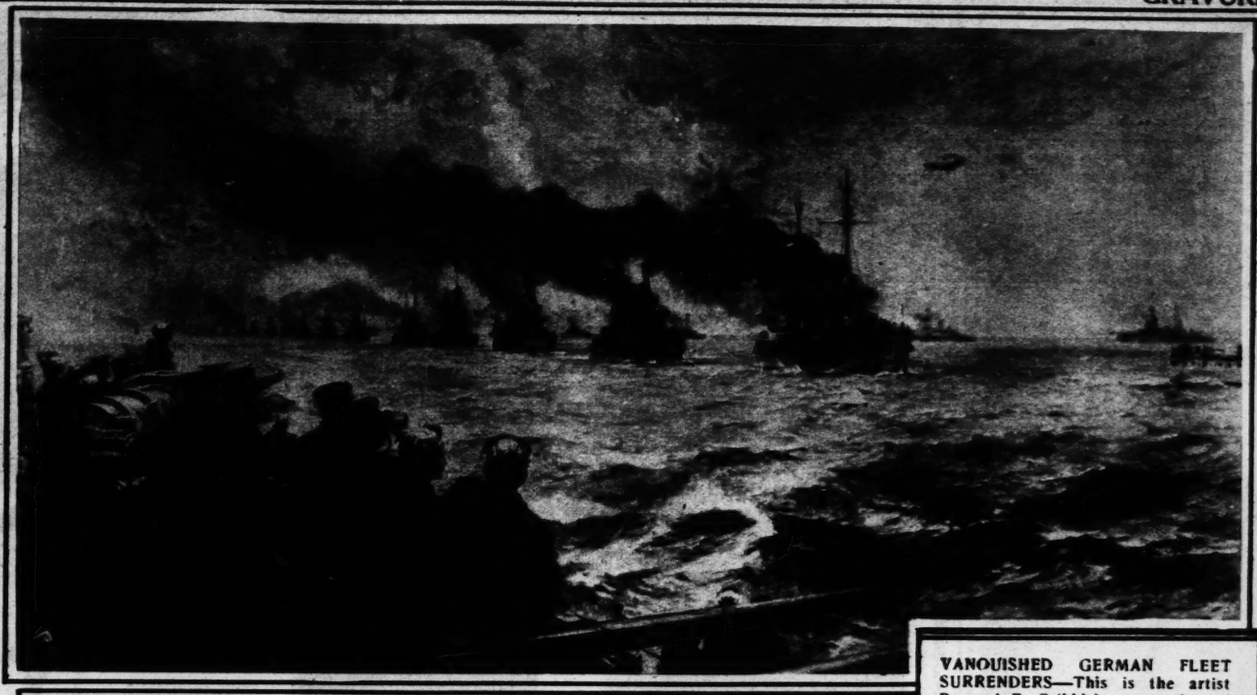

BROAD ACRES OF DARK GREEN TOBACCO in Irvin County are yielding big returns on the fertile lands of south Georgia. These seven south Georgia beauties "hands across" the spreading leaves of the soothing weed.
(Ken Rogers)

ENOUGH PIMENTOS TO SEND THE STATE ON A PICNIC—They're to be found in many a field like this in south Georgia, which has gone in on a big scale in producing these delectable dainties. This field is in Coffee County.
(Ken Rogers)

CROOKED—BUT ACCURATE—Ben Turpin's famous optics didn't fool him when he picked the beautiful Elizabeth Dietz for his bride. He is looking at wife with right eye and cameraman with left. (International)

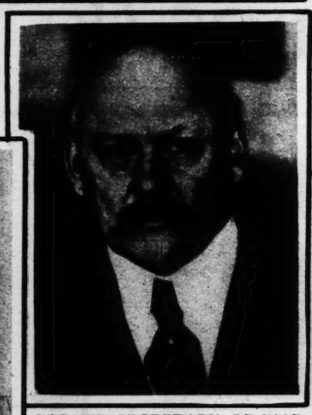

VANQUISHED GERMAN FLEET SURRENDERS—This is the artist Bernard F. Gribble's conception of the surrender of the Hun's high seas fleet November 21, 1918. It hangs in the house of representatives. (International)

LEADING A DOG'S LIFE—Polux, famous dog, takes a wild ride on an aquaplane at Lake Hopatoong, with Elaine Summers. If he doesn't drown, the dog will enter the movies as soon as his training is completed.

FORMER SECRETARY OF WAR IS DEAD—John W. Weeks, who died recently at his summer home in New Hampshire after a lingering illness. He was compelled to resign from the cabinet some time ago because of sickness. (International)

THEIR FAMOUS FATHER

His Name, in Electric Lights on Broadway, Was Something to Be Conjured With, Yet It Almost Played Havoc in the Lives of His Children

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by Ida M. Evans

Marcus had just made a beautiful stroke.

ON THE Billock breakfast table stood a jade bowl of pink roses. It was June. The strawberries were red. The telegram was yellow.

After Olive Billock saw the telegram she was no longer aware of the roses, although she had a strong beauty sense. And she didn't care for the berries, although a moment previous her appetite had been high.

Without opening the telegram she knew whom it was from and what it said. Nearly all telegrams handled by the well-known Western Union are from relatives or on business.

Olive had no business in life except being the handsome and affectionate, even devoted, wife of Milton Billock, rising young lawyer and estate-handler in Estaville, a progressive midwestern town of about fifty thousand inhabitants. She had no near relatives except her husband, Milton, her brother, Cary, and her father.

Her husband was at that moment singing loudly "I Wonder What's Become of Sally," in the bathroom above the June-sunny breakfast room.

Cary had arrived from Boston three days before for his annual summer visit, and right now was sound asleep in an upper bedroom, having the night before danced too late with Jane Baybank at the West Estaville Country club.

Therefore the telegram was from her and Cary's father, Marcus Destinn. With mingled feelings she read: "Coming for a flying visit to my kiddies stop Wild to see you stop Bushels of hugs stop Love stop Regards to Milton."

Let there be no misunderstanding at the start. Olive Destinn Billock loved her father—every handsome gray hair of his distinguished head. Even while a faint frown came she was mentally getting out her best French-monogrammed Irish linen sheets for his bed, wondering if an Estaville market could yield a decent basket of artichokes, listing dinner guests and ordering from the florist a bowl of forget-me-nots, his favorite flower.

America and Europe liked Marcus Destinn. Two continents knew him—his fine, forceful features, his musical voice and striking gray hair. Wherever parquet or gallery seats were known, or flappers flapped or older generations demanded discriminating recreation, he was welcome and could sign his own contract. Broadway was his best hunting ground. But an occasional flyer in the film studios netted him cash and unneeded eclat.

Nevertheless, his daughter's feelings were mixed. Oddly enough, her first reaction was a wish that this spring she and Milton hadn't joined the new country club.

Not that she had at this early time any definite premonition. But she was so deeply in love with Milton that anything which might affect his hopes or desires presented itself readily to her wifely mind. And she and Milton had spent the last six evenings discussing what it would mean if he got the handling of old Mrs. Sturgeon's big estate. That meant future honor and money. It meant, indeed, one of the frightfully large and happy foundation stones on which young fathers of families build fortunes for themselves and children needing education and Shetland ponies.

Still, Marcus Destinn's daughter now reflected with a frown, what difference did it make? Before he got clear of the lower Pullman step he would probably be handed by some one the keys to every club, lodge, association, society, locker, sewing-circle, Dorcas meeting, new thought group, Epworth league, uplift movement, Rupert Booke society, Writers' club, Poets' corner, Little theater following, dramatic guild, servant girls' guild, or mechanics' gymnasium in town.

At the station, doubtless, grinning caddies would be on hand to proffer their services, tipless if Marcus wished. Taxicab drivers would jump forward to handle his bags with the care of a homely daughter for her mother. The Pullman porter would follow him through the station in a last whisk-broom effusion. The very brick and asphalt of any town, let alone its inhabitants, rose up to welcome genial, handsome, talented Marcus Destinn, the American actor who in evening clothes looked more like a duke than any English owner of a ducal estate.

Even Olive, herself, the daughter who was over-familiar with him and his talent, his habits and his hats, his preference for opal studs against pearl, his handsome lounging robes and cravats, felt a thrill of affectionate anticipation. She'd love to see Dad. She made a mental note that he'd like that jade bowl filled with roses; and she must order little pig sausages for breakfast.

Milton, too. Entering the room, he saw the telegram. Reading, he beamed and forgot that he'd just nicked a well-cleft chin with the razor.

"Great, Olive! Day after tomorrow! Say, I was just thinking last night I'd enjoy seeing the old boy again soon. I didn't have a chance to get well acquainted with him in New York before we were married."

True. Olive well enough recalled why. Marcus was leaving for a London engagement. Between the last curtain call at the Empire and his steamer's embarking there had been just enough time to meet and shake hands with the clever young midwesterner whom Olive had met at a Deane tea.

Olive and Grace Deane had gone to school together. Since school Olive visited the Deanes when in New York. At other times she stayed with a maternal aunt in Trenton.

The Deanes were banking easterners of fortune so solid that Wall street held the family on its platter of money like a baked and buttered potato, taking great care not to spill.

Olive still remembered those uncomfortable last days of that last visit of hers to the Deanes. How she had counted the minutes, feverish-pulsed, until her father embarked and was gone! Olive's queasy ears would long hold the row between Grace Deane and her older sister Alma. The row over Marcus Destinn! It was dreadful.

Alma was mannish and in her thirties and given to social settlement work. Grace was the spoiled baby of the family. Both girls' pearls were known in the horseshoe of the Metropolitan opera house. They had come almost to hair-pulling over the box of lilies of the valley which held Marcus Destinn's card.

The card read, "Miss Deane." Scribbled below, faintly, "The dearest girl in New York city."

Olive had often pensively wished that either her mother had lived or her father had been a remarrying man. It was true that he had sat beside Alma the previous evening at the Deane dinner table. It was true, too, that often he had included flowers for Gracie when he sent a box to Olive at school.

Alma had taken unkindly Olive's efforts to tell her that Marcus was not a marrying father. "O, you needn't worry about my stepmothering you! I'd travel with him."

That season Cary had run over to London for a few days with his father and a friend. From London Cary had written his sister in horror about the affair of the mother of his friend Otto. "And she's forty-eight and she simply sat in the hotel corridor and messed her emotional disposition in front of two chambermaids and a bellboy who all three went into a conspiracy to rescue father and let him escape her by stepping from one balcony to another. The chambermaids said she was a fat old beast and ought to be thrown into the Thames, the poor dear man, and the bellboy said women were hell and originally had been used for paving stones. Dad said—you know his bored, annoyed voice!—that all he did was tell how he missed mother, who had Irish gray eyes, too. Her eyes aren't Irish gray. Otto's mother, I mean. They are pasty slate. Otto won't speak to me at all. Mortified, and mad, too."

Besides Gracie Deane, there had been most of the other girls at school. And the little English teacher with her tortoise rims who was discharged when she took to slipping into the city every week-end for matinee and three evening performances.

Then, that year in Hollywood when Olive had been along! The woman of the bungalow who gave him some geraniums. Well, he had stopped in passing to stoop his handsome nose to sniff the pinkish hedge. But the woman's husband had been most unpleasant. She was not a young woman. But right the next day she had enrolled in a local dramatic school.

"Great," beamed Milton now, again reading the telegram. "Often wondered if he thought I was pretty cheeky to marry the daughter of the best paid actor in America on nothing but expectations."

"Nonsense," scoffed Olive. She didn't explain that altogether he was a generous father, actors' salaries often are not so large as press agents report.

"Well, if I get the handling of the Sturgeon estate I'll take good care even of a Destinn." He smiled.

Olive wondered if she ought to warn him. Ought she to tell him that one reason she hadn't minded leaving the familiar east to come to his home town Estaville was because her father would not find time for many or long visits to the Babbittian spot?

No. She couldn't. He might not understand. He might think she was implying that her father was a different sort of man. She sighed and reflected that it was fortunate Milton had neither mother nor sisters.

It was for once a relief when Milton had gone to his office which was in a very smart limestone block on Main street's best corner.

Cary was coming down. Cary would understand.

"And what I'm afraid of," she was half whimpering, "is that somehow something will happen to spoil Milton's chance at the Sturgeon estate. You know everything is left to the old lady, but that one widowed daughter, Mrs. Lincott——"

Cary was not heeding her.

"O, darn!" he said bitterly at the telegram. "Sure—he had to drop along this summer! O, I like dad. I'm crazy about him. He's loaded me with money all my life. Best schools, etc. But Jane Baybank hasn't been easy pickings, and I thought this summer—damn! 'Course"—lamely "I'll be glad to see him."

"Tell him," advised Olive, half absently, and a hint resentfully. Cary cared little about Milton's affairs after all!

"Ask him to lay off, you mean?" said Cary with sarcasm. "O sure! And then he'd do the glad paternal welcome act and call her the little daughter he'd always wanted; and she'd—— Say, my feeling for Cissy Kolb in Trenton was nothing like what it is for Jane. But I'll never forget when Cissy told me it wasn't decent for her to let me kiss her when all she did was close her eyes and try to think I had dad's fine brown eyes."

It was true that although the two young people were good looking in their clean brunette style, they had not inherited the illusive charm and sparkle that distinguished their father. Now they looked at each other and Olive sighed and Cary ate his egg coldly.

Later Olive gave orders to Minnie, the maid. Minnie came from a family in town which believed that any Scandinavian was as good as her mistress and perhaps better. Her attitude toward company was congealed suet. Cary was already at hand to be waited on. But Olive had a firm tongue. She itemized the guest chamber, flowers, better bacon, waffles, and the new silver cocktail shakers. No—not blankets—the rose satin down quilts that had never been used. And the silver vegetable dishes must be polished, and finger bowls used. Yes—her father lived mostly at hotels or clubs and was used to the little niceties.

Olive smiled grimly at Minnie's cold attitude. Wait, Miss Minnie! A change of heart would come, like putty. Marcus would pause at his bedroom door and say, "Thank you, my girl, thank you." No more. But over stolid Minnie would come a change rich and strange. She would trip over her own feet and blush and hurry down for towels, or ice, or anything—anything that was an excuse for coming back.

That genial, musical "Thank you, my dear." Old women and young, menials and English duchesses fell at its sound.

"Wait, Minnie," grimly reflected her mistress.

Even as Olive foresaw, it happened, except that she need have wasted no regret over the country club angle. For old Mrs. Sturgeon's big black car passed the coupe on the way home and stopped and tremoloed an instant invitation for dinner that night or any night.

Judge Skelly and President Baybank, of the bank, were at the station. Milton introduced them to his father-in-law who was unusually handsome in a new gray suit and smiling and at his ease, with a porter with whiskbroom in hand following him down the Pullman steps and a waiter from the dining car beaming behind the porter and trying to edge ahead.

From coach windows twelve women craned their heads. There might have been more, but on that side of the train all other seats were held by men and children. Three children were waving sticky hands, and two men were calling after Marcus: "See you next week at the McAlpin, Destinn!" And the other: "That Adirondack invitation holds good this year or next! But do try to make it this year, old man! Do try!"

Milton Billock beamed with pride and affection. Olive put up her mouth to be kissed and felt the usual thrill. Wasn't dad handsome! And he'd probably brought her a silver-fitted traveling bag, or pearls. Cary laughed excitedly like a girl when he flung an arm over the handsome gray shoulders.

Almost before the train shrieked on its transcontinental trek, a luncheon was arranged at the Kiwanis club; the Commercial association spoke of a stag supper; Judge Skelly recommended a links; Frederic Baybank made his dinner the following night; and Miss O'Hagan of the Drama league branch dated a talk on Realism by the distinguished fellow worker in the arts.

Olive noted that Milton was pleased enough. Baybank had his hand on the younger man's arm while he pressed his invitation. The judge naturally included the son-in-law in the stag supper.

It happened that Estaville was one of those well-fixed bustling towns where the older men have firm hands on the rule of affairs. There were scores of younger men who were working, hoping, and itching for a foothold. Too many younger men, it chanced in Estaville, in proportion to the firm and healthy older ones who were unwilling to step aside from their earned places. Milton's law earnings in the last three years had been good for his age and experience; but they had been budgeted most cannily to keep Minnie, Rotarian dues, and occasional pink-candled dinners to the golf crowd as apparent straws on a placid financial surface instead of wild waves of distress. Olive's coupe had been her father's wedding gift. So had most of her clothes.

Mrs. Sturgeon was a powerful old person in Estaville society and business; the widow of the owner of real estate, water works stock, interurban stock, and a lumber company. She had been left more millions than is good for a woman living a long way from Fifth avenue. She was hustling manager of clubs, particularly country, bridge luncheons, the Drama league, and two church societies. Her fortune had been left by her husband in the care of a local trust company whose cashier had recently proved untrustworthy. There was a local scandal, but no money was lost. However, she had recently taken a fancy to Milton Billock and had hinted that she needed a young and aggressive honest man to help her take care of what heaven and a dead husband had burdened her with. Three or four young aggressive Estavillians, all announcing themselves as honest as a July sky, were eying Milton and the hint with rival glances.

She had one daughter, a divorcee in her mid-forties who had been left no fortune, but had to depend on her mother's generosity. But the town felt that this was as it should be. Laura Lincott, nee Sturgeon, was lank, faddy, and foolish. She dabbled in the occult, clay beauty treatments, and food fads.

The mother was sixty-five, weighed over two hundred, and had a large good-humored smile. She was not a beautiful old woman. She had moles on her chin and wore too high corsets, which, as in a former generation, emphasized her bust, and she dressed too ornately. But it was the daughter on whom Olive expected future trouble to hinge. It was the mother's pride which, touched, might advert to the discomfiture of Milton. Olive knew her father. He was not a malicious man. But he did not like lank, faddy women; and he would make no allowance for any false hopes which his invariable courtesy and musical voice raised in such a person's poor heart.

Laura was not in her mother's car when it overtook the Billock coupe at a corner and Mrs. Sturgeon's good-natured fat old face pressed out a window as she fairly flung the dinner invitation. Olive gave thanks for slight mercies. She hoped Laura was out of town.

The Sturgeon home was one of Estaville's show places. Its dinner table was perfect with French china, gold coffee spoons, and Italian lace spread. Th efood and wines were in accord. Marcus Destinn, used to the best of America and Europe, was pleasantly surprised. He had said rather whimsically to his daughter in advance that he loved her, but he hoped her friend Mrs. Sturgeon was not an economical hostess.

At his hostess' right, he responded therefore with zest to her bright hopes that he would like the town and her lobster patties. Olive, watching, became heartsick. Amelia Sturgeon was sixty-five. But there is no age to the light that suddenly leaps into a woman's eyes, to the palpitant parting of her lips as she waits for a chosen man's next words.

Since there was no man in the Sturgeon menage, Milton had been asked to hold the foot of the table. It was a crumb from his father-in-law's table of honor. He was not unwilling. At his side sat Judge Skelly, who had been a director on the unworthy trust company's board. Olive saw very well that her naive husband was seeing himself hoisted at least a little on the ladder of achievement.

Laura Sturgeon sat on the other side and watched her mother with eyes that at first were wondering and later became disapproving.

"Mrs. Billock," called Mrs. Sturgeon at last, stifled almost with laughter, "your father is a flatterer. He says he can beat me at bridge, but he won't, because he likes my tablecloth."

Olive read her father's little amused smile. He was a master wit in one of New York's wittiest clubs. Mrs. Sturgeon's red, full face convulsed, the corsage of imitation violets rose and fell on her great bare bosom, her appreciative laugh soon became almost hysterical and girlish.

After dinner Mrs. Sturgeon towed her guests to the country club which she managed and enjoyed much as a little girl enjoys a dollhouse. Jane Baybank was not at the dinner table. Jane was too little. But she was met later at the club, a pale imp in blue chiffon. By that time Olive was not intent at all on her brother's fears. Marcus had been invited into his hostess' car for the three-mile ride. Olive and Milton were alone in their coupe.

It got on Olive's nerves at once—Milton's complacent smile. Poor Milton! Dumb Milton!

He squeezed his wife's hand. It was the tender squeeze of a husband, not of a lover. It meant that he was aching to give her, not candy and flowers but coupes and country club dues and also college educations for her and his children.

"Dear," he said elatedly, "I don't want you to think I'm a money grabber. And apart from any possible profit to myself, I certainly like your father. He's a peach, and one man who can tell the same story three times and not bore hearers. But—say, isn't it a stroke of luck that Mrs. Sturgeon fell so hard for him? And she's a fast worker. She whispered to me between coffee and getting on our hats that she'd run down to my office tomorrow morning for a long confab and some advice."

"Did she?" sighed Olive.

"Isn't it good that he happened to visit us right now?"

"Um-m—perhaps."

Milton paid no attention to her dry tone. He rummaged in his pocket for a match for his cigarette, found it, and subsided into one of those serene, silent moods in which a woman is not needed by man.

It infuriated Olive with her experience. It was not fair to take out her vexation on poor Milton whose good, after all, was the chief bone on which her apprehension gnawed, to dip deep into metaphor. But she acted on impulse and was impelled by worry, to say naggingly, "Better not count your chickens before they're hatched, Milton."

Milton sat up straight in his seat. What a tone from Olive! And what words! The red of pride ran up his high, attractive cheeks.

"Are you implying, Olive, that I'm capitalizing your father's popularity?" He grew more flushed. "Perhaps it sounded like that. I'm sorry."

"O, you poor——" Olive was scarlet and ashamed and at the same time amused. Poor dear Milton! Obtuse, like most men! "Dear, I only meant that it's bad luck, you know, to count on good luck. And dad might offend her some way—you know he——" she stammered, not knowing what to say that would not belittle her father or her husband.

Milton accepted her explanation, but he was sober when at last they emerged from the semi-light of the coupe into the brilliancy of the clubrooms. Whatever consolation was to be afforded Olive from a male relative, she got from her brother Cary.

Mrs. Sturgeon had arrived already and was towing Marcus Destinn importantly across a waxed floor. Beside Cary, little Jane Baybank was mechanically using a lipstick and gaping after the distinguished arrival. She turned to Cary. Olive read her lips. "Say, your father's a darling! No wonder they call him the perfect lover in films." And then little Jane was towing Cary in the wake of Mrs. Sturgeon. "O, if I could have one dance with him, just so I'd be able to say——"

Poor Cary! Olive read his wilted bearing, with its fatuous courteous smile.

It was a gay evening at the club. The orchestra played well. Marcus Destinn liked to dance. Amusedly enough, he told Olive later that Estaville was much like other towns, wasn't it? Its ladies, young and old, had private dreams, old or new, of going on the stage. Ah, me! Women run true to form—or is it nature?

Little Jane danced twice with Mar-

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—In our little town there has started a movement which is called "The Own Your Own Home Movement." Can you tell me what this is and why it is called a building-loan scheme? Truly yours —ANNA PARTMENT.

Answer:—The idea is a simple one. The building companies advance the money to build you a house, and you pay them so much money every month. By the time you have become absolutely disgusted and dissatisfied with the place, it is yours.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—A crowd of us boys were talking about the sesquicentennial in Philadelphia and we got into an argument about the Declaration of Independence. One fellow said it was signed in Boston, another fellow said it was signed in Richmond, Virginia, and I say it was signed in Washington, D. C. To settle the argument we decided to leave it to you. Will you please be kind enough to tell us where the Declaration of Independence was signed? Yours truly—R. U. GOING.

Answer:—That question has been asked a thousand times, so to settle it for all time to come I'll tell you. The Declaration of Independence was signed on the bottom.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have a friend employed as a "taster" in a "Gordon Gin" factory near Canarsie, N. Y. He has heart trouble and our mutual acquaintances always refer to him as having one foot in the grave. What do you think about it? Truly yours —ANN XIOUS.

Answer:—I think he has his other foot on a banana peel.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I go with some boys and we are all around 12 years old. The other day we found a full pack of cigarettes and we all smoked. While we were smoking a minister came over to us and asked us if we knew where little boys who smoked cigarettes go to and we all said no. He said he was a minister so could not tell us but, he said, if we wrote to you that you would know. Will you please tell us where little boys go when they smoke? Sincerely—I. N. HALE.

Answer:—When little boys smoke they go up an alley.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Yesterday I happened to be on the East Side and just as I passed two men I heard one man say, in a loud voice, "I'm a brick." In an instant the other chap punched him in the jaw and layed him flat on the sidewalk. How do you account for that? Sincerely—U. WOOD RUN-TOO.

Answer:—One man said he was a brick, and the other fellow must have been a bricklayer.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My wife is a good cook but she can't make pies, and I love pies. What can she do to learn to make a good pie? Sincerely—LEM N. CUSTARD.

Answer:—Have her go to school and take up a course in "Pyrography."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—This afternoon, as I was looking out my back window I saw an old hen of mine eating a lot of tacks. What did she do that for and what shall I do about it? Yours truly—CHICK N. FEEDE.

Answer:—Don't do anything about it; just watch her. Maybe she is going to lay a carpet.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I just can't seem to make head nor tail out of these things they call thermometers. Can you explain them to me? Truly yours—POLA REGIONS.

Answer:—They are very simple to understand. When the weather gets very cold the mercury cuddles all together in the bottom to keep warm.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My uncle says you can carry water in a sieve. Isn't that silly? Yours truly—AL. G. BRAH.

Answer:—Not so silly; your uncle is right. You can carry water in a sieve, by waiting till the water freezes.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Do cows go to heaven or is all milk just plain canned milk up there? Yours truly—A. C. KRIT.

Broadway Banter

—By— FORNEY WYLY

IT IS only natural that those who have read the advance billing for "One Man's Woman" should arrive at the theater undecided as to what to expect. One placard heralding this masterpiece reads quite simply, "She sold her maidenly virtue for a trip to Coney Island and a hot dog," while still another of these literary gems tells us "Two women loved him, one chaste and pure, the other wanton — which did he choose?"

I can only say that after attending "One Man's Woman" I feel that nothing has been overlooked in assembling this show. There hasn't been so much junk gotten together in years. I had moments of wondering if the author of this masterpiece was, after all, quite bright. It's the sort of show at which the audience bursts into peals of laughter at just the time anything but laughter was intended. Nor do the players who cavort about in this production tend to improve the general state of affairs. Most of them frisk about as if they, too, wonder what in the world it is that is taking place.

A certain amount of filth is forgivable (in some circles, anyway) but nobody, anywhere, is going to find the slightest excuse for the dull kind that fairly oozes from this play.

That gurgling pair of honey-mooners, Helen McCullough and Henry Robinson, have been in town for a day or so, still slightly deranged over the good, good news. They wandered up this way principally to see that Mrs. McCullough got on the "Lapland" all right and started off on that little European jaunt she is taking. I think, but I'm not sure, that another of the Talbot sisters, Eloise Potter, went with her. Mrs. McCullough leaves America with the knowledge that her three eldest daughters are now pleasantly married, and for all she can tell, so will be her youngest, Nym, ere she returns. Nym, we must not forget, chances to belong to what we are in the habit of calling "this mad young generation."

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashcraft and Rebecca were here a few days before they sailed for Europe, and I saw Rebecca having lunch with Emory Cocke in the Cascades at the Biltmore. Rebecca liked "The Great Temptation" about as well as anything she saw while here.

The only change I noticed during the recent subway strike was that the service was slightly improved. Many subway addicts who hadn't been above ground for years, came up for the occasion, and made more room for the others of us who, dead or alive, are always to be found underground. True, the striking employees made it quite plain they might throw a few bombs here and there if the subway persisted in running, but then it's not every day you can get blown out of a subway. After not having attended Earl Carroll's party nor met the Countess of Cathcart during her recent sojourn here, I did not intend to run the risk of losing out on any more of life's really worth-while events.

The Charlot Revue three-some, Beatrice Little, Gertrude Lawrence and Jack Buchanan, have separated at last and it might interest certain of you to know just what they're going to do next season. The invaluable Miss Lillie is to open in New York in October in a Dillingham musical comedy called "Bubbles," for which the music is being written by Vincent "Tea-For-Two" Youmans. Miss Lawrence is to appear in a George Gershwin musical comedy, as yet unnamed, produced by the people who did "Lady Be Good" and "Tip Toes." In her supporting company will be that high-kicking enchantress, Gertrude McDonald, whose blonde loveliness is still discussed whenever "Tip Toes" is mentioned. Oscar Shaw, who has been playing juveniles so long he doesn't yet realize he is not the same little boy he used to be, has been engaged for Miss Lawrence's leading man.

Mr. Buchanan is to produce "Sunny" in London, playing of course, the Jack Buchanan part. I have heard that Mr. Buchanan was extremely anxious to have Marilyn Miller do the show in London with him, and Miss Miller, I know, was a constant attendant at "Charlot's Rendezvous" last winter. However, it is reasonably certain Miss Miller will find no time for London trips, for from the way things look now, "Sunny" will be still running in America long after it has opened and closed in London, Australia, Africa and Birmingham.

Here's a little information which might help you sometime. When you come to New York, always leave Monday night for the show to which it is hardest to get seats. The theaters are more widely unattended on that night than on any other, and it is possible to get good seats almost anywhere.

Time goes on, but how? It continues to be five o'clock in Atlanta when it's six o'clock in Connecticut and seven o'clock in New York. And still I do not seem to be able to do anything about it. Among those people who I think are entitled to an early death are the ones who are always saying, "Now let's see, my Aunt Hazel in Mobile is just baking her cake when Mary Elizabeth in New Haven is eating hers, and Hattie Sue in New York is wishing she hadn't eaten any."

The most trying thing this distorted time has done to me so far was to put me in Stamford last Sunday seven minutes before I left New York.

Crossed Wires

A Fascinating New Serial

By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XXVI.

The Count Is Irritated.

CELESTE, glowing with animation, detailed the luncheon table argument with the new chauffeur, Virginia observed that she was now revealing an unexpected and quite attractive side to nature. Hitherto in the machinelike efficiency with which she performed her duties as a lady's maid, she rarely smiled. Now she was genuinely amused and Virginia wondered, a little enviously, at the change this good-looking chauffeur had wrought in her in such a short time. Her eyes, usually veiled and inscrutable, were now frankly sparkling.

"But mademoiselle," she exclaimed, "he says Abelard and Heloise were married! How absurd! As if I didn't know my Paris better than that! Everybody knows they were not, but he wires they were married in Brittany and that Heloise afterwards denied the marriage. I could not convince him."

Virginia smiled. This chauffeur was also revealing an unsuspected side to his nature.

A few minutes later as the latter started out with the Count and Virginia to climb the neighboring eminence, so rich in historic significance, Virginia was conscious that Celeste was gazing wistfully after the young man, who seemed unaware of the impression he had made upon her.

The first few hundred yards were across the valley, after which the path led abruptly upward. Two or three times Virginia and young Wells, who were climbing vigorously, were obliged to wait until the Count, breathing fast, caught up with them.

"I like to stop occasionally and enjoy this wonderful view," gasped the Count, mopping his forehead with a perfumed handkerchief.

"Shall I lend you a hand?" asked Wells, with a solicitude that intensely irritated the Count.

"No! I've climbed mountains many times before," he retorted shortly, and Wells thought to himself, "I'll bet he's climbed Montmartre many times."

Virginia, noting the Count's ill humor, thought it best to conform her pace to his and when they resumed the climb she let the chauffeur walk on ahead. She had nerved herself to perform a hateful duty. To save her father's fortune she must consent to marry this man, and the sooner she consented the better. Perhaps he would propose today and she resolved to make the opportunity for him.

They proceeded slowly, and when Wells had reached the top he turned and saw that they had seated themselves on a fallen log and were in deep conversation.

"I've got to bust that up," he thought. "I'm here to sidetrack that frog in the interest of Hank—so to speak—Parker and here's where I begin." So he called out, "Here's a grand view!"

Count de Barsac welcomed the interruption. His sixth sense, that of divining a woman's moods, told him unmistakably that Virginia Crayton, for some reason, had decided to accept him. Her present cordiality allowed no other construction. She was markedly kind and gentle for the first time in days. He knew that he had only to speak the word and they would be engaged. But that word he now withheld. It was necessary first to know the extent of her father's financial reverse. So he deftly switched the trend of conversation to impersonal channels, an evasive maneuver which Virginia instantly sensed. It piqued her and set her to wondering.

The Count arose. "Come! It is only a few paces farther up," and they resumed the climb and presently found the waiting chauffeur.

"It was here," said Wells, "that the French and Indians poured their shot down on Washington's small and devoted force, an attack that later led to Washington's capitulation."

The Count was again irritated by the linking of the French and Indians. It seemed a challenge.

"Well," he said slowly, "though it was a victory for the French, it turned out to be a pyrrhic victory. One of our poets, La Fontaine, has said, 'There are some defeats more triumphant than victories.' This seems to have been one of that kind."

Wells glanced quickly at him and he could not resist uttering the next words.

"I think it is Montaigne, and not La Fontaine, whom you are quoting."

Both Virginia and the Count stared at him, the latter exceedingly amazed and uncomfortable. "Damn the fellow," he muttered. Virginia was impressed in spite of herself. She should instantly have reprimanded this chauffeur for daring to correct her guest, but the moment passed.

She was conscious of an electric current of mutual dislike between the two men. The extremely good looks of the chauffeur were an irritation to the Count, while the Count for some reason not apparent had aroused the bitter antagonism of young Wells.

Virginia, piqued by the Count's recent unflattering evasiveness, decided it might be good strategy to punish him by a display of interest in this prepossessing youth and so, under pretense of gaining a more favorable spot from which to survey the hills and valley, she asked Wells to show her the spot where the capitulation had taken place. This led the pair some distance away and De Barsac, left behind, glared moodily after them as they disappeared behind a slope in the hill.

He lighted a cigarette and reflected bitterly on the turn events were taking.

What a mess the whole venture had become! When he and Celeste, weeks before in Paris, had decided upon a campaign wherein he was to marry the Crayton heiress, it had seemed a simple matter. The Craytons were midwestern Americans and therefore eagerly susceptible to the appeal of a titled marriage. The mother had succumbed at once, but the father had developed unexpected obstinacy. Celeste, his ally, had gotten herself employed as a lady's maid, thus gaining a vantage point in the family circle.

Then had followed this wretched trip to America where one infernal complication after another had arisen. First, the foolish girl had fallen a victim to a steamer infatuation with a young man who turned up later as the Crayton chauffeur. This should have been enough to kill the romantic glamor, but that confounded automobile holdup and the wounding of the chauffeur had revived her interest in him.

The Count shrugged his shoulders with disgust and now, having got rid of that chauffeur, here she was showing a growing interest in a new one.

Why not throw up the whole enterprise? If the Crayton fortune was shattered by the recent reverses—providing they really were reverses and not merely a crafty invention of Crayton to get rid of him—then he would not want to go through with the marriage.

He gloomily lighted another cigarette and impatiently awaited the return of this capricious girl who showed such a predilection for chauffeurs.

"What the devil is keeping them?" he muttered. For a moment he thought of following them, but he dismissed this at once. Time after time he glanced at his wrist watch. Confound it, this thing of waiting was insufferable. It was humiliating. He resolved that if he ever married this infernal girl, he would give her a lot of opportunity for waiting.

It was while in this savage mood with vanity, his most vulnerable trait, grievously hurt that he saw them appear. He started violently! Virginia was being carried by the chauffeur and her white face twisted into a sorry attempt at a smile.

De Barsac ran forward.

"Mademoiselle, you are hurt?"

"A turned ankle," she said bravely between set teeth. "How could I have been so awkward!" She glanced up into the eyes of young Wells, eyes now serious with concern. "Please let me down," she said, "I'll try to walk."

"Don't try," he pleaded in a low tone. "The trip down would be agony. I can easily carry you. It won't take long and I'll do it slowly."

"I shall carry you, Virginia," cried the Count. "O, how I suffer to see

Their Famous Father

cus, and was a naiad of laughter and complacency. Mrs. Sturgeon danced four times with him. And the fat elderly woman, in her low cut green chameuse, heavily beaded, with red, beaming, smiling face and gray transformation that threatened to slide to her eyebrows, after the fourth dance, was not a naiad, and would never, never be taken for one.

Olive watched with a sickish feeling. Some women need alcohol to grow riotous, and some need only an unwonted emotion. Toward the end of the evening Mrs. Sturgeon began to laugh too loudly and tap Marcus too often with her green feather fan.

It was true that others laughed at his inimitable stories. The evening was hugely successful. And Judge Skelly said good naturedly enough, "Mrs. Sturgeon, don't monopolize him! Possibly others of us wish to further our acquaintance with a genial personage."

"I'm old enough," countered Mrs. Sturgeon in rising voice, with a giggle, "to do all the monopolizing that I've a chance at." Then she waddled over to Olive sitting quietly beside a green tub. "Your father's going to have luncheon with me Saturday. Come along if you like. Delighted to have you. And your husband."

"I'll have to see," said Olive.

"O, well," generously promised the other, in a stage whisper, with a hand over large mouth and a grin all over her face, "don't you worry. I won't harm the dear man. I won't even ask him to recite from his plays."

Marcus Destinn went to the luncheon. Half the Rotarian club had been invited also. It was an agreeable affair. Marcus Destinn's remarkable charm was owing to a very natural fact. He liked his fellow men and fellow women, for the most part. Most of the time, at least. Something magnetic in his nature rose and invited something in theirs and, having invited, was most responsive.

Olive, however, spent part of the week in digesting the fact that Milton, whom she loved with all her heart and soul and intellect, had been, since her awkward warning about her delightful father, a stand-offish husband.

He had said briefly, in reply to her direct question, that Mrs. Sturgeon had telephoned the next morning to postpone the conference that she had herself suggested. Her voice had been, it is true, rollicking and friendly. She said she was busy and plain business could wait till a duller fortnight, couldn't it?

Olive understood better than Milton. Her excuse was genuine. Most women prefer not to let pleasure wait on dull business. Olive hoped soberly that Marcus wouldn't presently allow those fine brown eyes of his to betray too much ennui. Sometimes he did that, when the magnetic good humor and invitation of his nature had temporarily dried up! Yes—it had that absurd trick.

She had tried to get back to the old comfortable footing with Milton. But he had been too much hurt, it seemed. He went off with her father to play golf. Cary came home in high dudgeon two afternoons. Jane, it seemed, had developed a mania for caddying. O, yes—she had prettily begged Marcus and he had smiled and pinched her cheek and told her to run along like a good baby. She had run along—at his heels; she said she would watch his strokes and perhaps learn how to play golf. Jane—who had won the junior championship of the state three years in succession!

Olive rode out to the links one morning and watched a foursome. Marcus Destinn carried his own environment with him. Into the dullest community he brought a champagne-golf-gayety-and-good stories atmosphere which spread and beamed and drew outsiders.

Cary, who was an insider, was sitting on the sward in silent dudgeon. He did not glance up even at his sister. He had gone to that bourn of sulks where man prefers to be alone.

He was not much noticed by anybody present. Marcus had just made a beautiful stroke. Little Jane was clapping her youthful hands, and the hero worship on her face was free for a world to see. Marcus in his white flannels, with his fine gray hair and magnetic smile was in truth a sight for tired or active eyes. A round dozen of Estaville husbands who should have been in their offices working for their families were trailing the distinguished guest with carefree gait and bland faces. Such was Marcus' effect on other men.

Milton was one of the dozen. Judge Skelly was one of the foursome. Mrs. Sturgeon was another. She could not play golf. She hit wildly, and didn't care; indeed, she was one of the women who are fatuously amused by their own bad records in any game.

Olive noticed absently that Laura Sturgeon was sitting on the club veranda, not smiling. Milton waved at his wife. It was a polite, but not a forgiving wave.

If it hadn't been for the other events of the day, Olive might have kept her tongue inside her plump pretty cheek and not made matters worse. Speech, however, is woman's —and man's—favorite and most unwise weapon, unrestrained by any closed season.

Besides, the day was goading. Olive went home for luncheon. Judge Skelly had her father in charge. After her solitary salad, she went out to the kitchen to tell Minnie to serve endive and hearts of celery for dinner.

"I've got endive and spiced beets all fixed."

When Justice Triumphed

The Story of Adolph Leutgert

Sausage Maker Slew His Wife in Fiendish Crime--Convicted After Two Trials, He Died in Prison

WHEN a profane love came into the life of Adolph Leutgert, a Chicago manufacturer, he decided to get rid of his wife and, being a sausage manufacturer, he thought he knew an excellent way to do the deed. He disregarded the obvious step of making his wife into sausages and decided instead to reduce the remains to a liquid.

For this process the sausage factory was ideally adapted, as it had an enormous vat in which Leutgert was accustomed to boiling and mixing his sausage meats. Into this vat went Mrs. Leutgert. She was boiled in a solution of caustic potash for several hours, and at the expiration of that time——

But that's ahead of the story.

This Adolph Leutgert was a gross, powerfully built man with impulses that were anything but delicate. In many ways he was more an animal than a man, quite without any of the refinements of civilization. What he wanted he seized, as does an animal. His face was a study in bestiality.

During his life Leutgert married twice, though his domestic affairs were usually subordinated to his sausages. By his first wife he had a one son, Arnold, and by his second, who was Louisa Bicknesse, he had two more boys, Elmer and Louis. At the time of this story he was 52, ten years older than his wife, and they had been married eighteen years.

After eighteen years a wife usually can feel rather safe, but Mrs. Leutgert proved an exception. A young, more attractive rival came into the Leutgert household—and Mrs. Leutgert went out.

This rival was Mary Seimmering, a servant in the Leutgert home, which was located next to the factory on the corner of Hermitage avenue and Diversey boulevard, Chicago. The servant had been in the home only a few weeks when an affair developed. In time Mrs. Leutgert became suspicious. She watched her husband. She found him out.

With this the faithful wife spoke her mind. All her married life she had submitted her will to his. Always he had been the master. But this was too much.

"Either she must go or I will leave this house!" she said.

Leutgert stormed, then tried to placate her. He had lost his head, he told her; she must forgive him. He tried to assure her that she was exaggerating the situation.

And from all accounts the husband did succeed for a while in stilling his wife's suspicions, but the time came when Mrs. Leutgert pronounced the situation unbearable. She threatened to tell her family how her husband had shamed her. She would put her story before any judge, she declared. How would he like that?

Leutgert decided he would not like that at all. He recalled his wife's statement that either the servant or she must go, and he decided to adopt the suggestion.

The domestic disorders were coming to a head in the latter part of April, 1897, when Leutgert's sausage factory went into bankruptcy, forcing the shutting down of the plant. By a court order, Leutgert was forbidden to make any more sausages, so the fires in his boiler room died down and the huge tank remained empty.

The late Mrs. Adolph Leutgert.

On the evening of May 1, Leutgert entered the factory and ordered Frank Bialk, the watchman, to bring two barrels of caustic potash down to the boiler room. Leutgert said he wanted to give the vat a good cleaning out, as it would be only a few days before the factory would be in operation again.

As the reader may perhaps know, caustic potash, also known as potassium hydroxide, is a very powerful substance. When mixed with water it will eat its way through and dissolve any fairly soft matter. It is often used in the manufacture of soap.

After Bialk had brought the barrels to the boiler room, he stood by and watched Leutgert pour the contents into the vat, assisted by Frank Odorfsky, another employee of the factory. The watchman was instructed to keep up steam all night. At 10 p. m. Odorfsky was sent home and Bialk was sent to a drug store for some nerve medicine.

What went on while the watchman went on this errand we can only conjecture. When he returned, Leutgert was in the room where the vat was, and the door was locked.

The next day Mrs. Leutgert was not at home. Nor the next. Nor the next. When neighbors asked Leutgert he shrugged his shoulders, saying his wife had left him, but that she would probably be back before long. They had had a quarrel, he explained, and she had gone off in a huff.

On May 4 Diedrich Bicknesse, Mrs. Leutgert's brother, called to see her. Leutgert met him at the door.

"Louise has gone away somewhere," he said. "She hasn't been home for three days."

Bicknesse was amazed. What had happened? Hadn't Leutgert informed the police?

"Why should I tell the police?" demanded the manufacturer. "I have been expecting her back every minute. I thought maybe she went to see you."

Heavy-handed, dull-witted Leutgert was not clever enough to feign sorrow or anxiety. His utter indifference implanted in his brother-in-law's mind a deep suspicion that this man knew something about the singular disappearance of his wife.

Then, too, Bicknesse had heard things about Leutgert and his servant. He knew things had not been going smoothly in the Leutgert home.

Investigation Begun.

The result of this visit was that Bicknesse notified the police and Captain Herman Schuettler started an investigation. He first broadcast the news to the newspapers, made a general search throughout the city, even dragging the Chicago river for a considerable distance, and then decided to confine his efforts to the factory.

His conviction that the solution to the mystery lay somewhere in the sausage plant was largely brought on by Leutgert's own actions.

In the first place he learned that the sausage maker had been making many efforts to gain entrance to the factory, now guarded by the sheriff's deputies who were in charge. Denied permission, Leutgert had appeared unusually disturbed.

From Frank Bialk, the watchman, Captain Schuettler gathered even more telltale evidence. He learned that Leutgert had called on Bialk at the latter's home on May 6 and inquired if the officers had discovered anything at the factory. Bialk had answered that he didn't know about anything being discovered.

"Why do you ask such a question?" the watchman had asked. "What is there for them to discover at the factory?"

"O, nothing—nothing," Leutgert replied. "I have been nervous. I feel as though the police are after me about my wife's disappearance."

He seemed most relieved.

Captain Schuettler was sure, then, that a close examination of the factory would reveal real evidence of murder, and he had been on the premises only a short while when he decided to center his investigation upon the large, recently scoured vat. Into this he descended.

The late Adolph Leutgert, Brutal Wife Slayer.

And presently the detective found just what he was looking for.

In the sediment at the bottom of the tank he found first a tooth, then two corset steels and finally two gold rings, one with the initials "L. L." engraved inside.

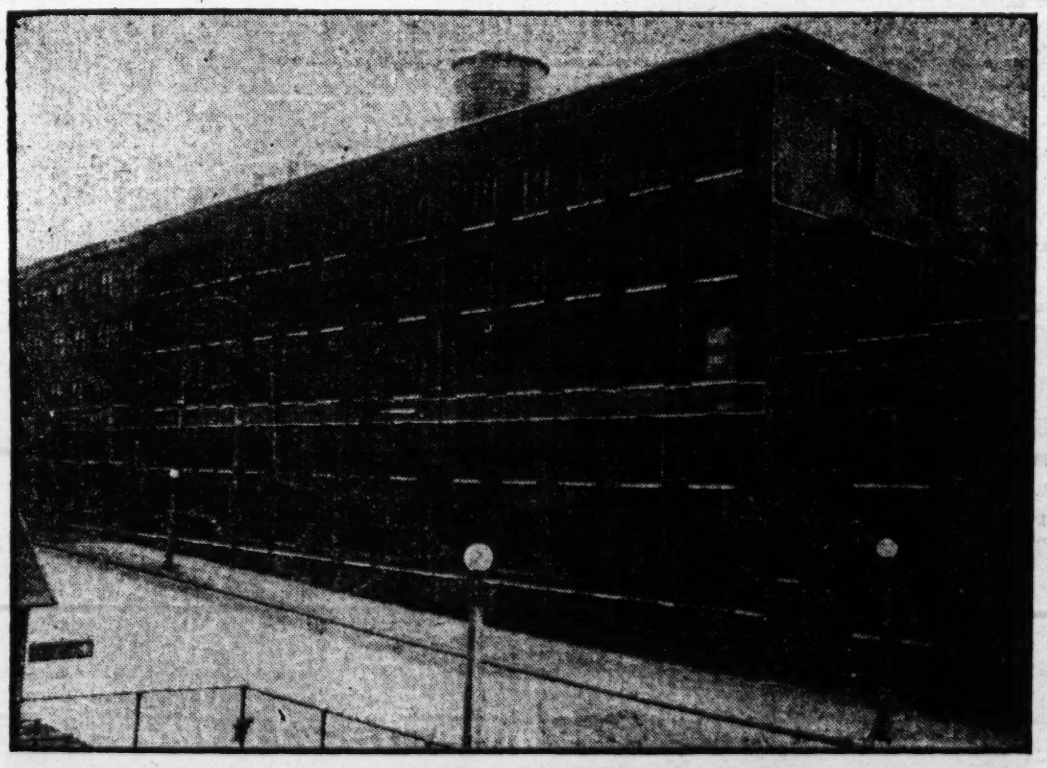

Schuettler then went into the rear yard of the factory, where there were piles of animal bones. He realized he would need more definite evidence to present to a jury than a tooth, two corset ribs and two rings. Out of the mass of bones he selected a skull and several other pieces.

The detective carefully wrapped up these findings and went to see an anthropologist, Prof. George Dosey, of the Field Columbian museum.

"I have here a skull and other pieces of bone," said Schuettler. "I want you to tell me whether they are animal or human."

"The skull is undoubtedly that of a human being," stated the specialist

Only Women Who Ever Bra

BY CARL DE VIDAL HUNT.

PARIS.

WITH the startling news that General Pangalos, the strong man of Greece, had lifted the 1,000-year-old ban prohibiting women from entering the "hanging monasteries" of Mount Athos now comes the story of the daring intrepidity of two young English women who disguised themselves as Greek boys and climbed into the mysterious retreats of the 8,000 woman-shunning monks and escaped with their lives.

The Misses Betty and Pauline Rowe, heroines of this amazing enterprise, are noted in Paris social circles both for their beauty and their grit in doing the things that other people don't do. At a reception in the literary tea shop of the Princess Lucien Murat in the Quai de l'Horloge these two plucky English girls recounted their experiences to a gathering of artistic and fashionable Parisians who acclaimed them as the only women who had ever entered "No Woman's Land," braved the wrath of 8,000 woman-shunning monks and escaped with their lives.

The girls said they were not frightened by the 1,000-year-old malediction the monks of Mount Athos had hurled upon the innocent heads of females of all species. They were in Greece on a holiday, they said, and were going to see all they could.

"Of course, we did not know what was going to happen to us if these monks found out we were women," said Miss Betty, acting as spokesman for herself and sister, "but we had confidence in the old adage that there is safety in numbers.

"One thing we learned right at the outset of our sleuthing pilgrimage was that the monks really hate anything that is female. We saw one climb into a high tree and destroy a wren's nest because female birds are not allowed on Mount Athos. They have large poultry yards, but no hens, all cocks. The female chicks are exterminated the moment the attendants discover their sex. During breeding the monks even go after the female frogs in their lagoons and kill them.

"In the little town of Kalabaka at the foot of Mount Athos we bribed the maire and police chief to let us join a party of harvesters going up to pick peaches in the monastic orchards. We browned our good white skins and got into funny Greek trousers and rough shirts to carry out our plan.

After a long and tedious journey uphill we reached a narrow wooden bridge spanning a ravine that seemed like a million miles in depth. In reality it was about 2,000 feet above the valley. The foreman of the gang knocked at an old iron-studded door at the other end of the bridge and parleyed for a moment with a sleepy-looking man in a long black robe.

"Presently we were ushered into a long courtyard where a hard-faced old man in a Russian coat subjected us to a searching scrutiny. He had a pair of fierce black eyes and was toying with a dangerous looking steel cutlass, and I must say that my heart missed a few beats when he looked us over. But nothing happened. We evidently looked like the real thing.

"After a bit we were led into the orchards and assigned to the monk in charge. The peaches we picked were wonderful and what we could not eat we put into baskets. But after three hours of picking and eating we got quite fed up and began to regret taking all that risk merely to work in an orchard with only one monk to look at.

Miss Pauline Rowe, one of the venturesome beauties who fooled the monks into admitting them to the land where no females of any sort were allowed.

"Luckily three male visitors came to our rescue. They were Americans and they looked as if we could trust them. So I edged up to one of them and quickly told him who and what we were and why we had come up there. Our story made a big hit with the tourists and they at once volunteered to take us into their party as luggage porters.

"Carrying their coats we proceeded toward the base of one of the huge rocks on the top of which stands Holy Trinity Monastery. It seemed like a small bird cage as we looked up to it. In answer to our calls a rope net was pushed out from a little platform at an appalling height and lowered to us by means of a capstan. In the net was a monk, acting as lift boy.

"It was too funny for words, but when the monk told us that the hemp rope of this 'elevator' was never replaced until it broke, the situation didn't seem quite so humorous. The rope looked dreadfully worn. But we took our chances with our new 'masters and let ourselves be pulled up two at a time. The lift boy was a dear, a plump, jolly monk, wearing a beard almost down to his waist.

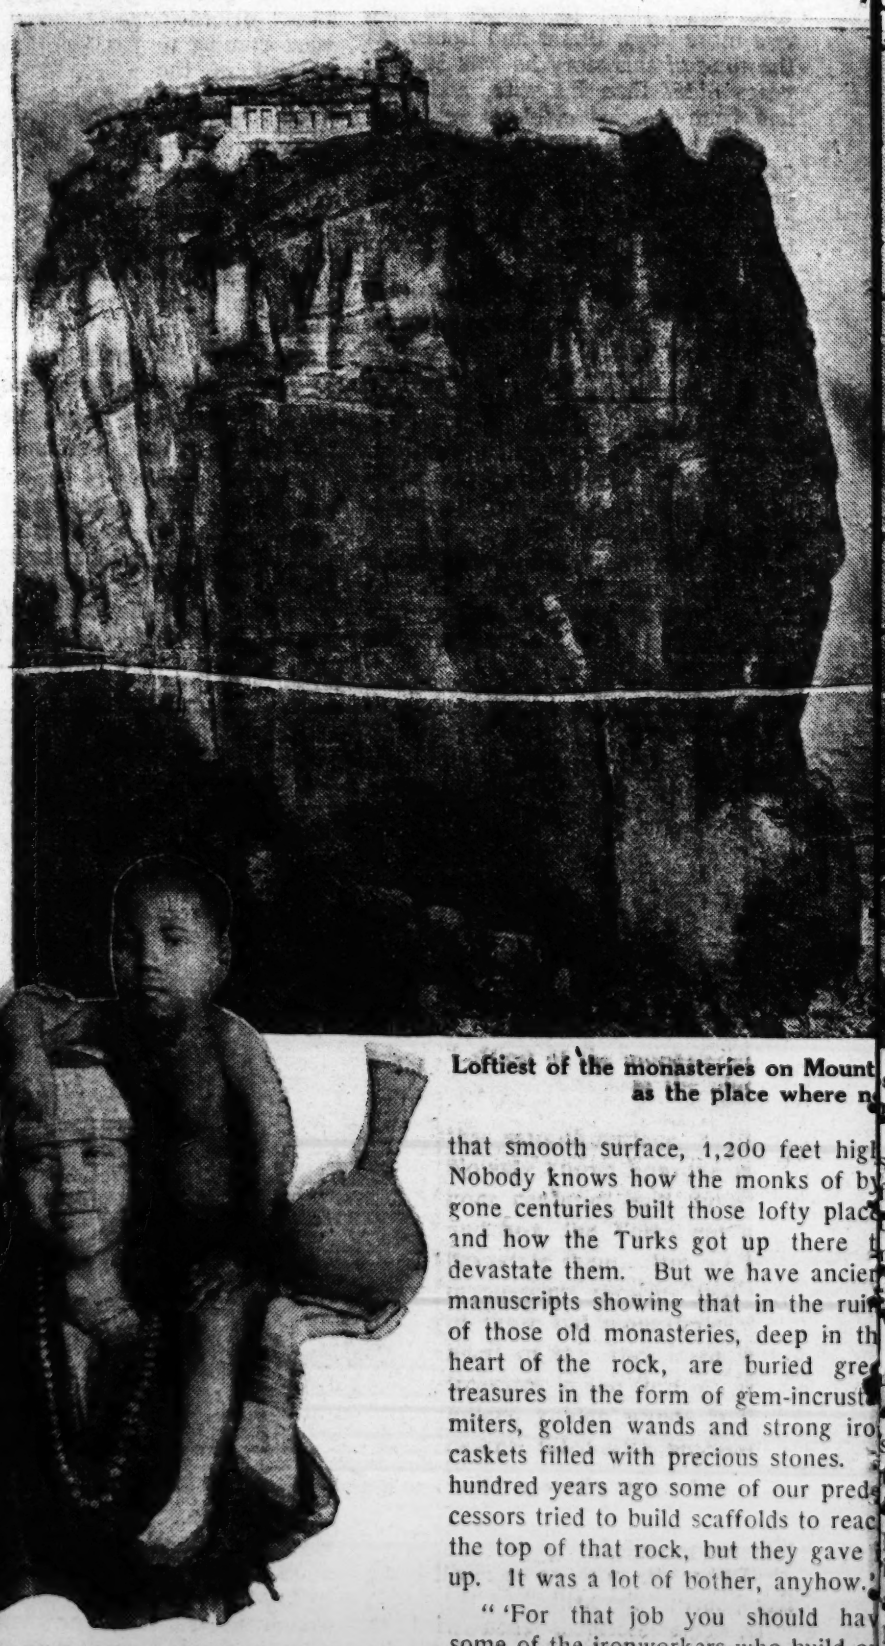

" 'Got anything to drink up here?' asked one of the Americans as the monk took us to the monastery.

"The good monk spoke perfect English. He smiled with his eyes and said:

" 'This is not America, dear brother. We believe in an Almighty God and in a good glass of wine. We have one brand here that is as old as the rocks. Our own vintage, and we love it.'

"From the veranda of the monaster the monk pointed to other huge pro montories. Upon the great rock w could see the ruins of the deserte monasteries of Meteora.

stand him. Nor did we, as a matter of fact. We walked along the broad patio of the monastery and passed many monks who gave us furtive looks. But none spoke. We seemed to be in a world of phantoms.

"'Ask him why they ban women,' I urged one of the Americans.

"'Women, three times impure,' he said, 'would interfere with our meditations. The holy mountain is a great temple from which thousands of prayers must rise to atone for the original sin. If it had not been for a woman's curiosity the world would be a paradise and man would be happy.'

"Presently we entered a church. Under a huge candelabrum of solid gold an arch-mandrite stood surrounded by his clerics, his vision lost in space, as it were, like that of an image worshiper left intact and unmoved by the centuries. The good man looked like the incarnation of living death.

"In the magnificent gardens no woman had ever seen before we walked upon soft moss like Virgil's own shepherds. In the library, in spite of the many acts of vandalism committed by the Turks, we saw treasures that would delight the eyes of the most indifferent bibliophiles. The hall beyond was hung in imperial dalmatics fringed with massive gold. Upon the shelves were countless tiaras glistening in a myriad hues of diamonds, emeralds and sapphires; there were heaps of scarfs and tunicles of the richest embroidered silks, cross staffs studded with gems, and solid gold plate fit for emperors.

"'If women had come here,' our guide explained, 'there wouldn't be a piece of silk or a jewel left in the place.'

"'Did you ever catch any women coming up in disguise?' asked our American companions maliciously.

"'Yes,' the monk said with a reminiscent frown. 'You see, in the summer we engage peasants to pick the fruit in our orchards and in the autumn we get them to harvest the grapes. Hundreds of them are required for the job, because we ourselves do no work of this kind. But on one occasion something dreadful happened. Some of the peasants brought their wives and daughters disguised as men. They worked together and ate their meals in the woods. We would not have noticed anything if it had not been for an accident that happened to one of the women. It was a terrible discovery.

"'Upon the cries of horror that came from the father in charge hundreds of other monks rushed to the scene and surrounded the workers. The women shrieked and their men tried to defend them, but they were outnumbered and eventually driven back to where they had come from. In their haste to save themselves several fell over the cliffs and were never heard from again. Those of the brothers who got into a hand-to-hand battle with the women had to stay in dark cells and fast for two weeks. Women breed trouble, you see.'

"One of the inquisitive Americans asked the excellent monk how it had been discovered that the disguised harvesters were women.

"'O,' said the monk, 'one of the young women fainted and when she fell into the arms of the father supervisor her shirt became undone at the throat.'

"Our guide, as he said this, turned to me and got hold of my collar.

"'Suppose you were a woman instead of a boy porter,' he laughed, 'just a little twist like this should prove very compromising, wouldn't it?'

"With that, and before I had a chance to extricate myself from his grip, my perfectly good male shirt unloosened at the neck and there I stood. It was awful! These was no more denying that I was a woman. The monk was aghast. He turned pale and then red. Then he made as if to grab me. But the Americans promptly interfered.

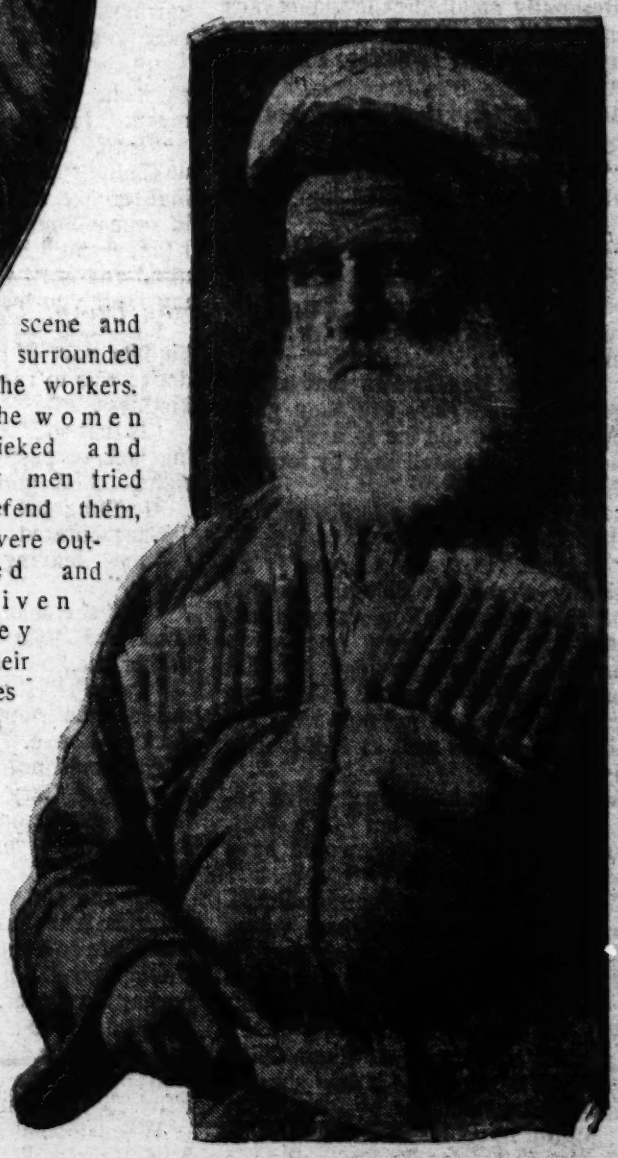

"'Harm these young women,' said one, 'and you go over the cliff!'

"They didn't mean to be that terrible, of course, but they looked as if they were quite able to carry out their threat. The monk still stood irresolute. Then one of my friends got out his leather wallet. He gave the excellent man a few banknotes, dollars they were, and that settled the controversy.

"We were let down the spinning net. It was the end of our visit to 'No Woman's Land.' Looking up we saw the jolly face of the bearded monk smiling down at us.

"'Yaisoo,' he called, 'good luck!'"

Dispatches from Greece state that General Pangalos wants to turn the monastic estates of Mount Athos into one of the world's greatest health resorts, with funicular railways, fine golf links and the 1,000-year-old monasteries as show attractions.

One of the menacing guards under whose scrutiny all visitors to Mount Athos have to pass.

The worst blow to the monks consists in the announcement that their enormous revenues from agricultural rents which the Holy Republic had always regarded as sacred property will now be diverted to the Athens government.

Their Famous Father

"But, Minnie——"

"I asked your father which he'd ruther have," said Minnie contumaciously. "Don't you want to give the man what he likes?"

Olive was one of the women who prefers to select her own bills of fare. She never put that onus on a maid. She retreated, but in some temper.

"They're awful good young beets," called Minnie after her. "I walked out to my uncle's farm this morning after them!"

Almost at once Minnie went to answer the door-bell and ushered Laura Sturgeon into the living room. At sight of the other woman's tense, resolute face, Olive wanted to run. And what her ears expected they received immediately.

"Mrs. Billock, this is a painful call on my part. But I have no choice. To think that my mother at her age——" Laura groped for a handkerchief and Olive in disgust watched her grope. "She's a silly old fool! And if your father tries to marry her, I'll go to court and ask for a guardian, or conservator, or whatever they put over parents when they lose their senses."

Laura used the handkerchief which she had at last located. It was edged with the best lace. "I warn you—and your father! He may be a popular actor. He can't act with me."

It rose to Olive's tongue to explain candidly that there was small, oh, infinitesimally small, likelihood of any woman old or young drawing the wary, handsome Marcus near the altar.

But such frankness would not be good for Milton's future.

"Certainly my mother's physical charms have not attracted him," said the lank Laura most rudely.

"If you are under an impression that my father needs to marry for money," said Olive most haughtily, "you can hardly be familiar with his own income."

"O, every one knows that actors never get what they say they get," cried Laura. "And he is a spender, besides. You can tell that by looking at him."

"Suppose you tell all this to your mother, not to me."

"O, yes! O, yes! O, yes!" So excitedly were the sibilants poured forth that pronunciation wavered and Laura might have been opening a court in legal phraseology. "That would do a lot of good. Don't be sarcastic, please. You know what my mother is, just as well as I do! Not a listener!"

When Laura had gone, Olive reflected moodily that her first fear, concerning the daughter, would have proved the least evil.

She had small time for moodiness. Three callers came in a row; young Mrs. Putnap, a divorcee, looked around disappointedly. The two oldish Hazel girls talked about Broadway. Then came a straggling crowd of women and some of them Olive knew well enough and a few she did not know by name or by face. But for Milton's professional future in Estaville she was polite. Mrs. Putnap and Estelle Hazel coolly stayed for dinner. Marcus dined with the Skellys. Olive enjoyed two faces when this became known.

After dinner she resumed her moody reflections, in a chair by a window. She had almost forgotten that Milton might be in the room; but presently his gaze drew her attention. "Sick?" he asked rather coldly.

"No. Worried." After all, let him know!

"About what, may I ask?" He was ceremoniously polite; a bad sign in a husband.

"About your chances of managing the immense Sturgeon estate."

"Really, Olive! If you're again implying that I'm calculating on your father's——"

"Don't be dumb! I'm doing nothing of the kind. I'm fearing that you will lose a few thousands a year on account of my father."

It was a new, and touchy, and rather vulgar manner in his Olive. He stared. "I don't know just what you are worked up over. But don't you think you're attaching too much importance to money which may or may not come our way?"

"Don't be nasty nice, Milton."

"I am not nasty nice," he said furiously. "Money is not everything, though. You've certainly got queer lately, Olive."

Queer is the one adjective which infuriates a woman.

"I am well aware that money is not everything," she said in a deadly calmness. "But it counts a little in life, doesn't it? Or don't poor babies get rickets for lack of money for good food? And don't children get along a little better with a good education instead of slums raising? And don't you and most men prefer a good home to a fisherman's hut?"

"I didn't say anything of the sort!" he shouted. "How a woman likes to twist a man's words into something different!"

"And I distinctly remember," she went on mercilessly, "that when you first were attracted by me I happened to be wearing a little white georgette garment that cost two hundred and twenty dollars."

"See here, what are you driving at?" he shouted. "You must feel mean. Just mean."

"I do. Just mean." She laughed unkindly. "And you may feel a grand indifference at present to an increase in your income. But in time to come, I fancy you'll be the one to keep it in mind and even inform me that it was my fault you lost out."

O, Olive had lost all reins over the kindlier part of her nature. Her one desire was to repay Milton for his unkindness.

"Is that so?" he said with a terrifying lack of passion. "All right. All right. And good-night."

He flung out of the room.

Cary entered.

"I'm leaving in the morning, Olive."

"O," she snapped, "I suppose Jane compared your eyes. Well, don't bother me."

"I won't!" shouted Cary, and flung out of the room. She heard him packing above.

He would not leave. Marcus would ask why. Cary would stammer and find no excuse and feel remorseful for having been unfilial even in his thoughts, and stay on in misery.

But she and Milton would not forget this bad and common quarrel. Their life together was smudged. The smudge would not be soon erased; perhaps not ever. She had shown an ugly side of her nature to Milton. He had shown an ugly side of his to her. And that is the unforgivable offense between man and wife.

When the telephone rang and Mrs. Sturgeon's rollicking voice came, she had an impulse to smash the receiver. But she did not give way to impulse. She listened coldly while the older woman told that a gala event at the country clubhouse had been planned for the coming Saturday night. It would be a masquerade of a new sort. "My own idea," rollicked the speaker. "The Motor March! Everybody to come as some sort of a car. And as long as it's my invention, I guess I'll lead the march. I've got my rig planned. It'll not be forgotten soon in this town, I promise." A laugh that rollicked with gayety.

Further, the affair was to call for paid admission, and the proceeds given to the well-known Eastern Home for Needy and Aged Actors.

Olive understood well enough that her father would be begged to lead the grand march with the lady who had planned the affair. As it would be public, all Estaville, besides the members of the somewhat exclusive country club, would be pressed to come. Olive closed her handsome eyes and saw Mrs. Sturgeon, fat, flushed of full face, and too gorgeous—doubtless she would go as an imported limousine!—prancing across the big ballroom with Marcus beside her, while some folks gasped and more laughed.

Only, it was most unlikely that the astute and urbane Marcus, who had never in all his pleasant life been trapped into making himself a figure to be ridiculed, would be at the large lady's side.

Whereat it was most likely that Mrs. Sturgeon would be offended. And, as usual, the innocent bystanders, not the principals, would suffer.

She reflected unhappily. Other incidents in her life had been unkind memories. She had deeply regretted the broken friendship with Grace Deane. She had been hurt by the little thin English teacher's post-malice. And she had been ashamed at the time of that mess in Hollywood.

But all other incidents were trivial beside this trouble with Milton. This was tragic. Life and happiness were involved. In forty-eight hours Milton had addressed just eighteen words to her; except, of course, the meaningless remarks in front of Marcus and Cary. The eighteen were a dry intimation that if she had feared all along that he would accidentally be unable to feed, clothe, and house her, she should have given thought to not marrying him in the first place. It was bitter irony of a kind which she had not believed Milton capable.

And when Marcus was informed of the coming social event in his honor she saw that nothing would happen to improve her state of mind or the state of affairs between herself and Milton.

"Saturday night? Well, my dear, I've hugely enjoyed this little visit in your little town. Your friends have been awfully good to me. But, really, Olive, haven't I made enough polite return? O, don't misunderstand me, dear. I've enjoyed nearly every minute and made some worthwhile friends. But, nuff's enuff." There came the suave, magnetic smile which was peculiarly Marcus Destinn's own.

"You mean you're leaving?" said Olive lightly. His departure would both quell and raise a storm. No solution.

"Sunday morning. You know I'd planned two weeks with the Surreys—that English couple, you remember—in northern Maine before rehearsals start on my new play." His fine, cordial eyes twinkled. "I believe I'll sprain my ankle around eight p. m. Saturday."

"A deputation will come here to massage the ankle." It slipped tartly from her.

"I fancy," he said blandly, "that if I hand your Minnie a dollar, she will effectively guard me from callers."

Quite true, reflected Olive. And later Minnie's tongue, mother, sisters, uncles, and inlaws would let Estaville in on the bribe and possibly on the false sprain.

But knowing Marcus, she realized that she was helpless. No use to explain the situation to him. He would lift his fine eyebrows in regret at his doings and promptly feel, if he did not show, displeasure at Olive's implied criticism. Well, many things had conspired to spoil him.

She found the remainder of that week almost intolerable. The affair took on extravagance and promised to be riotous. Mrs. Sturgeon, indeed, was going as a limousine. Three women came with lifted and amused eyebrows to describe to Mrs. Billock the immense hips and panniers of yellow satin which would be Mrs. Sturgeon's idea of a sartorial chassis. For headlights she was getting immense brilliant earrings.

Partly because people are what they are, and partly because she was more moneyed than tactful, Amelia Sturgeon had her share of enemies. Laura, too, must have been talking. Olive guessed what would happen. Every one would suspect that Marcus, in slang parlance, "slipped from under." Every one—or nearly—would be amused. In the end a well meaning, if not very wise old woman, would learn and feel resentful.

She suggested to Marcus that he strain his affability and play the part assigned him.

"Circle a stucco country club veranda as a taxicab?" he mocked gently. "My dear Olive, you have no heart. But I have a brain."

She was sure that during dinner Saturday evening Minnie was choking back giggles.

Little Jane Baybank was going as a flivver. Cary, with a sulky face, had been willing to dress himself up in the same fashion. Jane, in more slang parlance, had Cary where she wanted him.

After dinner Marcus slipped on the floor of the living room. Blandly he was regretful. He called Minnie to bring arnica. "And, my dear Milton, much as it grieves me to miss the evening's festivities, I'm going to do that. However, dear fellow, perhaps you could run me out to the club around eleven for good-bys to a few people here I've learned to like pretty well. I think the ankle could stand a few minutes' strain. My train leaves early, you know, in the morning."

Olive said to herself that she might have known Marcus would play the small act gracefully and so that no blame could be attached to his bland self.

It was odd how Cary lost part of his sulkiness when he saw his father incapacitated. Olive was annoyed. What a self-centered person Cary was!

But she knew that the annoyance was merely scraped up by her sore heart as a homeopathic hope. She and Milton rode out to a gay club in a most ungay silence. It was true that on the way Milton said with a short laugh, "Your father thinks we have quarreled. It struck me that he has an idea of offering me a loan, in case such is needed. Please don't let him do that, will you?"

She made one of her usual impulsive lapses into uncultured repartee. Olive never knew on whom to blame that trick of hers. Two girls at school, perhaps. Or Cary.

"You're a dumbbell, Milton," she flung out furiously, and then wished she had first bitten off her tongue. Milton's stare in the dimly lighted coupe!

On the club veranda, bright with orange swathed light bulbs, she braced herself for what was to come. Mrs. Sturgeon would be aghast, and the first little titter would be a catastrophic bell. Olive wished that she had followed earlier impulse and sent a note ahead with the bad news.

The clubrooms were crowded. Plenty of individuals like to mask and make merry on the least excuse. The affair had assumed magnitude in inverse proportion to its time for preparation. Chiffon rosettes, old tires, oilcloth bumbershoots, and iridescent horns were some of the items assumed to represent horseless carriages.

Olive looked for Mrs. Sturgeon. With a set smile and an apprehension-filled heart, she looked from group to group. That voluble and voluminous elderly lady was not in immedi-

AN argument which has increased in strength in the light of modern knowledge is the argument of consensus gentium. In simple terms it is the argument from universal consent, or the universal instinct of humanity for the divine. It does not appear reasonable to believe that this persistent and ineradicable instinct is a delusion and a deceit. It appears improbable that practically the whole human race should be held in perpetual delusion. The familiar declaration of Lincoln has its application to the question before us: "You may fool some of the people all the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all of the time."

Man is by nature religious, or according to Sabatier, man is incurably religious. Does the highest faculty in man find itself without any counterpart in reality? Is man's nature true in the realm of physical powers and instincts and false in the realm of the spiritual?

Are the instincts of the lower animals practically unerring and reliable for guidance, and the religious instincts of man when they would lead us to God the home of the soul, are so delusive that they lead us only into a fog-bank. We are given the incident of the South Sea sailors capturing a large tortoise off the coast of St. Helena. A storm arose just before reaching England and the tortoise was among the objects thrown overboard. It had been tagged, however, and some weeks afterwards was found on its native beach of St. Helena. Shall we believe that this universal religious instinct existing in every stage of human development, and which missionaries find awaiting them in the most debased tribe is a mere will-o-the-wisp, a false light which leads nowhere?

Dr. W. N. Clarke says, "If the religious nature in man has no real being corresponding to it, no one who is worthy of the adoration and trustful obedience that man is moved to give to One above him, then we can only say that man was born with his highest nature looking out into empty space.

He was endowed with noble powers that can only mislead and disappoint him; and thus he comes into being possessed of a nature that is essentially false. But if human nature is false in its highest region, false by being made so in its very constitution; then we cannot be sure that it is true in any departments of its activity.

If we say that man's highest nature naturally deceives him, we resign all right to rely upon our nature or the validity of our powers, and confidence in our mental processes is at an end. We are compelled to trust our own powers just as truly in the religious realm as in the physical or intellectual. If we are not safe in this, we are sure of nothing; and the powers that we are compelled to trust affirm that there is One above us who is worthy of our love and adoration."

Is man alone deceived when he follows the guidance of his highest and noblest instincts?

There is given to us the Parable of the Two Chicks: The two chicks were housed in eggs which lay side by side under the warm sheltering feathers of the mother hen. They had reached the stage of growth when there came to both of them a strong impulse to break through the shells. A conversation took place through the thin shells which separated them. One was an agnostic chick and the other a Christian philosopher.

The agnostic chick said: "I feel an almost irresistible impulse to break through my shell today. I have an inward assurance of light, air, food, a larger world, with a wider expanse of beauty, and a freer realm of life. But since I have never seen and do not know of the other world, it would be a very foolish thing to tear down the only house I know anything about. I will take counsel of prudence and not break through this shell." The chick which was a religious philosopher said: "I do not know anything of any world outside this shell. But an instinct burns within me that tells me to make the venture, that there is a life beyond, and that anyway to remain here at last means death. I do not see how feet, wings, eyes and bill are to come into play, but there comes the call of a larger life with boundless horizons, so here goes for the venture."

A beautiful little chick was soon basking in the sunlight. The busy housewife came out to look after the chickens and found in the deserted nest a single egg. She cracked it with her thimble and there lay before her the stiff, dead body of the unhatched bird. It was the agnostic chick.

It does not seem reasonable to believe that while the instincts of the lower animals are reliable, that the strong, persistent religious instincts of the human heart are no more than the baseless fabric of a dream. This may be termed the unsafe argument from analogy, but it is a form of analogy which fits in well with a conception of a universe that is not constructed for the mockery of human aspirations.

The credit belongs to John Fiske in first giving expression to the idea which brings strong scientific confirmation to the truthfulness of man's religious instincts as to their testimony for the unseen world of spiritual realities. He writes: "Every stage of development has had reference to actual existence outside. The eye was developed in response to the outward existence of radiant light; the ear in response to the outward existence of sound; the mother's love comes in response to the infant's needs; fidelity and honor were slowly developed as the nascent social life required them; everywhere the internal adjustment has been brought about so as to harmonize with some actually existing external fact. Such has been nature's method. Such is the deepest law of life that science has been able to detect. Now if the relation established in the morning twilight of man's existence between the human soul and immaterial is a relation of which only the subjective term is real and the objective term is non-existent, then I say it is something utterly without precedent in the whole history of creation. All the analogies of evolution, so far as we have been able to decipher it, are overwhelmingly against any such supposition. . . . . So far as our knowledge of nature goes, the whole momentum of it carries us onward to the conclusion that the unseen world as the objective term in a relation of fundamental importance that has coexisted with the whole career of mankind has a real existence; and it is but following out the analogy to regard that unseen world as the theater where the ethical process is destined to reach its full consummation.

The lesson of evolution is that through all the weary ages the human soul has not been cherishing in religion a delusive phantom, but in spite of seemingly endless groping and stumbling it has been rising to the recognition of its essential kinship with the ever-living God.

Of all the implications of the doctrine of evolution with regard to man, I believe the very deepest and strongest to be that which asserts the everlasting reality of religion.

It may be noted that his argument goes beyond and supplements the traditional argument from the universal religious instinct of mankind in that these instincts could never have had origin and growth aside from the realm of unseen spiritual realities to which they made response, any more than the eye would have been possible without the world of light to which it made response, any more than the flower could bloom in beauty without a world of sunshine and atmosphere.

"ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE" :: :: By POUSSIN

This is the 23rd of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY

"Orpheus and Eurydice" was painted by Nicholas Poussin, French artist, who came out of the north of France with so much style and versatility that he captured the admiration of Paris and Rome, the art centers.

He was born of a peasant family, near Villiers, in the year fifteen hundred ninety-four. His mother spent her time drudging in the fields, preparing the meals, living a life of self-sacrifice and in her spare moments reading the stories of mythology to her little Nicolas. There's a woman with a heart of gold for you—the kind of gold that melts only to insure happiness for her children.

One night she told him the story of Orpheus' love for Eurydice, (pronounced U-rid-i-see) and some thirty years later when he painted his conception of these two great lovers, people said his love for mythology furnished the inspiration—not at all, it was mother-love and the memory of those boyhood days that inspired him.

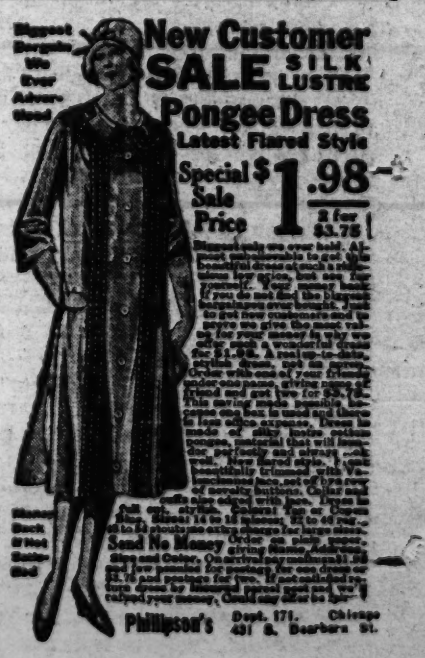

Orpheus, like his father, Apollo, was so gifted that when he played the lyre, the birds stopped singing, the beasts in the forest forgot their quarrel and mortals were seemingly lifted to divinity. He loved Eurydice, but competition here was keen. The number of suitors professing their love for this beautiful, golden-haired maiden rivaled the admirers that crowded the courts of Ulysses. When Orpheus started to play she forgot the others were there—forgot everything, except that she loved him.

Shortly after the wedding feast Eurydice died. Orpheus made a perilous journey to Hades to beg of Pluto to give back his bride. The Monarch of the Underworld repulsed him angrily—then came that sweet, harmonious music from the lyre, and the heart of the cruel ruler melted. He consented to restore the bride if Orpheus would promise not to look at her on the way back. The pledge was made. Through the darkness they fled, and with just a short way to go, Orpheus thought he heard his wife call—without thinking he looked around—a promise broken—Eurydice disappeared in the darkness. He continued the sad journey alone and spent the remainder of his days in a forest far from the companionship of men.

At the age of eighteen we find Poussin in Paris, but after a short stay he continued to Rome to further his study. His first days in Rome were but a continuation of the struggle and hardship of other days. He was without food and clothing, but genius thrives in the rich soil of poverty. "Who ne'er his bread with sorrow ate," is life as every artist knows it.

Rome opened up wonderful opportunities for him, and after painting "The Death of Germanicus," he leaped to fame. His gift for painting was so wonderful that commonplace scenes and subjects he painted bordered on sublimity. Outside of two years he spent in Paris as painter in ordinary to Louis XIII., he never left Rome. He died in his seventy-second year.

INSTALLMENT V.

"Dick Alford Has His Say."

GILDER had recovered something of his command of himself and his feelings; the situation, awkward as it was, had brought him violently into the circle about which so far he had revolved. It were better to be considered as an undesirable suitor than to be denied consideration as a factor at all in Leslie Gwyn's life.

"May I ask by what right you dispose of my guests?" he demanded, but Dick took no notice of him.

"Look after your sister, Gwyn," he said, and there was a scarcely veiled menace in the words, "I will give myself the pleasure of calling on you this evening."

He took the girl's hand in his; she was still white and shaking, but smiled into his face.

"I've made myself rather ridiculous, haven't I?" she said in a low tone that only he could hear. "Dicky—perhaps I'm getting a little jumpy, and I may have taken offense——"

He patted her hand gently and walked with her past Gilder into the hall, Arthur following. It was Dick who opened the door and stood patiently until they had gone; then he turned to face the enraged owner of the flat.

"I had some real business to do with you, Gilder, but that can wait. First of all, I would like to ask, what have you said to Miss Gwyn?"

"That is entirely my business," said Gilder. His gaze was steady; again he was completely master of himself, if not of the situation.

"My business also," said Dick, without heat. "You are aware that Miss Gwyn is engaged to my brother?"

Gilder licked his dry lips.

"That doesn't really interest me," he said. And then, after a second's thought: "I'm going to be frank with you, Alford—we may as well clear the air. I have asked Miss Gwyn to be my wife."

"O, indeed?" said Dick softly. "And what had Miss Gwyn to say to that?"

"You didn't give her an opportunity of replying," said the other, "but I rather think that there will be no difficulty in the matter."

Dick did not conceal his smile. A shrewd judge of men, he had rightly understood the situation when he had seen Arthur's face on his return to the flat.

"You mean there will be no difficulty so far as Mr. Gwyn is concerned? I admit you have an historical precedent. You are not the first lawyer who wished to marry into his master's family."

If Dick had not been angry he would not have said this; immediately the words were out he was sorry. But Gilder took up the point quickly.

"I am not an Uriah Heep," he said, with a grim smile. "I am neither humble nor lowly."

"I'm sorry, but really I don't think that matters very much, Gilder. Whatever Mr. Gwyn's attitude may be, there will be a considerable difficulty in respect to Miss Gwyn—and to me."

"To you?" Gilder's eyebrows went up and his lips curled. "Are you the lady's—er——"

"I am not engaged to Miss Gwyn, but my brother is," said Dick evenly. "But that is not the point. I am a friend of Leslie Gwyn's, and even if she changed her mind about marrying into my family, that would not affect the issue."

Gilder was about to speak, but Dick went on:

"I don't know what pull you have with Gwyn or what dire threats you are holding over his head."

He saw the man start, and laughed.

"That went very near the mark?" he said. "But whatever influence you have, Gilder, you are not going to marry Leslie Gwyn."

Gilder's eyes narrowed.

"Is that a threat?" he asked.

"You can take it as a threat or as a pleasant compliment, or any old way you choose," said Dick, with that impish smile of his. "And now, if you don't mind, we'll come to business. You've bought a property of ours—Red Farm. You've paid thirty-five hundred pounds to Leonard. I have come to ask you to call off your bargain and to take five hundred profit."

"In other words, you want to buy it back, eh? Well, there's nothing doing!" said Gilder harshly. "I intend living at Red Farm, and there isn't a law in the land that can stop me. You may not like my presence, but that is neither here nor there. I am not living at Chelfordbury for the pleasure of seeing you every day of my life."

Dick nodded.

"I wondered why you wanted to live there at all but now I think I understand," he said. "The offer I have made to you is without prejudice to any action I may take. Unfortunately for you, Leonard has no power to retransfer the property without my brother's consent—which means my consent, for I hold his power of attorney. Leonard may hold the property, but you cannot. You're a lawyer, and it is not necessary for me to explain the intricacies of a copyhold lease, and that was all Leonard was buying. If you decide to fight the case, I'll take you into court, and you know that I shall get a verdict against you. I am offering you a chance of settling the matter amicably."

"Which I refuse," said the other promptly.

Dick inclined his head.

"Very good. You will probably, on considering the matter in a calmer atmosphere, take a different view."

He walked from the room, swinging his hat. In the doorway he turned.

"As for Miss Leslie Gwyn, you will be well advised to reconsider that question also."

"And suppose I don't?"

Again that unfathomable smile.

"You are going to be sorry," said Dick cryptically.

* * * *

Not a word did Leslie say about her interview with Gilder, and her brother seemed just as anxious to avoid the topic as she. They drove down from town, and all the time he kept up a ceaseless flow of talk about affairs which he thought might interest her. He was nervous, and once, when she woke him from a reverie with a question, he started and turned red.

"Sorry!" he stammered. "I was thinking of something."

"And something unpleasant, Arthur," she said gently.

He was staring straight ahead of him.

"Yes, something damnably unpleasant!"

They were nearing Chelfordbury now, and she put the question that had trembled on her lips throughout that long journey.

"Arthur, do you know what Mr. Gilder asked me?" And when he did not reply: "He proposed to me," she said.

Still he avoided her eyes.

"Did he?" he asked awkwardly. "Well, that's an extraordinary thing for him to do!"

"Arthur, did you know he was going to propose to me when you left us alone?"

"He isn't a bad fellow," said Arthur Gwyn lamely. "Of course, the idea is preposterous. But, after all, it is no sin for a fellow to fall in love with a girl and want to marry her. I mean, one can see his point of view."

Leslie was a little shocked; she was more than a little angry. But she kept a tight rein on her tongue.

"But, Arthur, you wouldn't agree to that? You know I'm engaged to Harry, why, you told me that it was the dream of your life to see me wearing a coronet! Not that I want to wear the beastly thing, but that was what you said."

Ordinarily, Arthur Gwyn was possessed of a ready tongue and a nimble wit. He had lied his way out of many an embarrassing situation, with more worldly wise people than Leslie. But somehow, in her presence his brain refused to function, and his witticisms were banal and vulgar even to himself.

"My dear little girl," he said, with an attempt at cheerfulness, "it really doesn't matter to me whom you marry so long as you're happy. Gilder is a very solid man; he has a considerable private fortune."

This time she swung round on her seat and faced him.

"Arthur, why do you insist on the fortune? Where is my money?"

The question came pointblank and was not to be fenced with. He roused himself to meet a situation which had never before risen.

"Your money? Why, invested, of course!"

He tried very hard, but he could not produce that convincing note which was so necessary.

"Your fortune is in all sorts of shares and bonds. What a queer question to ask me, girlie!"

"How much money have I?" she demanded ruthlessly.

"About a quarter of a million—a little more or a little less. For goodness' sake don't talk about money, my dear."

"But I will talk about it," she said. "Arthur, have I any at all?"

His laughter did not carry conviction. And usually people accepted his word. Harry Chelford had asked him only a week before in what stocks was his late mother's fortune invested. And Arthur had replied glibly enough. It was the Miriam Chelford trust that had occupied his mind through the journey. Something must be done there. Dick Alford had started to ask questions, and Dick had a memory like a recording machine. As for Leslie and her tiresome questions:

"What a silly kid you are! Of course you've got money! I wish to heaven I had half your wad! You're a very rich little girl, and you ought to be a very happy little girl."

She shook her head.

"I don't think I have a penny," she said, and his heart sank.

With a tremendous effort of will he met her questioning eyes.

"Why do you say that?"

She shook her head.

"I don't know—in a way I hope I'm poor. I know I had money left me, because you showed me the will a long time ago. But you've been handling it, Arthur, and I've an idea that things haven't been going too well with you."

"Do you mean I've stolen your fortune?" he asked loudly, and she smiled.

"I wouldn't accuse you of that. I think it is possible you may have invested my fortune—unwisely. And it is quite possible that that quarter of a million has dwindled and dwindled until it has disappeared. Is that so?"

He did not answer.

"Is that so?"

"I wish to God you wouldn't ask such stupid questions," he said irritably. "Of course it isn't so!"

For one wild moment he had the impulse to tell the truth; but vanity, a shrinking from the possible effects the news would have upon the one person in the world for whom he had a grain of affection, inhibited the confession.

But he came back naturally to the one thought present in his mind, as he chattered and as he brooded. His last hope lay in the discovery of the Chelford treasure. If that were found, he could snap his fingers at Gilder, could restore the wasted fortune of his sister, and establish himself beyond assail. Gilder would never dare bring his story of the four bills to a court of law, and if he did, backed by the Chelford fortune, Arthur could face the storm, confident that, if he made restoration to the man he had robbed, no evil consequences would follow. He was grasping at a straw, and knew it. But Mary Wenner was a shrewd little devil, not the kind of girl who, for the sake of making a sensation, would come to him with a cock and bull story. She might have been mistaken; on the other hand, she was so brimful of confidence that he could not believe the story was altogether without foundation.

The road to Willow House skirted the grounds of Fossaway Manor, and he saw the crumbling arch, red in the setting sun, standing like a fiery question mark that attuned with his mood of doubt and hope.

Arrived at his home, he went up to his room to bathe and change before dinner, and it was with a positive sense of freedom that he found himself alone. He was a fool not to have told her the truth, he thought. After dinner he would get her in a softer mood, and make a clean breast of it. And then, at the tail of this decision, came the recollection of his interview with Mary Wenner. Suppose she had told the truth? Suppose he found these millions of pounds that had lain for centuries in the ground? He formed yet another plan.

To his unspeakable relief, Leslie was in her most cheerful mood throughout the dinner, and the thought of Fabrian Gilder seemed to have been effectively banished.

"Leslie," he asked, after the coffee had been servd, "I want you to do me a great favor."

She looked at him across the table, doubt in her eyes.

"Do you remember Mary Wenner, who used to be Harry's secretary?"

She nodded.

"Yes. Dick doesn't like her very much; he was telling me the other day——"

"Never mind what Dick likes or dislikes," he said testily. "Great heavens! Are our lives to be run according to his fancies? I'm very sorry," he apologized with a laugh, "but you'll have to forgive me—I'm rather nervy tonight."

"What about Mary Wenner?" she asked.

"I was wondering whether you would like to ask her down here to stay a week-end? I shall have a lot of work to do, and she's a very excellent stenographer. But I'll be perfectly frank with you, and tell you that that is not the only reason I'd like you to invite her. She's been in some kind of scrape and I want to help her through."

Leslie Gwyn was not curious, or she might have questioned him more about this mythical trouble.

"I don't know why she shouldn't come," she said. "If you'll give me her address I will write to her. I rather fancy that Dick's main objection to her is that she had some sort of attachment for Harry."

"She's almost forgotten Harry," smiled her brother. "To be perfectly candid, I like the girl. She's not a lady, of course, but 'lady' nowadays is a vague and meaningless term. And there was really nothing in her affair with Harry. I mean it was not serious."

"I never thought so," said the girl, and thereupon the question of Mary Wenner was dismissed.

He had, he said, some work to do that night, and left her alone in the drawing room, and for once she did not find time hanging very heavily upon her hands. Ordinarily the prospect of an evening spent alone would have seemed intolerably dull, but she had so much to think about, so many perspectives to adjust, that she rather welcomed her solitude.

Even in so short a distance of time, her experience with Fabrian Gilder seemed grotesquely unreal. Perhaps she was still numb from the shock of it, for, going over that unpleasant feature incident by incident, she could be neither angry nor amused.

Perhaps she was a little afraid—she still felt the pressure of his strong hands upon her, still saw the gray fires that burnt in his eyes. And Dick—how natural it had been to go to him—how safe she had felt! Would it have been the same if Harry Chelford had providentially arrived? She was sure in her mind that she would not have run to Harry, or found comfort in his encircling arms.

She looked at the clock; it was ten minutes after nine. Dick would be back at Fossaway Manor by now, and she went out into the hall and, taking off the receiver of the telephone, gave a number.

Arthur's study door opened into the hall, and he came out.

"To whom are you telephoning?" he asked suspiciously.

"I'm calling up Fossaway Manor," she said.

"You're not going to invite Dick Alford over, are you?" he demanded resentfully.

Before she could reply, he heard the ring of a bell in the servants' quarters and she ran to the door. Through the glass panel she saw the gleam of a white shirt front on the unlighted porch, and switched on the lights. It was Dick, and, with an oath, Arthur Gwyn flung back into his room and slammed the door. He had hoped that Dick had forgotten his threat to call that night.

"Enter, Richard of Chelford!" said the girl dramatically, as she threw open the door. "I was just phoning for you. I'm bored to extinction and I want amusing."

Which was not true.

"I don't feel at all amusing," said Dick, as he closed the door and hung up his cap on the hatrack.

She took him by the arm and led him into the drawing room.

"Arthur is invisible tonight; he is working very hard. He doesn't approve of you, and you hardly approve of him, so we shan't be interrupted! Dick, it was lovely of you to arrive as you did this afternoon."

"Gilder proposed to you, I understand?" said Dick quietly.

"Did he tell you?" She fetched a long sigh. "Yes; I was amazed. I suppose it was very complimentary, but why did he do it in such a great hurry, do you think?"

Dick took a cigarette from the box she offered him and lit it before he replied.

"That is exactly what I've come to discover," he said. "I feel rather like a grand inquisitor, but I must know."

"And I can't tell you."

She was acting. He knew that her one object was to turn him from an interview with her brother, and she in turn knew that her efforts would be in vain.

"You had no hint of this precious proposal in advance? Arthur told you nothing?"

"No; Arthur couldn't possibly have known. He told me that Mr. Gilder wanted us to see his new flat, and although it was a great bore going out to tea with somebody one doesn't know, I went——"

"To oblige Arthur, of course?"

"No," she insisted, "you must credit me with a reasonable amount of feminine curiosity. Bachelors' establishments intrigue me. Your one drawback, from my point of view, is that you've only a poky little office, and, I presume, a wretched little servant's bedroom."

"For a second son I'm rather well off," said Dick, with a quizzical smile. "You are sure Arthur didn't give you any forewarning of this proposal?"

"Absolutely sure. He was as much astonished as I was."

"Have you discussed it with him?" he asked, quickly.

She hesitated.

"Yes, I spoke about it in the car on the way down, and Arthur was rather—astonished."

"Only astonished—not furious?"

"He may have been furious, too. Arthur doesn't carry his heart on his sleeve."

"I should imagine not," said Dick, drily, and then, "Will you ask him if I can see him for five minutes?"

She looked at him with troubled eyes.

"You're not going to quarrel, are you, Dick?"

He shook his head.

"No, I'm going to ask him a question or two. You realize that I'm entitled to know."

"Why are you 'entitled'?"

"Don't you think I am?" he asked, gently.

Her eyes went up to his for a second, and then dropped, as she read something there that thrilled and hurt her. Without a word she went out into the hall and knocked at Arthur's door.

"What does he want? I can't be bothered tonight," said Arthur Gwyn fretfully. "What a fellow he is for interrupting people when they're busy!"

"I think you'd better see him, Arthur," she said, and added: "And get it over."

He shot a quick glance at her.

"What do you mean—get what over?" he asked.

"Whatever there is to get over," said Leslie quietly.

Arthur looked down at the picturesque confusion of papers that covered his library table.

"All right, shoot him in," he said ungraciously.

He did not attempt to rise from his chair when Dick entered, closing the door behind him.

"Sit down, will you, Alford? Leslie tells me you want to see me."

"Leslie need not have given you that message. I'd already told you this afternoon that I would come to you for an explanation."

"Of what?"

"Of the unpleasant happening at Gilder's flat. This man proposed to your sister—you know that?"

"Leslie told me," said the other, after a moment's silence.

"And you were annoyed, one supposes? You will dismiss this clerk of yours tomorrow?"

The other leaned back in his chair.

"I don't see why I should," he said coolly. "After all, it's no crime for any man to propose to a pretty girl. Of course, he's not the sort of fellow I should choose for a brother-in-law, but if brothers had to choose husbands for their sisters, you know, Alford, there would be some very queer marriages!"

"What is his pull?" asked Dick quietly.

"I don't——"

"What is his hold on you?"

"What the devil do you mean?"

"Just what I say. You would never tolerate a man like Gilder paying attentions to your sister, apart from the insult he offered to a prospective Countess of Chelford, unless he had such a grip on you that all your natural indignation was crushed by the fear of some consequence he held over your head."

Arthur Gwyn found it difficult to control his voice.

"My dear fellow, how very melodramatic!" he scoffed. "'Hold on me'! You must have been studying the latest Drury Lane play! Naturally, I would rather see Leslie married to your brother, but I certainly would put no obstacle in her way if her heart was set elsewhere."

"On Gilder, in fact?"

"On Gilder," nodded Arthur gravely, as though the matter had been the subject of deep thought and much self-communion.

And then Dick Alford asked a question that brought the man to his feet, white and shaking.

"Is it the question of the bills?"

"The—the what?" faltered the lawyer.

"The four bills which were supposed to be backed by my brother—the signatures being forgeries. I thought you knew that I had seen them. They were shown to me at the bank, and fortunately I did not disclaim them—fortunately for you, I mean. When I went to see them again they were taken up. I presume Mr. Fabrian Gilder redeemed them. That would have cost him a little over five thousand pounds, and I presume he did not do that out of sheer altruism."

Arthur Gwyn's mouth was dry; he could scarcely articulate.

"I didn't know until today," he muttered. "Harry was ill at the time. The money was due to me for—for—legal costs. I went down to the bank to take them up and found they had been honored."

"Was that the pull?"

He did not meet the steady gaze that was fixed on him.

"Yes, that was the pull, if you want to know. You don't suppose I'd allow Leslie to marry a swine like Gilder unless—unless he had something on me, do you? Can't you understand my position, Alford? I'm ruined! That fellow could send me to jail—he still can."

Dick shook his head.

"Fire him tomorrow," he said. "If he produces the bills, I will undertake that Harry will acknowledge the signatures."

The pink came back to the colorless face of the lawyer.

"You'll do this?" he said eagerly. "My God! you don't know what a weight you've lifted off my mind. You're a brick, by jove! I'll fire him tomorrow."

He held out an eager hand and Dick took it with some hesitation. At the best of times Arthur Gwyn did not impress him; at this moment, almost incoherent with relief, he seemed a pitiful coward.

"I will pay Harry every penny. I have something on the stocks now that will bring me in a fortune, that will wipe out all my debts and put me on my feet again."

There was humor in the situation; for the thing which was to rehabilitate his fortunes was no less than the barefaced robbery of Harry Chelford's inheritance! But Arthur was not conscious of the irony of the position. He would deal with Gilder in the morning. Thank God, he had not gone still deeper into the mire! The knowledge that in his pocketbook was another bill as yet unuttered, did not cool the glow of virtue he was experiencing. Henceforth he would walk the straight way.

"There's one thing you could do for me, Alford—hurry along that marriage. Fix it for next month if you can. Leslie is just a foolish girl, she is trying to put off the inevitable, but that's natural, isn't it? Can't you buck up Harry——"

Dick Alford looked at him steadily.

"The matter must be left entirely to Leslie," he said, and there was something very definite and final in those words.

They came out of the library together; Leslie waiting, a little fearful, saw the smile on her brother's face and breathed a sigh of thankfulness.

"You're not going?," Dick was reaching for his cap.

"I have to get back to the house," he said, and, seeing her look of disappointment, he stood irresolutely.

"Come along in and play mah-jongg. I am in a mah-jongg mood," said Arthur, almost jovially.

If there was one thing that Dick could not endure that night it was to sit vis-a-vis with Arthur Gwyn. He would like to have stayed with the girl, but for the moment her brother seemed an inevitable third. And he was terribly informative. Arthur was in his most expansive mood.

"Here is something that will interest you!"

He pointed to the wall. Hanging against a dark wooden shield was an iron dagger—black and sinister, the handle worn smooth, the long blade notched and jagged. Dick had seen it before.

"That should be at your place, Alford. The veritable dagger of the veritable Black Abbot's slayer—Hubert of Redruth! Look at his arms on the hilt. . . ."

"I have seen it," said Dick shortly. "Put on your coat and come for a walk, Leslie," he suggested, and the obliging Arthur, who would have been agreeable to any scheme he propounded, seconded the suggestion.

The night was cool and dark. There was a full moon, visible at intervals through the drift of the cloud. Leslie slipped her arm into his as they walked down the dark avenue towards the road.

"Did you quarrel?" she asked.

"N-no, we didn't quarrel," said Dick. "There was a little plain speaking, but I think it cleared the air, and, after all, that was what I came for. He is dismissing Gilder tomorrow."

She was silent at this, and did not speak again until they were on the road.

"Is that wise?" she asked. "I'm a little afraid of the man. I feel he would be a very bad enemy."

She heard his soft laugh and felt reassured.

"He's that all right," said Dick; "the worst enemy any man could have, I should imagine. But an enemy is only dangerous in ratio to his hurting power. I don't think Mr. Gilder will hurt anybody."

"Not Arthur?" she asked.

"Not Arthur, and certainly not you."

She squeezed his arm in hers.

"You'd be a wonderful brother," she said.

"I am," he said curtly, and she smiled in the darkness. "Your handsome relative asked me to persuade you to marry next month, and I told him point blank that I would do nothing of the kind. Leslie, do you know that you never see Harry from one week-end to another?"

you in pain." He attempted to take the girl, but Wells swung her away from him.

"That's all right, Count, I can manage it. You might hurry on ahead and have a doctor ready. We'll soon be there."

Without waiting an answer from the infuriated de Barsac, Wells began the steep decent of the hill, picking his steps carefully. Virginia's eyes were closed, but her tightly pressed lips indicated the pain she was suffering. The chauffeur had taken command of the situation and the Count with but two courses to follow. He could come behind or he could hurry on and secure a doctor. He hurried on, so angry that he would gladly have seen both of them slip and go crashing down the rocky hillside.

When Justice Triumphed

about coming to her husband's rescue in this very important crisis.

"Interesting, if true," said the prosecution, and proceeded to prove that the handwriting of the letter in no way resembled the handwriting of the missing woman.

The state produced witness after witness and each one added another knot to the bonds which held the arch-murderer.

Three witnesses testified they saw Leutgert enter his factory about 10 o'clock on the night of May 1 with a woman about the size of Mrs. Leutgert. To this the watchman added his story. He testified that Leutgert had promised him that if he kept his mouth shut he and his son would get good jobs in the factory when the business got going again.

Damaging Testimony.

Frank Odorfsky, who helped Leutgert deposit the caustic potash in the tank, stated that in all his experience the factory had never used this substance before, and Carl Voelker, a chemist, said that there was no occasion for potash in a sausage factory.

Another important witness was Mrs. Christina Feldt, a widow, with whom the defendant had at one time been infatuated. She testified on the stand that Leutgert had often expressed his hatred for his wife and had intimated that he would like to get rid of her.

As for the ghastly exhibits themselves, experts readily testified that they were human bones and human flesh. Two physicians agreed that the mass of soft substance which had presumably boiled over the vat was flesh that had undergone burning by potash.

Particles removed from the drain pipes of the factory were produced in court and established to be portions of human bones.

During all this revolting parade of evidence, Leutgert remained unmoved. He handled the exhibits with absolutely no show of feeling. While crowds in the courtroom shuddered and sickened, he coolly turned over his wife's skull and examined it, as though it were a head of cabbage.

The defense opened its case on September 24 (one month after the trial began) with witnesses who testified that since May 1 they had at different places seen a woman who resembled Mrs. Leutgert. Then, Mary Seimmering testified for the defense, declaring the defendant had always treated his wife with the utmost kindness.

She denied having been on intimate terms with Leutgert, though members of the grand jury were subsequently produced who swore she had admitted to improper relations with the accused man.

Accused Takes Stand.

So, day after day, week after week, the interminable trial wore on, with the defense blocking every effort of the state to get Leutgert on the witness stand. The case was not submitted to the jury until October 18, more than seven weeks after the opening of the trial.

For sixty-six hours the jury mulled over the evidence and then announced it was impossible for them to reach an agreement. They reported that nine stood for conviction and three for acquittal.

The whole business had to be repeated.

The second trial began on November 19, 1897. Leutgert made an appeal to the public for financial assistance, but few responded. Weeks passed. The popular opinion was that the Leutgert trial had come to stay. The high point was reached January 19, 1898, when Leutgert finally took the stand himself.

So great was the crowd that turned out for this feature attraction that the available police reserves were overtaxed.

But all things must end. The Leutgert trial resulted in the conviction of the defendant and his commitment to Joliet state prison for life.

Leutgert was destined not to spend much of his life in prison. On the morning of July 27, 1899, he marched down his cell corridor with other prisoners and returned shortly afterward with his breakfast pail. He was about to start his meal when he suddenly fell forward.

When the prison physicians reached him he was dead, a victim of heart disease.

Thus did Adolph Leutgert cheat justice out of her proper triumph.

Years later the famous case again came into the news when roomers in the former Leutgert home, since moved around the corner, reported they had encountered ghosts in the house.

Among others who testified to seeing things was Miss Myra Berger, an 18-year-old telephone operator. She said she saw a pale phantom of the powerfully built murderer and called her sister, who testified to the same extraordinary apparition. While they looked, the phantom faded.

Their Famous Father

ate view. Olive was compelled to endure a veritable parade of persiflage from friends and acquaintances.

Judge Skelly, in jovial humor, hailed her for the nonappearance of Marcus. The two Hazel girls trailed in her wake. Mrs. Putnap, however, had a barb.

"Mrs. Sturgeon? Oh my, yes, she is here! Somewhere. Billowing like a—a truck. Or the Pacific ocean. Really, I didn't know there was so much yellow charmeuse in stores. Really, Mrs. Billock, everybody's saying that your father is not only the world's best actor—but its most good natured one, too!"

Even the Hazel girls, who did not like Mrs. Putnap, giggled. Olive was furious, but she kept on her set smile. "Dad's a dear," she murmured noncommittally.

Across the great lounging room she met Milton's set smile. How dare he look at her in that fashion, as if she were a designing and money-mad woman who had made everything subservient to her ambition, including ordinary friendships and the social amenities.

There was actual dislike in her handsome eyes when at last she entered a dressing room, riotous with women and girls, and found the object of her quest. She was ashamed of her own smallness of soul that she could harbor this dislike. After all, rollicking old Mrs. Sturgeon had intentionally done her no harm.

But the future was a black cloud of promise. With her set smile and holding back the annoying tears by pure will power, she approached the great billowing satin figure which quite filled a corner of the small room. She noticed that the figure was seated. It was not for a full minute, however, that she noticed anything else. Then Olive gasped.

Mrs. Sturgeon, with a rueful smile, held out a great bandaged foot. "Sprained it five minutes back! Isn't it tough? Where's that good-looking parent of yours?"

"At home. Oh, I must telephone him. He'll feel——"

"Heartbroken? Well, if he's got any human feeling in him, he'll sit beside me an hour or so and try to help me bear up under disappointment!" The speaker grimaced and seemed to be bearing her misfortune with good nature.

"Oh, I'm sure he will," declared Olive, and made her way to a phone.

"Wait," commanded Mrs. Sturgeon. The full old face moved so that its gaze could cover the small room. Most of the women present were intent on the mirror. It was done unperceived.

She winked at Olive.

* * * *

Marcus came, his suave, kindly self, both feet capable in patent pumps. No, he didn't mind looking on, so he blandly told his daughter. But his daughter had listened lightly. She had had a private moment with a chuckling old woman.

"Don't you ever tell a soul. Laura'd throw it up to me. But it came to me that at the head of the grand march I'd look like a truck, and your father might see the resemblance. So I decided to desert, without giving folks a chance to laugh at me. Oh, yes, I know I'm sort of funny in some respects. Laura says so. I don't care much. Anyway, I've certainly enjoyed getting acquainted with your father. Never expected my sixtieth year was going to hold such a tidbit of friendship. You know, my daughter Laura is afraid I'm going to marry him. If she's my own daughter, she's a fool, I have to say. She couldn't understand in a thousand years that men like him couldn't be dragged to the altar, hardly by Helen of Troy. I told Laura I was no Helen—she didn't know what I meant; thought I was speaking about a second cousin of ours who studied domestic science. No—an old woman has had a little fling and enjoyed it, and all she asks is to keep it in pleasant memory."

The rollicking laugh was low, but thorough. Olive gasped, also low, under the cover of the orchestral march. Marcus was agreeing to act as one judge for the awarding of a prize to the best costume. He had smiled cordially at Judge Skelly's choice. Cary and little Jane were in line. The latter had been trying for ten minutes to catch the eye of Marcus; but that individual, though cordially assenting to the judge's list, was already thinking of his next day's journey, and had forgotten little Jane; so presently in self-defense she turned her attention to the son.

Mrs. Sturgeon, banked on a divan, with her bandaged foot occasionally wriggling in absent mindedness, chuckled at Olive's gasp. "I bet you thought—well, I guess you didn't think I might be the thousandth woman. Yes—nine hundred and ninety-nine are pretty dumb things. Haven't got foresight or hindsight. Can't see the difference between a fillip and a full dish. My, I'm going to enjoy you and your husband! If you take care of my affairs and cash you'll always have to ask me for one or two dinners while your father visits you! Won't you?"

"O, yes," agreed Olive, with laughter. Across the room her laughing eyes met Milton's grave gaze. The air cleared—like magic, like something unseen. Olive was all right, and he saw that Olive was all right, and therefore he became all right.

All right—but it was a state of affairs that had nothing to do with income, or the lack of income. For the two words, one small and the other not large, are the pass words between a husband and a wife. Their meaning is harmonious love.

To herself said Olive Destinn Billock, "Believe me, nothing like this will ever happen again! I won't let it! Dear Milton, what a darling dumbbell he is!"

And she sighed a little and realized that she was only one of the nine hundred and ninety-nine, and half envied Amelia Sturgeon, who had neither beauty nor youth nor love but a large understanding, which in measure made her akin to such rare and careless souls as Marcus Destinn.

Frogtown Camp Found In Repose As Athletes Rest From Training

Old Man Turtle, coach of the Frogtown athletes, decided that his pupils needed some rest after the strenuous training they went through last week. Therefore today we find the frogs "taking it easy" in front of their tents. Davy Dragonfly, air mail pilot, is just arriving, and all the campers are eagerly receiving their letters.

Old Man Turtle, who is an industrious soul, is taking advantage of the lull in camp activities to read some heavy literature, but a couple of the younger frogs, not content to rest, are busily engaged in a game of "catch." And, thinks Old Man Turtle, if they are overtrained for the great track meet, it will be their own fault.

SHORT STORY, JR.

The Story of Lover's Leap

The hikers emerged from the needle carpet of the old Indian Trail to find an open space that ended in a flat table rock extending over the valley below. The boys dropped their kits, and, as twilight fell, they built a roaring fire on the rock and made coffee and roasted steak.

As they sat in a circle on the great rock, munching buns and pickles, Frank leaned out over the edge and peered below. "There is a road down there!" he exclaimed. "You can hardly see it in the dark."

"When the moon comes up you can see it plainly," replied the hiking leader. "And then you will hear the voice of a dead Indian maiden calling to the spirit of her Indian bridegroom."

The boys shivered, and Frank drew back cautiously, as if he were afraid of slipping over the precipice. "Tell us about it," they begged.

"There was once an Indian brave," began the leader, "who lived here in this country. He wished to marry the daughter of the chief of the tribe. The old chief said he might marry his daughter only on the condition that the youth would rid the nation of the enemy chief who sent warriors to rob and murder the people here. So the Indian lad stole to the neighboring nation and killed the chief. The followers of the dead man were too cowardly to make war on the people here, but they pledged themselves to vengeance, and a band of them took refuge in these woods to await an opportunity at the young man's life.

"One evening as the Indian princess was walking here in the twilight, she spied the band of enemies making for the pass at the end of the trail below. She knew her lover would soon be passing on the road and would be met by the band and killed. It was two miles around by the road and she would not have time to catch him and warn him. So she crept to the edge of the rock here and waited in the moonlight. She spied the enemies creeping into the mouth of the pass. In a few minutes she saw the Indian boy come down the path below."

"What did she do?" whispered the boys.

"She leaped from the rock, and fell those hundreds of feet, and with her dying breath, warned her bridegroom that his enemies waited for him!"

"Do you suppose it's true?" asked Frank in an awed voice.

"Listen!" replied the story-teller. Up in the valley swept the wind, and from the rocks opposite came a piercing cry. Then there was a deeper cry as the wind rushed out again.

"It is the scream of the Indian maiden, they say, and her Indian brave answering."

"Then it must be true," declared the boys, with round eyes.

Behead twice "to be in fear of" and get a revolt; behead again and get help.

Why Not?

Jimmie giggled when the teacher read the story of the man who swam the Tiber three times before breakfast.

"You do not doubt that a trained swimmer could do that, do you?"

"No, sir," answer Jimmie, "but I wonder why he did not make it four and get back to the side where his clothes were."

POSERS!

Boys and girls who like to test their knowledge can find a lot of fun in this set of posers. Imagine that these questions were asked of you in an examination—what would your grade be? You ought to answer five or six to pass. Let's see what kind of a grade you would make.

1. What recent British premier was once a Welsh coal miner?
2. What early American was killed in a duel with Aaron Burr?
3. Who wrote "Vanity Fair?"
4. How many sheets of paper are there in a quire?
5. What is the largest city on the continent of Europe?
6. What is the alimentary canal?
7. Who was Mars?
8. What city is the capital of Austria?

What's the Matter?

Answer will be found elsewhere in this section.

Is Your Letter Printed On These Two "Letter Writers' Club' Pages?

THE LETTER V

WANANISH, N. C.

Hello Pals: What are you doing for a fine time? I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall and weigh 100 pounds. Here is a little poem I have made for you.

"MY MOTHER."

I.
My mother she can make butter, cheese and cream;
Cook preserves and sew a seam.

II.
My mother she can hang paper and milk;
Design and make a dress of silk.

III.
My mother she can embroider and darn a sock;
She can make new my old frock.

IV.
My mother she can grow flowers, sell them, too;
She can embroider a baby's shoe.

V.
My mother she can play piano or trim a hat;
Make a speech or nurse a cat.

Oh, I forgot to tell you what grade I was promoted to. It is the sixth. All you boys and girls write to me.

Your friend,
RUTH TODD.

BEAUFORT, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here I come again. I am a girl 16 years old. I have light brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall. How are you enjoying vacation? I am having a very good time swimming, reading, etc. Boys and girls write to me and I will answer all letters received because I like to write to boys and girls all over the U. S. A.

Your pal,
THELMA E. PAHE.

GREENVILLE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here comes another Georgia girl to join your happy band. I am 11 years old, have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, lots of freckles, weigh 91 pounds, am and am 4 feet, 11 inches tall. Write to me.

Your friend,
JANIE C. TODD.

MT. WILLING, ALA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I read The Atlanta Constitution every Sunday and enjoy reading your letters, so how would you like to have another Alabama girl join your club? I am 14 years old, am 4 feet, 8 inches tall, weigh about 100 pounds, have dark brown hair, brown eyes, and light complexion. I have white sound teeth. I am in the sixth grade. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. We have a Christian Endeavor society meeting every Sunday evening at four o'clock. It is only for young folks. Believe me, we are going to have some fun. We have already given one ice cream supper and are going to have another one. We will be glad to have any of you come. My mother will be dead three years September 25. Father has kept us together and raised us up to be smart children. I have a sister three years older than I; a brother 10 years old; a sister 6 years old and a baby brother who was only six weeks old when mama died and is now 3 years old. I hope to hear from some of you boys and girls. I will answer all letters I receive.

Your unknown friend,
DORIS JORDAN.

MANSFIELD, GA.

Dear Girls and Boys: Will you let a little Georgia girl in your happy circle? I am a new writer. I am a little girl 4 years old, have brown eyes and brown hair. I am a blonde. I have a little puppy named Belle for a pet. I have one little brother two years old. I have no sisters. Daddy and mother are both living. Please write to me.

DULUTH, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have written the letter writers' club once, but I suppose it is no harm to write again. I have been going to a daily vacation Bible school. I sure did enjoy going. Our aim was:

Drive the nail aright,
Hit it on the head;
Strike with all your might,
While the iron is red.
If you've work to do,
Do it with a will.
They who reach the top,
First must climb the hill.
Standing at the foot,
Gazing at the sky;
How can you get up
If you never try?

We also learned the books and all the parts of the Bible. I am 13 years old. My birthday is August 21. Have I a twin? All you boys and girls write to me and I will gladly answer all letters received.

Your friend,
JIM BELLE WARBINGTON.

WASHINGTON, GA.

Hello Writers and Poets: Will you please let another Walker county kid enter your club? I have fair complexion, grey eyes, auburn hair, am 5 feet, 4 inches tall, weigh 140 pounds and have some freckles. That's me, so picture me as you like. My age is close to 12. Guess if you can. The sports I like are basketball, football, baseball, swimming and car riding. Who of you have ever had the experience of going through an operation? I have, and it's not a very pleasant experience, you bet. I went to the hospital on May 25 and stayed three weeks. How many of you drive a flivver? I sure can't but I sure would like to. To tell the truth, I've never driven anything except a mule. I go to Oak Grove school and am in the eighth grade. Just think, I'll be a freshman next term. I am most through school. My yearly average was 97 7-13's—a pity they wouldn't count it as 98. Well, I'll write again some time. All of you write to me. I'll answer them all.

Always a friend.
LOUISE BAILEY.
Route 1.

MORGAN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading your section for some time and it is so interesting. I would like to join your club, if you please. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, weigh 96 pounds, have brown eyes, brown hair (French bobbed), and am a brunette. I go to Morgan high school and will be a freshman when school begins again. I live in the country and have a fine time. Which of the funnies do you like best? I like Winnie Winkle, Gasoline Alley and The Gumps best of all and sure am glad that Uncle Walt and Phyliss got married, aren't you? I am 14 years old and my birthday is March 10. Who is my twin? Write to me and send me your picture. All of you write and I will sure answer.

Your unknown friend,
LYTT RAGAN.

TEMPLE, GA.

Hello There Club Members: I haven't seen you in a long time. I wrote a letter a little while ago but I reckon it must have been lost. I am 5 feet tall, have black hair (bobbed), grey eyes and fair complexion. My birthday is November 20. I am 12 years old and promoted to the seventh grade in school. I sure did have a sweet teacher last year, but I don't guess she is coming back next year. My favorite comics are Winnie Winkle, Orphan Annie, Moon Mullins and Gasoline Alley. We girls in school play baseball most of the time, but our school is out now. I read and write for my pastime. What do you do for pastime? We run a dairy at Temple, Ga. Everybody between 12 and 14 write to me, for I like to get letters as well as any one, I guess.

Your friend,
RUBY WALLIS.

COLQUITT, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I have black hair, dark eyes, fair complexion, weigh 110 pounds and my birthday is October 28. I will be 16 years old. Well, all you boys and girls write to a Georgia boy and I will answer all letters.

W. W. RICHARDSON.
Motor Route 8, Box 55.

TAMPA, FLA.

Dear Unknown Friends: Will you let a Florida boy join your club? I lived in Macon, Ga., 9 years, but moved to Tampa in the past three years. I like to go in bathing in Florida. I also go hunting and fishing. I like Florida but can't go back on old Georgia. I am 12 years old, weigh 70 pounds, and am 4 feet, 9 inches tall. I am in the seventh grade. Here is a poem I wrote about

FLORIDA.

When the birds are gay,
And the Florida moss is gray,
When springtime is here—
'Tis the best time of the year.

When the leaves are new
And the violets are blue;
When the robbins are here,
'Tis the best time of year.

When the sunset is red
And the butterflies spread,
When the flowers are here,
'Tis the best time of year.

All of you write to me and send your photo. I will write back.

BOYS AND GIRLS STORY SECTION

This Cat Likes Goldfish

Patricia Elizabeth McOwen, of Salt Lake City, Utah, is the proud owner of a black and white Angora cat. Puss, as he is named, is a very unusual cat because he will jump on the window sill where the goldfish are kept, dip his paws into the water and never try to hurt the little fish. When Patricia goes out of doors skating, Puss will lay down on the sidewalk in front of her. He knows she will not harm him in any way. The cat always folds in his claws when he plays with her, so he cannot scratch her. Patricia tells us that she delights in "showing off" Puss to her friends. A clever playfellow like this is well worth showing off.

Why Beg for a Whipping?

Emmaline King, of Springfield, Mass., has a toy Pomeranian for a pet. The dog's two front paws are tan in color and the rest of her body is black. In the evening when Emmeline goes to get the paper, the dog goes with her and carries it back to the house in her mouth. If she does something which is not right, she will roll over on the floor two or three times and Emmeline says that this is the way she shows that she deserves a whipping.

Meet Brent's Fox Terrier.

Brent Robinson, of Ogden, Utah, has a little fox terrier. He say that his dog is one of the very best of its kind. It can sit up, beg for its dinner, and do all the tricks which "ordinary" dogs can do. At twelve o'clock, when Brent comes home from school for lunch, the dog will scratch on the door until Brent's mother lets him out so that he can race down the street to meet Brent. Brent says that he supposes everybody's dog does much the same thing, but he is sure that his little pet is better than "just a dog."

Almost every boy and girl has a pet. We want to hear about yours, and so do the other readers of the My Pet column.

If you have a dog or a cat or some other pet, take a few minutes and write to the "My Pet Editor," in care of this newspaper. Tell about the tricks he does, and anything else of interest to readers. If your letter is a good one, we'll publish an account of your pet in this column.

"Airplane Jump" Is Good Party Stunt

Some of the stunts used in initiations make very good party pastimes. One of the best of these is the one "A Jump from an Airplane."

Blindfold the subject. Procure a table leaf and rest it on the flat side of two books on the floor. Guide the subject to the table leaf and have him step up on the board and stand perfectly still. Tell him that he is now to take a ride high in the air.

Two accomplices now step into the game. Each one grasps an end of the table leaf firmly and at a signal from the third person, slowly raise the board several inches from the books, rocking it slightly. The third person, who stands in front of the blindfolded subject, stoops down slowly, saying, "You're going up—higher—higher—higher," to cause the subject to believe he is rising high in the air.

Then, at the command "Jump!" from the person stooping close to the floor, the subject prepares to take a big leap, and is greatly surprised to find that he is but a few inches from the floor. His funny facial expression on landing after the jump will give rise to great deal of laughter.

First American Magazine Issued In Great Britain

Today, when there are hundreds of short story magazines in America, it seems strange to realize that the first American short story magazine was published in London. But such is really the case.

The first volume of this periodical, issued in 1840, contained 460 pages bearing some fifty tales and a number of "popular sketches." It republished almost every bit of noteworthy short fiction that had been written in America before 1840, with the exception of stories written by Washington Irving, who was held to be European rather than American in his manner of writing.

This publication, which was issued when the stort story was very new as a form of writing, had a great influence on the development of that type of literature in America.

Corinne's Clever Trick Can Be Used For All Numbers

"I can tell you what number you're thinking of without any trouble at all," announced Corinne Simmons to her brother Sam one evening after eating.

"All right," said Sam promptly, "what number am I thinking of?" Sam was always ready to have some fun with his sister.

"Oh that isn't what I mean," laughed Corinne. "You see, you've got to do certain things first."

"Oh, I've got to do something? Well, what is it—jump in the river?"

"Think of a number." Corinne was getting down to business.

"Odd or even?"

"Doesn't make any difference—either will do. I'm a real mind reader, I'll let you know."

"I've got one—what now?"

"Double it and add six."

"No sooner said than done—what next, my dear?"

"Divide what you have by two and multiply the dividend by four."

Sam worked a minute or so on this, but was soon ready for the next step.

"And now what have you?" asked Corinne.

"Who wants to know? Am I supposed to tell you?"

"Why, certainly," answered Corinne, that's part of the game."

"Oh, well, all right then—I've got fifty-six."

Corinne knitted her brows for a few seconds and then, with a little pride she anounced, "Your number was eleven."

Sam looked mystified at this and his only comment was, "Huh, how'd you do it?"

Corinne then explained that she had taken fifty-six, divided it by two, subtracted six and divided what remained by two which left eleven—the original number.

Her system will work with any figure. See if it won't.

Not a Candidate

An Italian, having applied for American citizenship, was being examined in the naturalization court.

"Who is president of the United States?"

"Mr. Colidge."

"Who is vice president?"

"Mr. Daw."

"Could you be president?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Mister, you 'scue me, please; I vera busy worka da mine."

A young man who had lots of gumption
Among cannibals had the presumption
To go—but alack,
He never came back;
They say 'twas a case of consumption.

Try Reducing Pills

Angry girl, to druggist: "This vanishing cream is a fake."

Druggist: "How come?"

Furious female: "I've used it on my nose every night for two weeks, and it's just as long as it ever was."

Time Will Tell

He: "I worked on that problem till five o'clock this morning."

Teacher: "Did you finally get the idea?"

He: "Yes, it began to dawn on me."

Fortunate

Senior: "My brother fell against the piano and hit his head."

Junior: "Hurt him much?"

Senior: "No, he hit the soft pedal."

Confidence

Miss S: "I told you to bring a note-book to class."

A. L.: "I don't need one; I use my head."

Miss S: "I didn't say a blank note-book."

Baby's Complexion

"Madam, what is the complexion of your new baby, dark or fair?"

"To tell you the truth, he is a little yeller."

The Price of Existence

Old Hen: "I'll give you a piece of good advice."

Young Hen: "What is it?"

Old Hen: "An egg a day keeps the ax away."

Head of the Class

"Stan," explained the teacher, "means the place of! Afghanistan is the place of the Afghans—where they are located, you see. Hindustan is the place of the Hindoos. Can any one give me another example? How about you, James?"

"Umbrellastan," suggested James promptly, "the place for umbrellas."

A Mouthful

Mary had a little lamb,
You've heard this tale before:
But have you heard she passed her plate
And had a little more?

The Retort Irascible

Mike (buried in cave-in): "Blazes, man, be careful how you handle that shovel. You hit my leg twice."

Pat: "Say, if you can do this any better, come up here and dig yourself out."

Caught

She: "I'll bet I know where you go your tie."

He: "I'll bet my last cent you don't."

She: "Around your neck, you dumbbell."

Caught Again

Paul: "Oh, say, I pulled off something big last night."

Clarence: "What was it?"

Paul: "My shoes."

The BOYS and GIRLS PAGE

Puckerbush was agog. A most fashionable brown rabbit had come to town. He brought five trunks and a Jap red squirrel valet. He stopped at the Palace hotel where four of the largest rooms were reserved for him.

Rufus Q. Fiddelton was his name, but it was whispered about that it was not his real name. Johnny Wattels had said that Mr. Quid had said that Mr. Hoggelgog had told him that Mr. Fiddelton's Jap valet had told the Greek rabbit that owned the candy store that Mr. Fiddelton was a duke in disguise.

How much truth there was in all this no one could tell, but anyhow Mr.

Looked like a rabbit duke.

Fiddelton certainly looked like a rabbit duke. He wore lavender colored shirts with his monogram embroidered in olive green over the heart. He changed his clothes several times a day and spent much of his time standing in front of the hotel, so the citizens of Puckerbush had a good chance to admire him.

The polecat porter of the hotel reported that Mr. Fiddelton tipped him a dollar for shining his shoes and the young weasel, who waited on table, found a dollar bill in the duke's water glass after each meal.

Mr. Fiddelton wore so many diamonds he had to hire a couple of woodchucks to guard him when he went out for a walk.

"Not that I'm afraid of robbers," he told the woodchucks, "but I don't like to be annoyed by them."

In a short time Mr. Fiddelton began to make friends. He met Mr. Slig and told him how much he resembled the famous opossum who had won the battle of Snickerlick.

"You have the same fine soldierly look about you," he told Mr. Slig.

Met Miss Woppelgop.

Mr. Slig invited Mr. Fiddelton out to dinner where he told Mrs. Slig she was the handsomest woman he had ever seen. Mrs. Slig believed him and became his warmest friend.

Mr. Fiddelton spread kind words about as thick as fig jam on a layer cake and in a short time he was calling everybody in Puckerbush by their first name.

He met Miss Woppelgop quite by accident. She happened to drop her handkerchief in front of the hotel where Mr. Fiddelton was standing. He picked it up and handed it to her in such a charming way she felt he ought to be rewarded for his kindness, so she invited him out to dinner.

He let Mr. Woppelgop beat him at checkers and told Mrs. Woppelgop she was just the image of the beautiful queen of Standupson.

Mr. Nickeldick was the only animal in Puckerbush that failed to like Mr Fiddelton. Mr. Nickeldick had met the brown rabbit, and he disliked him at once.

"Uses too much perfumery and says too many nice things," Mr. Nickeldick said to himself, so he kept away from the supposed duke and everybody in Puckerbush thought Mr. Nickeldick was jealous.

It leaked out some way that Mr Fiddelton was the owner of wonderfully rich gold mines. It was said that he had more money than he could spend. Once he gave a blind opossum a hundred dollar bill and every time he visited the Sligs' house he gave each of the Slig children a ten dollar gold piece.

Mr. Slig and Mr. Fiddelton were much together, and Mr. Fiddelton took

Gave a blind opossum a hundred dollar bill

his diner almost every evening at the Slig's house.

"Mr. Slig," Mr. Fiddelton said one evening, "I want to do something for you. You have been so kind to me while I have been in Puckerbush."

"Don't mention it, don't mention it," answered Mr. Slig. "I am glad to be of service to you."

"Mr. Slig," continued Mr. Fiddelton, "I own a great many gold mines and the income from them is more than I care to use. Every now and then I sell a few shares to my particular friends so they can enjoy some of my good fortune, but you have been so good to me I am going to give you a few shares and I hope you will think kindly of me when you collect your dividends."

Mr. Fiddelton pulled an important looking paper out of his pocket and handed it to Mr. Slig. Mr. Slig put on his glasses and started at the paper. His eyes nearly popped out of his head when he saw that it was made out in his name for one hundred shares in the Fiddelton Gold Mining company. Mr. Slig broke down and cried, Mrs. Slig cried and all the little Sligs cried.

"You'll never be sorry for this," sobbed Mr. Slig.

"I don't believe I will," smiled Mr.

Cracked his savings bank.

Fiddelton and he slipped silently out of the house, leaving the family to weep alone.

Next day every animal in Puckerbush knew of Mr. Slig's good fortune and Mr. Fiddelton was more popular than ever.

At the end of a week Mr. Slig received dividends of over a hundred dollars and many of the citizens of Puckerbush begged Mr. Fiddelton to sell them some of the stock.

"I don't like to sell to a few and not give the rest of my friends a chance to share my good fortune," he told them, so he decided to let each citizen of the town buy as much as he could afford.

Almost everybody in town scraped up all the money he could get and took advantage of the kind offer. Mr Skittel pawned his carpenter tools, the Woppelgops sold their house and put it into the mining stock, and Mr. Hoggelgog cracked open his savings bank with a hammer in order to buy some of the valuable stock.

By the end of the week Mr. Fiddelton had all the money in town and a few hours later he was called away by a telegram.

No one has seen him since, nor have they seen the dividends they expected to get. It was fully a week later that the animals of Puckerbush discovered they had been swindled. Mr. Nickeldick smiled a little when he heard the news, for he was the only one in town who had not invested in the mining stock. He went home, took out his little red book and set down these words:

"All that glitters is not gold,
All's not paying stock that's sold."

Irving An Author, Not Business Man

Washington Irving was a great writer, but he was by no means a business man, and nobody realized that fact better than did Irving himself.

At one time Sir Walter Scott offered him an editorship. Irving's reply shows that he knew his mind was not of the type adapted to running a business of any kind.

"My whole course of life," he wrote, "has been desultory, and I am unfitted for any periodically recurring task, or any stipulated labor of body or mind. I have no command of my talents such as they are, and have to watch the varyings of my mind as I would a weathercock. Practice and training may bring me more into rule; but at present I am as useless for regular service as one of my own country Indians."

As this was written in the early years of the nineteenth century when the American Indians were absolute savages, Irving's comparison is very expressive of his lack of executive ability. At another time, while he was traveling for pleasure in England, his brother, who conducted a business there, was taken ill, and Irving was forced for a time to manage his affairs. According to Irving himself, these were among the most unpleasant and hardest months of his whole life.

A man cannot hope to be good in all lines. Washington Irving's line was literature and not business. He could no more do the work of a business man than a business man could have written "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" or "Rip Van Winkle."

Waters Part At The Great Divide

The Great Divide is the name applied to that section of North America where the waters of the continent part to flow to either the Atlantic or the Pacific ocean. All rivers east of the divide eventually feed the Atlantic, while those west pour into the Pacific.

While this name was formerly applied to a larger territory, it has now come to mean the region in Montana and Wyoming where so many of the large rivers in this country have their sources.

The Great Divide possesses almost all the characteristics of a continent, such as variation in temperature and vegetation. It is the natural geographical center of North America.

READING THE DICTIONARY

A friend once called upon a famous writer and was much amazed to find him reading the dictionary! In answer to his surprised question, this famous author told his friend that he made a regular practice of reading it.

The dictionary is probably one of the most neglected books in the English language. Perhaps you think that it would be pretty dry reading, but if a great writer, an expert in the use of words, can afford to spend his time in this way, how much more can each of us.

The world always admires the person who is a master of words. Without the ability to express them properly, a man's great ideas lose half their power. You probably will not care to actually read the dictionary, but make a practice of consulting it regularly. Go to it and "look up" any word that you come across, the meaning of which you do not know. This habit, combined with that of reading good books, will soon increase your vocabulary in a remarkable way.

GROWTH OF U. S. CAME THROUGH CESSIONS, SALES

From the days when the United States consisted of just thirteen states along the Atlantic seaboard to the present time, six important additions have been made to the nation's territory. On Independence Day this year the stars and stripes waved over almost two and a half billion acres.

The modest beginning of the nation was established in 1783, when at the end of the Revolutionary war, Great Britain ceded the new country the land within the boundaries of the thirteen original colonies. At the same time she ceded the northwest territory, including all the land westward to the Mississippi.

In 1803 a great addition was made, for the Louisiana territory was purchased from France for 15 million dollars. This extended the boundaries of the nation to the Rocky Mountains, and the land was later made into nine full states and parts of four others.

In 1819 Florida was purchased from Spain. The cost was five million dollars, which seems unbelievable when compared with the prices of comparatively small pieces of that state during the last year. Texas was annexed in 1845, and a short time later this state received 10 million dollars for surrendering her claims to what is now the state of New Mexico, that territory becoming part of the United States.

By the Oregon settlement with Great Britain, the treaty for which was signed in 1846, the nation was extended to the north shore of the Pacific ocean. This land was then made into three full states and parts of two others.

In 1848 Mexico ceded the United States what is now California and part of New Mexico, and was paid 15 million dollars for it.

The Gadsden purchase from Mexico in 1853 brought the country, for 10 million dollars, the southern ends of Arizona and New Mexico, a total of about 30,000,000 acres of land.
